FLQ Kidnapper Caught

Sniper Wounds Soviet Soldier

BERLIN (AP) — A Russian guarding a Soviet monument in West Berlin was wounded early today by shots fired at him and a comrade, a British spokesman said.

The spokesman said two or three shots were fired about 1:15 a.m.

The soldier, wounded in the arm and left side, was taken by a British military ambulance to East Berlin, the spokesman said.

The incident occurred a few hours before Red Army units were to parade before the memorial in honor of the 53rd anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

The official East German news agency, in a brief dispatch that called the incident "an unheard-of provocation," said officials did not know who fired the shots.

SLOGANS PAINTED

"Prelude against Bolshevism" and "Destroy the Red corruption" were smeared in red and white paint in a park rest area several hundred yards from the monument. A painted arrow pointed in the direction of the memorial through the park woods. The paint appeared to be fresh.

Police said leaflets found in the park called for "resistance against selling out Germany." The leaflets were signed by the "European Liberation Front," police said.

Officials in the Soviet embassy in East Berlin lodged a "decisive protest with the British military administration in West Berlin and demanded the necessary measures for the immediate discovery and serious punishment of the criminals," the agency said.

The memorial to Russian soldiers in The Second World War is in the British sector just inside West Berlin, near the Brandenburg gate.

Its guard contingent is 18 men who have a barrack just behind the monument. Two soldiers stand guard 24 hours a day.

AMERICANS BOYCOTT SOVIET ANNIVERSARY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Protesting Russian detention of two United States generals in Soviet Armenia, Washington officials are boycotting this year's Soviet national anniversary celebrations, and the order is reported to have come from President Nixon.

The diplomatic snub means American ambassadors are staying away from the caviar-and-vodka parties given by the Soviets in many capitals to mark the 53rd anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, though they may send lower-ranking U.S. diplomats if they choose.

Coupled with U.S. tit-for-tat expulsion of a Soviet news correspondent Friday, the snub marks a further deterioration of relations between the two powers.

Hospital Strikers To Let Nurses In

The International Union of Operating Engineers has instructed members striking two Victoria and nine Lower Mainland hospitals Monday not to interfere with anything directly affecting patients.

All service vehicles except fuel trucks will be permitted through the picket lines and hospital employees and nurses have been told the striking engineers will not impede their access to and from hospitals.

"They are to go in and do their jobs," Bob Berger, business manager of the International Union of Operating Engineers, said Friday. "All we've requested is that hospital employees perform their own work and don't do ours."

OPTIMISTIC

Berger expressed optimism that a settlement will be reached between the union and the British Columbia Hospitals Association in time to avert imposition of compulsory arbitration under Bill 33, as Labor Minister Peterson has threatened.

He said the hospitals have enough fuel on hand to run their powerhouses for about five days. The powerhouses provide steam for heat, laundry purposes, kitchens and sterilization.

Asked what the union would do if the strike continued long enough to exhaust fuel supplies, he replied:

"I'm anticipating that we will not be out that long, but a lot depends on other people in other places."

MONDAY MORNING

He said the powerhouses at the 11 hospitals will be turned over Monday morning to the chief engineers. They are management personnel.

APPEAL AT 62.3%

The United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal campaign finished November's first week $264,465 short of its goal of $701,314.

At noon Friday, the campaign had reached 62.3 per cent of its goal with total donations of $436,849.

Appeal officials are confident that returns from industrial, business, professional and other divisions will show large gains in the next two weeks.

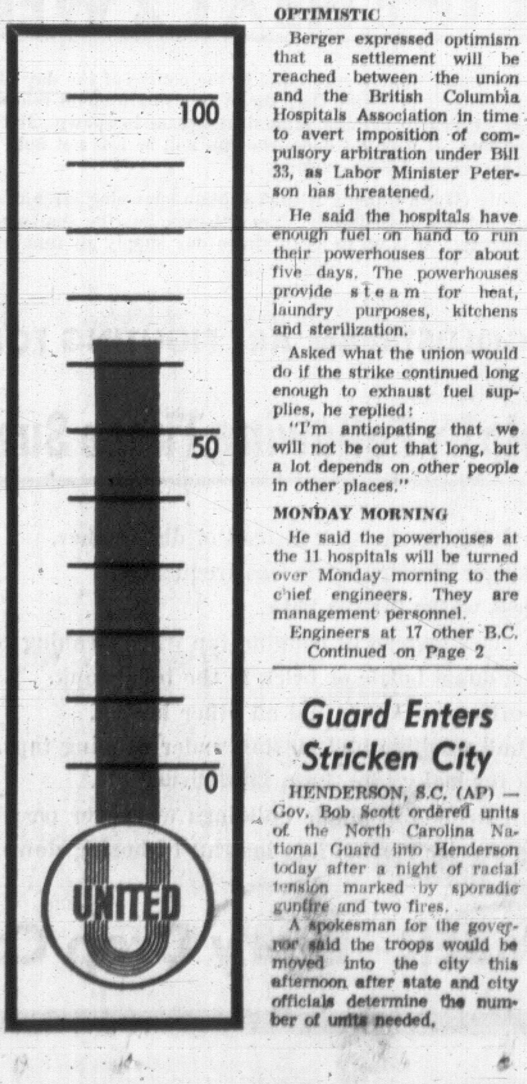
Several division chairmen told an Appeal staff meeting this week that many canvassers are still to report.

Community Chest information officer Mrs. Judy Nyquist said Friday that Appeal staff thanks everyone who has donated to the campaign so far.

She said individuals who were missed during the successful residential canvass Oct. 19 who wish to donate should call the Community Chest.

A division chairman, she said, would give special treatment to these callers by personally picking up their donations.

She said the extension of the campaign into November is customary and does not yet indicate the drive is in danger of falling to reach its goal.



Guard Enters Stricken City

HENDERSON, S.C. (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott ordered units of the North Carolina National Guard into Henderson today after a night of racial tension marked by sporadic gunfire and two fires.

A spokesman for the governor said the troops would be moved into the city this afternoon after state and city officials determine the number of units needed.

'We Grabbed Laporte'

MONTREAL (CP) — Bernard Lortie, 19-year-old student arrested Friday, testified today at an inquest into the kidnap death of Pierre Laporte that he and three other men took part in the abduction of the Quebec labor minister Oct. 10.

Lortie said the other three were Francis Simard and brothers Paul Rose and Jacques Rose, all of whom have been named in warrants by police.

Lortie said the four had been thinking and talking about kidnapping someone and decided on Laporte.

The inquest adjourned briefly until the afternoon without Lortie having testified regarding the slaying except to say he was not at the scene on the fatal night.

He said the 49-year-old Quebec labor minister made a desperate attempt to escape the day before he was slain.

The witness said they picked up the labor minister from in front of his suburban home, using a 1967 model Chevrolet in which Laporte's body was eventually found Oct. 18.

He said Jacques Rose drove the car and the abductors were armed with M-1 automatic rifles. Three such rifles were introduced in evidence at the inquest.

On their way to the Laporte house in suburban St. Lambert they stopped at a restaurant and telephoned the Laporte residence. Jacques Rose phoned and Lortie said Jacques was told that Laporte had just stepped out.

"Paul got out with the M-1 and pushed Laporte into the car," Lortie said.

★ ★ ★

They then drove along Tiffin Road and Taschereau Boulevard to St. Hubert to a house on Armstrong Street. They drove into the garage.

They had previously opened a hole in the wall between the garage and the house.

"We watched Laporte in three shifts around the clock."

Lortie said he does not recall everything that happened. He said Laporte cut himself while trying to escape.

He broke the lower half of a window and had the upper part of his body through it when the abductors pounced on him and dragged him back.

Lortie said he made bandages by ripping a towel into strips.

Lortie mentioned that among other things Laporte lost about "half a quart" of blood from the cuts.

Earlier, evidence was given that Laporte was cut on the left wrist, at the base of the right thumb and the upper right chest.

Photographs of Laporte's body showing these wounds were shown to newspaper men at the inquest. Clearly visible on Laporte's neck were the marks caused by the medallion chain used to strangle him.

The wounds on Laporte's wrist, thumb and chest were irregular gashes such as one might suffer in breaking a window.

Lortie, of medium height with wavy brown hair and dark brown eyes, seemed a person of intense disposition as he gave his evidence.

He identified clothing worn by Laporte at the time of the kidnapping.

He said that a Laporte letter was written by the late minister himself.

Before being sworn in he replied in the negative when asked by Prosecutor Jacques Ducros whether he wanted the services of a lawyer.

FAMILY OF JAMES CROSS LEAVES FOR EUROPE

MONTREAL (CP) — The wife and daughter of kidnapped British diplomat James Jasper Cross have left Montreal to visit family friends in Europe, the British government office here announced today.

"Mrs. Cross has decided to make a short visit to close friends of the family in Europe, and left Montreal yesterday (Friday) for this purpose accompanied by her daughter Susan, a brief statement said.

"She continues to await anxiously the results of all the efforts being made to find her husband, and will be kept in the closest touch with all developments.

"Mrs. Cross wishes it at the same time to be known how very grateful she is for all the letters and telegrams she has received, and which are greatly helping to sustain her during this period of waiting."

The letter makes no reference to Cross.

There is a crudely printed note on the back of the photograph, which immediately after receipt was wrapped in plastic to preserve any fingerprints.

The photograph is similar to one received Wednesday by the Montreal weekly tabloid Quebec-Presse.

. . . KIDNAPPER CAUGHT

He said he was making the statement "freely and voluntarily." He was picked up by police Friday night, questioned and made a statement to them.

A warrant was issued Oct. 23 for Lortie, Jacques Rose, 23, and Simard, 23. They were sought for conspiracy in the kidnapping of Laporte.

On Oct. 18, a few hours after the body of the cabinet minister was discovered in a car trunk near the St. Hubert airport, warrants were issued for Paul Rose, 27, and Marc Carbonneau, 37.

The two were wanted for the kidnapping of Laporte and James Jasper Cross, 49-year-old British trade commissioner forced at gunpoint from his Montreal home Oct. 5. Authorities believe Cross may still be alive.

A preliminary coroner's report earlier said the cuts were inflicted at least two hours before Laporte was strangled.

Lortie, when the inquest was adjourned, had not referred specifically to the death of Laporte.

He did say he left the St. Hubert hideout on Armstrong street about 6:30 p.m. Friday night Oct. 16, on the eve of the slaying, took a bus to a subway station and rode on the subway to the place where he stayed until he was picked up Friday.

He said he did not know Carbonneau, the fifth man named by police on kidnap warrants, but had heard of him.

Laporte had in his pockets some credit cards, his identity card as a member of the Quebec National Assembly and about $60 in cash.

At the time of the kidnapping, Jacques Rose was wearing a grey wig, Francis Simard a false moustache and Paul Rose a blonde wig.

Lortie said he was wearing a military cap, with a piece of cloth — two eyeholes cut in it — tucked under the cap as a mask.

Lortie said Laporte removed the shirt he was wearing, white with green stripes, because it became bloodstained but he did not specify when. The kidnappers gave him a grey sweater and that became part of his death clothing.

Lortie said Paul Rose left the Armstrong street hideout Wednesday, Oct. 14, and "knew that he had been followed by police."

Lortie eventually went to meet him. He said Paul Rose was clean-shaven and neatly groomed when he met him the night of Oct. 16.

The witness said he departed the St. Hubert hideout that evening and went by bus and subway to meet Paul Rose at a place near radio station CJMS in east-end Montreal.

He said he told Rose what had happened at the hideout — the escape attempt, apparently — and Rose gave him an address where he could stay. Lortie declined to reveal the address at the inquest, but said he stayed there 10 days.

After that, he went to a place on Queen Mary Road, in west end Montreal, where he said he stayed with three persons — Colette Therrien, Richard Therrien and Francine Delisle. They were not otherwise identified. That is where Lortie was arrested.

Answering questions, Lortie said he was a member of the Chenier cell of the Front de Liberation du Quebec. Aim of the cell was to support the Liberation cell which had kidnapped Cross, and to help obtain the release of 23 "political prisoners" — one of the ransom demands rejected by authorities.

Asked whether his companions were FLQ members, Lortie replied:

"To my knowledge, yes."

Lortie testified that two automatic rifles used in the kidnapping had been bought shortly before at an army surplus store which he said was located at 900 Notre Dame Street West in Montreal.

. . . HOSPITAL STRIKE

hospitals also have voted to strike but they are not being taken off the job at this time because they are in more sensitive positions, Berger said. If they were called out it might force compulsory arbitration.

The dispute revolves around two issues—pay parity and the length of the work week. Berger said the union is prepared to submit the pay issue to arbitration, as recommended by a government mediator, but the hospitals are not.

The union has rejected a proposal to submit the work-week issue to arbitration, claiming that its 137 members shouldn't have to arbitrate a benefit already given to 13,000 other hospital workers. The engineers are on a 40-hour week, but other employees and nurses, now working 38¾ hours a week, go to a 37½-hour week Jan. 1.

New Labor Head Against Bill 33

VANCOUVER (CP)—Continuation of a policy of "total opposition" to the British Columbia government's compulsory labor legislation is pledged by the new president of the B.C. Federation of Labor.

The new president is George Johnston, 53, who was elected Friday by acclamation as successor to E. T. Staley, who had declined to run for a seventh term as leader of the 151,000-member federation.

Mr. Johnston, 53, a long-time officer of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters' Union, said in a post-acclamation interview:

"The federation's policy of total opposition to the provincial government's compulsory labor legislation and the present three-man set-up of the B.C. mediation commission will continue.

"There can be no change in our policy. Our executive officers were re-elected by acclamation. This, I think, was an endorsement of our past policies and a show of solidarity."

Mr. Johnston and the six other federation executives were elected for two-year terms—a first in the federation's history. Previously, terms were for one year only.

Ray Haynes, again elected secretary-treasurer, said it was the first time he had ever taken the post unopposed.

"I guess the convention must be in favor of what we are doing," he said.

Outgoing president Staley, 53, of the Carpenters' Union, said the biggest problems he faced during his administration involved the many confrontations with the provincial government.

"They've always caused us more problems than the management, especially with their compulsory labor legislation," he said.

ROBBER PUTS BITE ON MANAGER

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Bruce Bennet, an auto shop manager, told police a dog acting on command bit him, when he refused to give $50 to the dog's owner.

Once he handed over the money, the owner ordered the dog to let go and both fled.

Bennett was treated at Central Emergency Hospital.

War Act Replacement Vote Held Off

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons has held off until next week the final vote on the government's bill to replace regulations under the War Measures Act, with promises from New Democrat and Conservative MPs to propose changes designed to protect civil liberties.

In debate Friday, members of all opposition parties took issue with specific clauses in the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, which was approved at second reading 152 to 1 the day before.

Earlier in the Commons, Prime Minister Trudeau said the government was doing "a great deal of things" to fight unemployment and would do more "if they are needed and if we have the money."

In reply to Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, Mr. Trudeau cited past policies against unemployment, including funds for housing, payments to provinces and expansion of the money supply.

The Commons was also told the government has started approving perpetual leases in national parks "as an interim measure."

Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien, in reply to Pat Mahoney (L—Calgary South), said the government has not decided what to do with about 750 perpetual leases not renewed under the new policy.

COURT MAKE RULING

It has been parks policy since 1958 to convert perpetual leases to 42-year agreements. But the Supreme Court of Canada ruled recently that the government must honor the original perpetual leases.

Most of Friday was used for debate on the public order bill, now in committee stage, which precedes third and final reading.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) and Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) said the bill required safeguards against abuse of civil liberties by police and prosecutors.

But Gilbert Rondeau (Creditiste—Shefford) urged beefing up the penalties under the legislation, calling the government "too soft, too complacent" in its treatment of Quebec terrorists.

Those convicted of using or promoting force or crime to pursue the aims of the Front de Liberation du Quebec should receive life in prison, rather than the maximum five years provided in the bil, Mr. Rondeau said.

The bil would continue but limit the government's powers assumed in the regulations under the War Measures Act proclaimed Oct. 16 to combat the FLQ.

Under the bill, charges would have to be placed within seven days rather than the 21 permitted under the regulations.

CITES RIGHTS

The explicit right to legal counsel and a stricter definition of membership or support of the FLQ would be other innovations.

Mr. Woolliams said the bill contained a retroactive clause that was "contrary to any kind of jurisprudence."

A person would be vulnerable to imprisonment for acts committed before the bill becomes law, he said.

Section eight of the bill says that evidence that a person who, "before or after the coming into force of this act," attended a number of meetings of the FLQ, publicly spoke in support of the FLQ or communicated statements on its behalf "is, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, proof that he is a member of the unlawful association."

To prevent abuses of this and other clauses, Mr. Woolliams said the Conservatives would propose an amendment having the cabinet appoint an administrator to oversee application of the law.

The administrator, who could be a judge of the Quebec Superior Court, would report to Parliament.

He would have the power to change or nullify orders—permitted under the bill—from the Quebec attorney-general keeping persons in jail until trial without bail, and in jail without charge up to seven days.

He would also have the authority to fix a trial date.

Mr. Brewin said his party would propose establishment of a three-member commission to interview detainees, and ensure their access to counsel and the legality of their detention.

He said the party would also propose an amendment removing retroactive evidence from the bill.

The change would restrict the prosecution to evidence of acts committed after Oct 16, when the War Measures Act was invoked and many alleged FLQ members were jailed.

It did not create an offence antedating the bill itself, he said.

Rather, it permitted police to present previous behavior as circumstantial evidence that a person was actually—and was still—an FLQ supporter.

DENIES CHARGES

He also denied opposition charges that the bill would force a defendant to prove his innocence.

"The burden of proof remains upon the Crown," he said.

Ed Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby) suggested that the government could achieve its goals be merely extending its powers of search.

"The first step should be to extend the search without warrant," Mr. Broadbent said.

It would then be up to the government to prove it needed more powers.

NDP support of the bill would "depend on the flexibility of the government" in accepting opposition suggestions, he said.

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) said the opposition was "trying to satisfy the feelings of Canadians" by proposing the changes.

On the government side of the House, Pierre De Bane (L—Matane) urged changes safeguarding goods seized in raids. And he said wives should not be punished for protecting their husbands.

Theogene Ricard (PC—St. Hyacinthe) said MPs had voted for the War Measures regulations on faith, and now the government should heed opposition amendments.

SAVE THE FISH In Goldstream!

Let Us Show What Our City Can Do in This Crisis

There is acute concern over the shortage of water in the reservoir, and much debating whether or not some of it should be used to help bring the salmon back to their spawning ground in Goldstream. It is pointed out that at the rate water is generally used in this area, a critical shortage could result if this is done.

Through this advertisement the Victoria Fish and Game Club, Federation of B.C. Naturalists, University of Victoria Outdoors Club, Oak Bay High School SFER and other interested people appeal to residents of Greater Victoria to increase their efforts to SAVE WATER IN EVERY WAY POSSIBLE.

Householders and All Concerned Are Urged to
FOR THE NEXT 2 WEEKS!

The water saved by every man, woman and child in the course of the day (DURING THE NEXT TWO WEEKS), plus the amount of water that the Water Board could release, would build up the 5,000,000 gallons per day needed to get the salmon upstream to spawn. If this is done, the cycle of fish spawning will continue. If it is not done, the run will be lost not only for this year, but for three and four years hence. It is THAT serious.

Victoria is perhaps the only city in Canada with a salmon spawning stream at its own front door. We can lose this if we do not act immediately. Never before has the spawning season been threatened by such a water shortage. It is up to us to share our supply so that nature's cycle will not be broken!

THE FISH AT GOLDSTREAM ARE FIGHTING FOR SURVIVAL!

You can Help by Following These Suggestions:

- Wash dishes in the sink instead of dishwasher.
- Run larger laundry loads less frequently.
- Run less water for the bath.
- Use a glass instead of running tap when cleaning teeth.
- Place a quart bottle or brick in the toilet tank.
- Hold off car washing and all other hosing.
- Avoid all washing and rinsing under running taps.
- Check for leaky taps, keep taps turned off.
- Cut off urinals in public buildings whenever possible.
- Sweep service station lots instead of hosing down.

REPORT FROM THE LEGISLATURE

Bargain Fees Aid Labor Drive Inside NDP

By BRUCE YEMEN

The fate of the B.C. New Democratic Party, caught in an internal power struggle over the party's labor ties, may have been decided by a few moments of confusion at the NDP convention in Chilliwack in June.

In those few moments the delegates voted by solid majority to remove the party's annual membership fee and replace it with a floating scale — in effect, a pay-what-you-will fee.

Almost as soon as the decision was taken, party leader Dave Barrett and other supporters leaped to the microphone to urge a reconsideration. They said the delegates had acted hastily, without full discussion of the issue.

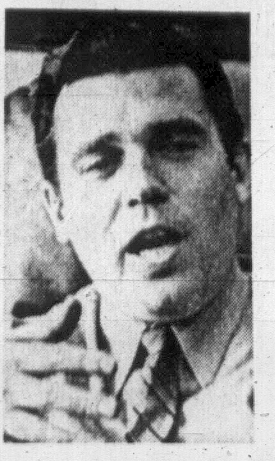
After a few brief but intense speeches on the subject, the convention came within a handful of votes of "reconsidering" its decision by the needed two-thirds majority.

What caused the wild fluctuation in delegates' votes was more than just a sudden awareness of the financial implications of a membership fee which could be as low as one cent.

There was also a sudden awareness in some quarters that ambitious elements could sign up enough bargain-basement members to capture every local constituecy association in the province.

The unspoken fear was that hard-core labor elements would be not only the most likely to make use of such strategy, but also in the best position to make it work with mass union member sign-ups.

The no-set-fee was defended by a number of non-labor people on the grounds that it was the most democratic way — it doesn't discriminate against the poor and the aged, for instance, who might have a better use for the $5 fee or whatever new charge was to be set.



BARRETT

Recently, the fears of anti-B.C. Federation of Labor forces have been fired by the avowed determination of the powerful labor body to encourage unionists to "participate" in the party and "to play a full part in the determination of policies and selection of candidates for elected office."

Those words, from the political education committee of the federation, shouldn't alarm the anti-feds too much, but these words might:

"Increased participation and affiliations can provide an opportunity to change policies or personnel opposed to the legitimate interests of the trade union movement."

Does Barrett interpret those words as an indirect challenge to his leadership?

He didn't quite get around the question Friday when he said his leadship of the party "is always on the line."

★ ★ ★

If the B.C. labor federation follows through on its political action campaign, Barrett's leadership could be more than usually on the line, perhaps before the next provincial election.

There is a dilemma for Barrett and the party executive, which has majority sympathy for his view that organized labor shouldn't dominate the party.

If they move to seek a return to a set membership fee, they could be charged with attempting to restrict access to the party that claims to represent all the people.

Barrett could also then be accused of hypocrisy in his stated view that more union members should participate in the party by becoming full, individual members rather than being associated with the party through affiliation of their union locals.

Some obervers feel Barrett was making an indirect call for help Friday when he urged three major unions which are outside the federation to support the New Democratic Party.

The unions in question are the Teamsters, the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada and the United Fishermen and Allied Workers, none of which would likely have any tendency to support a federation effort to control the party.

But Barrett may simply have been emphasizing his position that the NDP should represent all working men, organized and unorganized, B.C. federation members and non-members.

One of his main points has been that the party shouldn't get involved in inter-union squabbles. It would be ironic if he were reduced to calling in non-federation troops to promote an inter-union squabble within the party.

It would be even more ironic if the forces of organized labor actually succeeded in "capturing" the party by packing local nominating conventions and dumping MLAs.

First of all, that trick works best if it is carried off in relative secrecy so the element of surprise is a factor. It would hardly surprise Barrett.

Secondly, as a lot of Social Credit Party members must sense when they look out at their own nominating meetings that could fit into a phone booth, the most vulnerable party for capture by secret convention-packers is the Social Credit party.

Unlike the NDP, it makes no effort to have a mass membership. It gets by quite nicely with a faithful few.

★ ★ ★

All of which raises the perennial irony of political life: party politics makes democracy work, more or less, but party politics itself has yet to demonstrate a great tolerance for internal democracy.

As Dave Barrett struggles to control his own party, as any good leader should, he may not have much time to ponder those philosophical aspects.

Computer Condemns Committees

TORONTO (CP) — A legislature committee proposed Friday to cut the number of committees in half because a computer proved the present system does not work.

Glen Hodgson (PC—Haliburton), chairman of the standing committee on orders and proceedings, told the committee the present system cannot be repaired.

Mr. Hodgson took the problem to the department of highways computer.

The computer was fed the number of members available for committees (92 of the 117-member house because some members, such as the 22 ministers, do not sit on committees), the number of committees, the number of members on each committee, the number of committee meetings needed and the number of hours available.

"The answer came out that the present system is completely unworkable," Mr. Hodgson said.

Missing Mailbags Found In Montreal Truck Depot

OTTAWA (CP) — The case of the 140 bags of mail missing in Montreal has been solved.

They were discovered, the post office said Friday, in two surplus trucks hauled out of storage and recalled to service.

A press release said Jean-Pierre Cote, minister responsible for the post office, regretted "this unfortunate incident" and wanted to make a "very frank revelation" of the incident as quickly as possible.

The mail bags, containing mostly second and third-class items, were lost at the height of the disruptions in postal service that occurred across Canada, but especially in Montreal, several months ago.

"The misplaced mail was discovered when a need for additional vehicles arose and those in storage were examined prior to servicing," said the post office release.

The mail will be delivered along with letters of apology from Deputy Postmaster-General P. A. Faguy.

Committee Approves Condominium Scheme

Victoria council's finance committee has approved a $40,000 offer for about two acres of land north of Spencer Castle to make way for 112 condominium suites.

Port Alberni Developers Danzo and Franco plan to build three buildings on the rocky area north of the castle ground they already own and on the two newly-purchased acres.

The plan replaces a proposal made earlier this year to build on the south side, where adjacent single-family residents voiced opposition and prevented construction.

If council approves, the developers will be locked into a special development permit that guarantees construction on the precise plans of the proposal.

Failure to comply with the permit will cause the land to revert to its current single family residential zoning.

STRATA TITLES

Two of the buildings will be four storeys, containing 35 suites each. The third will lie on the lower area, five storeys high and containing 42 suites.

Suites will cost between $25,000 and $30,000, and will be purchased in accordance with strata titles legislation.

All parking will be underground and the buildings will not project above the treeline on the higher castle ground to the south.

In a letter to the finance committee recommending sale of the city-owned land, city manager Dennis Young said the "fairly low per square foot cost" of a $40,000 sale would be preferable to allowing normal subdivision with its high cost of services.

". . . at the same time consideration should not be lost of the high cost of developing what it, in fact, an area of solid rock."

A public hearing is expected to be held Nov. 26.

Why 'Permanent'?

IT WOULD BE A DEPLORABLE —indeed a tragic—thing if the Commons debate on the unprecedented peacetime legislation to replace regulations of the War Measures Act were to continue on the level of Thursday's introduction. This is much too important and repercussive a bill to have its substance obscured in parliamentary politicking or partisan point-scoring while it becomes law. Mr. Douglas and some of his followers were exaggerated in their reaction; Justice Minister Turner was equally out of line in referring to their criticism as "hysterical voices, shrieking voices."

The bill in effect cancels out public and personal safeguards that were won through centuries of effort and reform: such as freedom from arrest without a warrant, the right to bail, freedom from search without a warrant. And it carries the significant words: "It is hereby declared that this act shall operate notwithstanding the Canadian Bill of Rights."

Admittedly the effects of the bill are focused, in that the FLQ is specifically mentioned as an illegal organization and the measures are principally directed against that group. But the provisions of the act are not so restricted: they apply to "any group" that advocates the use of force or crime as a means of accomplishing the same governmental change advocated by the FLQ. The act is further widened by the power given to police to search premises on suspicion, and to seize persons on suspicion that they are doing wrong or suspicion that they "are about to commit an act" that is wrong.

Admittedly, too, the bill is restricted in some particulars—a limitation on the period during which a person may be held without the usual processes of law, and a set termination date—April 30, 1971. But already Prime Minister Trudeau has referred to the need "to consider the question of permanent legislation with regulations somewhat stronger than those under the Criminal Code and somewhat weaker than those under the War Measures Act . . ."

Justice Minister Turner saw such a piece of permanent legislation as emerging only after study by parliament's standing committee on justice and legal affairs. And this, he implied, would be a lengthy process. But, significantly, he saw it as a problem of time rather than of substance—the idea of permanent legislation which would place far-reaching powers in the hands of the police appeared to him, as to Mr. Trudeau, to be a feasible and necessary measure for the times in which we live.

It is that growing concept in many quarters today, rather than the immediate fact of emergency legislation, which poses the fundamental danger to our liberties and should be arousing concern among the public. There is no dire plot by our elected leaders to grab dictatorial power in their own hands and fasten chains on the public. But on the basis of the current threats they see to the maintenance of law and order and public security, they are turning to legal machinery which will meet such threats. In the process they are tampering with still more delicate machinery which was designed and preserved — through blood, sweat and tears — to provide its own protection against the dangers threatened by such elements as the murderous FLQ extremists.

"Permanent" suspension of any part of the Bill of Rights, which itself has hardly yet settled into the national consciousness, would be a backward step, and one which no threat now current in this country appears terrible enough to justify.

Fishing for an Answer

JOHN MIKA'S OTTAWA REport to this newspaper following the recent Canadian-Soviet fisheries discussions outlined clearly the problems facing this country in its harvest of the sea. Canadians, and United States fisheries experts too, want to claim ownership of the salmon spawned in North American river systems. They have a sound argument for this attitude. Over the years Canadians and Americans have spent substantial sums to help the salmon spawn and have adopted some conservation measures to preserve the species.

But salmon, freely swimming the sea, show no recognition of their North American identity. They don't all stay in their own backyard as it is now defined. And Canadians and Americans cannot enforce legal controls over foreign fishing fleets operating outside North American fisheries jurisdictions because no legal mechanism — with one exception — exists to establish such control.

The exception is the abstention clause written into the North Pacific salmon pact signed by Canada, the United States and Japan in the early post-war years. That clause excludes Japan from salmon fisheries east of the 175th meridian. The prohibition remains effective pending possible drafting of a new international North Pacific pact. Japan, restored in strength from its earlier post-war weakness, has made no secret of its unwillingness to accept the abstention principle in any future international pact covering North Pacific fisheries.

It has been widely argued that all nations capable now, or in the future, of sending big fishing fleets across the Pacific to areas off our shores should combine in an international agreement on conservation practices. That is basic. If the salmon and other species are fished to extinction, everybody loses.

While high-seas conservation measures will undoubtedly be discussed at the next convention on the Law of the Sea, prospects of success for a Canadian-sponsored move to ban all fishing on the high seas are remote. Greater hope resides in adoption of the policy of several coastal South American countries. They have pushed their claimed fisheries limits out 200 miles from their shores — a doctrine which dovetails with Canada's present proposal to seek jurisdiction to the edge of the continental shelf. The action would produce severe friction in some quarters. But it is a fait accompli off South America — and a precedent for any Canadian move.

Shelling Out For Peanuts

IN CONTRAST TO THE PRICE paid to Britain for the new Oberon class submarines on the Atlantic, the cost of the Rainbow, bought second-hand from the United States for the Pacific Coast base, appears modest. But when Rear-Admiral Richard Leir calls the price of the latter "peanuts," he overlooks the issue which is causing concern here and elsewhere in Canada.

Public anxiety is not so much over the purchase price as it is over the discrepancy of $550,000 between estimates and actuality for the refit of the vessel. The increase is about 25 per cent and a difference of that amount is not "peanuts" in anybody's vocabulary.

Canadians are understandably a shade dyspeptic over the tax dollars that went out for the refit of the Bonaventure, before it was sold as junk. When they are told of the escalating costs of work on the Rainbow, their condition is not improved.

Just what kind of creature are the taxpayers feeding peanuts to this time? One of the kind, which, like the taxpayer, never forgets?

Esquimalt Achievement

Earlier this month I attended a superbly organized teach-in on the present ecological crises at the Esquimalt Secondary School. The faculty and students had planned a number of panels on such subjects as salt water conservation, local transport, sewage disposal, land development and government's responsibility in these areas.

The panel members were experts in their fields. The penetrating questions put to the panelists and the interest and enthusiasm of the large student body reaffirmed my faith in the coming generation.

We are incessantly being made aware of youthful misdemeanors and told of the failures of our educational system: I had expected that this evidence of concern for the future would be headlined on Page One. I daily went through your paper for a report and then hoped that it was being held for highlighting in a weekend edition. Hence my delay in writing.

I suggest that your readers, and especially those in Esquimalt, would be heartened by a feature story on this event of strong topical interest.—George M. Canetta, 11020 Chalet.

FROM NEW YORK

By JAMES RESTON

1972 Democratic Hopes Rise From Nixon's Campaign

THE main thing about the 1970 American election is what it means for the Presidential election of 1972. All this noisy scuffling over the last few weeks was merely spring practice for the opening of the battle for the White House two years from now. This week's votes will not really do very much to change the crime rate, as the Republicans argued, or the inflation and unemployment rates, as the Democrats argued, but they could easily determine who sits in the White House after the presidential election of 1972.

Reston

The question, therefore, is whether the vote in the 1970 elections has helped or hindered President Nixon's objective of establishing a new Republican conservative majority which will assure his re-election as President in 1972.

The guess here is that it has not. Success or failure in congressional elections does not decide the outcome of presidential elections. The mathematics of the Congress may not be as important as the philosophy of the nation.

In this election the philosophical change may prove to have been much more important than the mathematical change in the House, the Senate and the state capitals.

To understand the philosophy of this election, it is necessary to go back to Nixon's victory in the presidential election of 1968. He was a minority president—a fact he has never forgotten. He won with only 43 per cent of the total vote, and in the first year of his presidency, he set out to create a new majority including the progressives and anti-war elements of both parties.

Something Happened

During this first year, he was talking "consensus politics," arguing for negotiation rather then confrontation, at home and abroad, urging everybody to lower their voices and go forward together, and think about "the quality of life." And then something happened—even his closest associates are not quite sure what it was.

The liberal press did not really believe he was trying to get out of Vietnam. Neither did the liberals in the Senate. They rejected his nominations of Judges Haynsworth and Carswell to the Supreme Court, and beat him on the Senate vote. And then he turned back to power politics, unleashed Vice-President Agnew, and launched the most vigorous ideological campaign of any president of this century.

The effect of all this on the congressional elections, the margin between Republicans and Democrats in the House and Senate is not really the main thing. By going back to party and ideological politics, he has revived all the old doubts about his political and personal prejudices, restored all his old battles with the press, infuriated the progressive Republicans, and raised the kind of credibility gap that destroyed President Johnson.

Some day we may understand what happened between the president's first effort to compromise with his opponents and his later decision to attack and oppose them, but in the process, he has clearly created a new problem.

Infuriated Progressives

First, by taking the partisan and ideological offensive in this election, he has infuriated, not only the Democratic party, but the Republican progressives. Second, he has brought John V. Lindsay, the mayor of New York, into open opposition against him. And put Senator Muskie on stage as his most likely opponent. And third, he has fought so hard, raised such questions about the purpose and even honor of his opponents, that he has almost managed to bring the divided, insolvent, and confused Democratic party back from the grave.

In terms of the 1970 election and the next Congress, the president and the vice-president can find arguments to prove that the election returns justify all their exertions, but in terms of the 1972 election, which was their main objective, they have probably blundered much more seriously than is generally realized.

Personal Problem

This has always been one of Nixon's major problems. He has always thought he could deal with the immediate problem before him — fight a savage election, romanticize the democratic process, proclaim the virtues of unity, define the noble principles — but never mind if one day's speech is violated by the next day's action.

The result of this election, accordingly, is not in the balance of the House and the Senate, or in the State Houses, but in the balance of feeling within the parties and within the country. When this election of 1970 started, the Democrats were in despair; they felt they had no chance in 1972 to regain the White House, but after the savage Nixon-Agnew campaign of the last few weeks, they are beginning to hope again.

By WILLIAM R. FRYE

Glimmers of Light Amid the World's Encircling Gloom

IT is a rare occasion when, looking around the international horizon, one can see glimmers of light in several places at once — as rare, perhaps, as an aurora borealis seen from a temperate zone. This past week, there was a trend toward moderation and progress, or at least a decline in violence, in half a dozen significant trouble spots around the globe. One or all of these encouraging developments may have changed when these words are printed; but as of the time of writing:

Frye

- Casualties in Vietnam were at or near their lowest ebb in years, reflecting a general decline in the pace of the war.
- The cease-fire in the Middle East was still sticking, and there was mounting pressure in the UN for a resumption of Arab-Israeli peace talks.
- The United States and the Soviet Union had sat down, once again, in Helsinki for strategic arms limitation talks (SALT). The atmosphere was again encouragingly cordial and businesslike.
- Berlin, so long a critical great-power battleground, seemed at least to be heading toward possible accord.

Nor were all the shafts of light playing on arenas for cold-war rivalry.

- There was Northern Ireland, where a moderate, reform-minded prime minister was retaining his grip on power despite repeated challenges from extremists. And across the border, in the Republic of Ireland, much the same was happening.

Cooling Ireland

Both sides of the scrappy Irish nation seemed to be keeping their cool.

In the realm of outer space, the Soviet Union and the United States had agreed to take the first tentative steps toward co-operation. They had agreed to study mutually compatible rendezvous and docking systems, so that each could eventually rescue the other's astronauts in trouble.

And even in troubled South Africa, though it was hardly decisive in the over-all picture, the governing Nationalist Party, author of the world's most blatant racism, had once again lost electoral support to the less extreme white opposition — not much support, certainly not enough to endanger its hold on power; but some.

Taken together with an earlier setback for the Nationalists in April, and a resounding defeat of the far-right lunatic fringe, it could mean the beginnings of an awakening in White South Africa.

No doubt much of this encouragement would be wiped away, with a brutal shock, some cold Monday morning. But for the moment, it was a pleasant dream.

Possibly the single most significant note of progress was to be found in the emergence of responsible (or less irresponsible) talk and attitudes on the Middle East.

A blatantly pro-Arab manoeuvre in the UN General Assembly, designed to pressure Israel but likely, in practice, to derail all hope of early peace negotiations, ran into surprisingly strong resistance.

In order to get a majority, Afro-Asian sponsors had to backtrack and direct some of their pressure toward the Arabs as well as to Israel. They had to call for a three-month extension of the cease-fire as well as a return to the UN peace table.

The latter plea (for resumption of negotiations) was, to be sure, directed at Israel's boycott of the talks rather than at Egypt's missile buildup, which prompted it. But the former appeal (for extension of the cease-fire) represented leverage on Cairo.

If Egypt would, under this formula, agree not to resume its "war of attrition," Israel would be asked to end the boycott. Each would be called upon to make the move without the preconditions it had sought to impose.

Dissatisfied Israelis

The Israelis were not at all satisfied that this was even-handed justice. They very much wanted a rollback of the Egyptian missiles. But it was a lot closer to even-handedness than most observers thought the UN would get when, at Arab instance, it plunged this week into public debate on the Mideast problem.

Moreover, with the UN getting partial results, there should be another three months of valuable quiet along the Suez front. The Mideast can use many more such cooling-off periods; they represent major steps forward, and indeed are probably essential if there is to be any progress toward a final settlement.

Elsewhere on the international horizon, there were storm centres and low-pressure areas. Inauguration of a Marxist president in Chile is not a promising omen for Latins. Canada is tormented by civil dissidence. The Palestinian Arabs, though winning wide international recognition, are still a source of upheaval.

No one would contend that universal peace is on the point of breaking out. But there are so few periods when good news on the world scene is visible at all that a week which offers several favorable developments is well worth noting — at least as a bold-face footnote on the pages of contemporary history.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

In recent days many people have gone out to Goldstream Park to see the annual run of coho salmon back to their spawning beds.

Owing to the drastic shortage of water in the lakes and reservoirs very little has been available to give enough flow to enable the fish to get into the stream.

To permit the water board to let sufficient water downstream, all users of water have been asked to save and conserve all possible. Then, and then only, will it be possible for the fish to return and so perpetuate their species. Otherwise it will mean that three years from now there will be no fish, for this species lives in a three-year cycle.

It is not only fish that will be deprived of life, but many other creatures that inhabit the stream, such as larvae of the caddisfly, stone fly, may fly, the tiny little shrimp-like animals as well as crayfish.

All of these are a part of the great food chain that enables not only the fish to live but, by the long process, man himself.

There are others dependent upon the stream, such as the little dipper, the belted kingfisher and the big blue heron.

Loss of the run would also mean a change in the habits of the gulls and the ravens which come each fall to fulfil their part in scavaging, for they feed on the dead bodies of the spawned salmon.

The lowering of the water in the stream would also threaten survival of a great many of last year's spawn caught in drying pools without food brought down by the flowing water.

Those who wander along the trails should remember that there are other things to see. The colors of the leaves on the ground make such a fantastic carpet that one is almost afraid to walk and disturb it. Each short distance sees a change of pattern.

The lichens as well are fresh because they can get their moisture from the early morning mist and from the evaporating of water from the stream.

On the red alders and the hazel nut trees the catkins are growing and swelling, preparing for a new generation to come. All these things are a part of the environment of the stream and we can save it for the future generations if we want to.

Around some of the old, dead trees are several species of the bracket fungi. These are breaking down and rebuilding for the future.

By the edge of the forest to the north, Niagara Creek, when in full flood, has made several channels on its way down to the river. Each is a jumble of rocks and boulders formed by the waters over generations and generations. Most of them are now covered with mosses.

For the Press, a Time to Be Disciplined, Humble

By RICHARD HARWOOD

WASHINGTON — Walter Lippmann told a story many years ago about an island in the ocean where, in 1914, a few Englishmen, Frenchmen and Germans lived as friends. There were no telephones or radios to the mainland, only a mail boat that arrived every 60 days.

In September of that year, the islanders gathered at the dock to welcome the boat, to get the latest news. It was just then they learned that for six weeks, the French and British had been at war with the Germans and that for six weeks they should have been enemies rather than friends.

The "news" does that to us all the time. It changes the pictures of the world, the pictures of the other people, the pictures of ourselves, that we carry around in our heads.

Before the age of instant mass communication, these pictures came primarily from the environment itself; from the family, the tribe, the village, the land. Now, in large degree, they are acquired second-hand from what Lippmann called the "pseudo-environment" of the media.

Pseudo-reality of News

We are conditioned to choose enemies or friends, to decide whether the world is round or flat, by newspapers that arrive at dusk or breakfast time. We experience wars and riots vicariously through an electronic box in the living room. And often the pseudo-reality of this "news" becomes in our minds reality itself, affecting the way we live and think and act.

That is why Lippmann concluded that "the power (of the media) to determine each day what shall seem important and what shall be neglected is a power unlike any that has been exercised since the Pope lost his hold on the secular mind."

The question of how and by whom this power is to be exercised is an inflamed issue in the United States today and not only in the minds of Vice-President Agnew and other critics of the "eastern liberal press."

The disenchantment with the media is a mass phenomenon, as George Gallup noted some months ago. "Never in my time," he said, "has journalism of all types — book publishing, television, radio, newspapers, magazines, movies —been held in such low esteem."

One of the central reasons for this disaffection is the realization in the country that the power of which Lippmann spoke — the power to shape the "psuedo environment" and the mass mind — has fallen into the hands of a very small number of men and women.

Fewer than 1,500 companies own all the daily newspapers in the United States; three companies own the great television and radio networks. Fewer than 150,000 people — barely one-tenth of one per cent of the labor force — report and edit the "news" and even that small number exaggerates the distribution of power among the media.

The Washington Post is a case in point. Its 308 reporters, editors, artists and photographers decide for a half-million readers that shall seem important and what shall be neglected each day and beyond that, through a news service, they sell to more than 300 other newspapers the product of those decisions.

Thus, the influence of these 308 people extends, in theory at least, into millions of American homes. The news services run by the New York Times, the Associated Press, United Press International and Reuter have the same disproportionate impact. So do the radio and television networks.

The result of all this is oligopoly — the concentration in the hands of a few people of both the ownership of the media and control of what is judged to be news. They are the new popes in their influence on the secular mind in America and one of the issues confronting them now, as in the past, is what doctrine, if any, they should propagate.

Pro-capital, Anti-labor

The media have gone through three of these doctrinal controversies since World War II. The first centered on the "one-party press" issue. The charge was that media owners, with rare exceptions, were Republican in their politics, pro-capital and anti-labor in their economies, and that they shaped and twisted the news accordingly.

This charge was debated all through the 1940s and 1950s and produced a resolution of sorts — an unwritten ethic that the news should be "objective," that parties to a controversy were entitled to "equal time."

A second doctrinal dispute arose in the 1950s and continues to the present time. It involved the issue of "news management" by government and government officials. It was precipitated by the shameful performance of the media in dealing with the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy's crusade against "Communists in government" and the subsequent hysteria he created.

The media were forced by this experience to re-examine the "objectivity" ethic. Did it require them to report, uncritically, all "official" claims and charges? Or were the media obliged to become truth-seekers rather than mere recording machines? This soul-searching produced another unwritten ethic — that the news should reflect "reality" rather than official versions of reality.

Reporting "in depth" or "investigative reporting" became the journalistic ideal. Thus, if the Pentagon told you there was "light at the end of the tunnel" in Vietnam you were obliged to crawl down the tunnel to find out for yourself.

The newest doctrinal issue is just beginning to emerge. It involves "advocacy journalism" and news manipulation by the anti-establishment elements of the new culture in America. Spiro Agnew has harped on this issue for months but he did not invent it.

It arose in the streets of Chicago in 1968 during the Democratic national convention when millions of television viewers reached the judgment that the networks had abandoned "objectivity," had abandoned "in-depth reporting," and taken sides with the demonstrators against the police.

The central question is whether the 100,000 or 150,000 people in America who produce the "news" every day are functioning in 1970 as disinterested "professionals" or whether they are shaping the news to conform to their own "ideologies," passions and private visions of reality.

Hard to Accept Homilies

Put down in print that way, the question seems silly and the answer seems self-evident. The possession of a press card does not immunize people from prejudice and emotion, it does not turn them into bloodless computers, it does not guarantee that the pictures of the world they carry around in their heads are necessarily the "correct" pictures or that the "pseudo-environment" they create each day is a genuine mirror of reality.

Those are simple and unexceptional homilies. But it is hard for the media in these times to accept them or to accept the discipline and humility they imply.

There are two reasons for that. The first is that the producers of news in America — including the 308 people who produce it for the Post — have been going through the same political and cultural traumas that have shaken our society in the past 10 years.

The second reason for the decline of discipline and humility in the media has been success. Out of the workings of capitalism or social Darwinism or whatever, only the strongest elements in the news industry have survived the economic shakeouts of the past 25 years. What is left is a rich, solidly based news oligopoly with billions in revenues and no new competitors in sight.

In this situation, it was almost inevitable that the networks, the great national newspapers and the new media conglomerates should be vulnerable to the sins Sen. William Fulbright attributed to the government of the United States in the 1960s — the arrogance of power, the illusion of omniscience.

The same thing is happening in the universities, in the government, in the industrial corporations, in large institutions of every kind. Old dogmas and rules and rituals are being challenged. There are more questions than answers, more doubts than certitudes.

Our of all this and out of public dissatisfaction with institutional performance, a new period of introspection, self-analysis and perhaps even candor seems to have begun in the news industry.

At the Post and in media shops all over the country the questions that ultimately got asked in the 1940s, the 1950s and the 1960s are being asked again: "What are we doing here? Why are we doing it?"

They are the simplest questions and the hardest to answer. They can also be the beginning of the self-discipline and humility that society can properly demand of privileged institutions in the 20th century.

The Real Campus Revolutionary Is the Academic Dropout Taking Art

By RICHARD M. GUMMERE JR.

The Nation

"I'm taking a course in sculpture," Bill volunteers when we meet on College Walk. By the end of sophomore year, he's become an adept student and a varsity football wheelhorse. You'd think he'd consolidate those gains for a while. But now he has a new look — a bit insurgent, if not subversive. On his head he sports a tam-o'-shanter, at his throat a loud silk scarf.

Why sculpture? "Because it helps me cope. It gets me away from all those abstractions." Bill gestures impatiently toward a classroom building.

In an academic climate polluted with too many words, he now works with things; from lecture halls quarantined against deep feeling he escapes into a studio pervaded with it.

●

The number of such revolutionaries is growing, and they are a greater threat to the academic establishment than are those who seize buildings and rough up administrators. Quietly turning from the traditional subjects to take courses in sculpture, painting, dance, film, drama, music and writing they are changing our colleges and universities at their core — the curriculum.

"Man must learn to live esthetically or cease to be man — cease to be, that is, an animal who responds meaningfully to challenge. Everyone must some day become an artist — or a saint."

This pronouncement came last year from Eric Larrabee, provost of the State University of Buffalo. Art, he predicted, will soon replace science at the centre of higher education.

Past experience supports him: grand academic reforms occur after crises like today's, when events are heady, students wrought up, and faculty extra monkish.

The curriculum has undergone three revolutions since the universities were created 1,000 years ago.

The first was from the simple grammatical studies of the Dark Ages to the theology and argument of Mediaeval Scholasticism ("Can angels converse with men?"); the second, in the Renaissance, to that revival of ancient authors and worship of words called classicism ("How did Cicero say it?"); and the reign of analysis ("Do the data fit the hypothesis?").

At each overthrow, a radical new academic subject transformed the others. In the Middle Ages, it was logic; in the Rennaissance, ancient literature; in the 19th century, science.

By now not only has that latest intruder overrun the colleges but the social studies and humanities have even copied it. Their scholars try to be objective and cool; they try to explain things by counting them, if possible, or at least by analysing them.

But too much emphasis on counting and analysis kills. Already it has paralysed the system of higher education.

To revive it, another revolution is now brewing. Faculty and students will turn from the analysis of culture to the making of it. Scientism will give way to creativity. The new radicalizing subject will be art.

●

Though young people are eager to learn how to relate the liberal arts one to another, faculties today offer knowledge in chunks — philosophy, anthropology, astronomy, economics. They require students to take each chunk in almost complete isolation from any other chunk.

Furthermore, science has reached into all other fields and tempted scholars to overindulge in analysis.

For example, during the last two or three decades, English faculties have lionized Henry James. The complicated life and work of this fastidious expatriate can be elegantly analysed — on how many levels do James' symbols operate? Does psychology or melodrama predominate in his novels? Was his rejection of his country really a rejection of his father? Can the stylistic complexity of his later work be attributed to his dictating it? By such unromantic inquiry humanists would emulate chemists.

●

Finally, pseudo-science has aggravated the old American academic vice of continually testing and marking of students. It destroys their zest.

"Why withdraw from English 3306?" I asked a student.

"I see Bernard Shaw's plays on the reading list," he replied, "and I want to enjoy them."

"But why withdraw?"

"Oh, come on," he reproached me, "with midterms, finals and a term paper? And a mark?"

Like him, too many students turn off. They will turn on again when another subject liberates higher education. The only one now ready to do so is art.

Working with things, not words

HE WON'T TELL

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM

The sad fact of the Trudeau government, charged with saving Quebec from itself, is that it is not telling us the truth.

Anything less than the whole truth is not the truth.

We hear, day upon day, hedging hints from minister upon minister that "if we only knew the truth" we would understand.

As each day passes, the suspicion grows — and is supported by talkative cabinet ministers — that the War Measures Act was invoked for political reasons rather than fears of an insurrection.

We are told to trust the government. But the government, supported by an overwhelming majority of Canadians who have backed Ottawa's action on faith, does not trust us enough to spell out the unpleasant truth.

The government has already achieved the unlikely feat of making a minor hero out of Tommy Douglas, who recently had faded into obscurity but has now managed a final fleeting snatch of glory by standing up for those who are rightly suspicious of any "unanimous" showing of strength.

Now the Ottawa obstinance to trust those of us who have trusted it has thrust into the spotlight another unlikely hero who sums up the uneasy feelings of many of us.

He is Dalton Camp. Listen: "While the country has been driven to a condition of crisis more grave than any in our history, while opinion has been deliberately and perhaps eternally polarized, we are not being told the truth — we are not being told the truth about the government's motives, nor the truth about the dangers we are alleged to confront and are being confronted by.

"The media — particularly television — has been used to inflame opinion, but not to enlighten it — to harden prejudice and not to temper judgment — to the end that those within our parliamentary system who are obliged to doubt are condemned for their lack of patriotism and those whose intuitive judgment is to resist being stampeded by emotion and propaganda have been labelled as "bleeding hearts."

Story of Deprivation

By ART STOTT

When we were depriving our young children of the good things of life in a heartless campaign to warp the innocent, trusting natures with which they were born, we encountered the speedboat issue.

Life styles, as they call them now, had altered at Shawnigan. The small rowboat I had built with much labor and little skill was almost as obsolete as the ancient Briton's coracle. Everybody who was anybody whipped over the lake in a Peterborough with a highly-powered outboard — or even one of the new fibreglas jobs, slicker and faster.

The twins, who even as little tads had developed faith in the value of a one-two-punch argument with parents, approached me with a carefully prepared case.

"Daddy," they asked, "can we have a speedboat?" Then they got ready to make their pitch.

* * *

I beat them to it.

"Certainly," I said.

"Good," they shouted in unison, their faces lighting up. "When?"

"Whenever you can buy one," I replied.

"Swell," they said. "Can we pick it out?"

"Of course," I told them. Then came the blow. "It'll be your money. I can't afford a speedboat."

That didn't end the discussion, but it established the position which hasn't varied since. My children never learned to operate a speedboat, never became proficient water skiers. They remained in the submerged tenth and the obsolete old rowboat is still performing its obsolete old service.

* * *

The small children of that day have grown up and have small children of their own. Strange as it seems, neither has found it essential to buy a speedboat of his or her own. Crushed, I guess, by the unfeeling treatment of their father during their impressionable years of childhood.

I recall the incident as a sort of warning to authorities who seem to be getting tougher with the young generation. They should realize what irreparable psychic harm they can do to those juveniles whom Mayor Tom Campbell of Vancouver has called "the retired young who won't pay their own way." One of the twins has been so arrested in his natural development that he now has to settle for a job teaching in a university. The other has been forced to the indignity of working as a registered nurse. That's the price of deprivation.

Oh sure. They send me greetings or put through long-distance telephone calls on festive occasions, make gifts to me, carry on the charade of family affection. Of course they hate me. Who wouldn't, having been denied, at about age 12, the normal enjoyment inherent in full use of their own speedboat?

In the quiet watches of the night, as I lay sleepless for all of 10 seconds after my head has touched the pillow, I worry about the corroding effects my miserliness has had upon my children. In the broader field, I worry about the results that will show up in later life among other youngsters whose free ride is being threatened by proposals from the Union of B.C. Municipalities to tighten up on welfare for the non-paying tourists of tender years.

* * *

Why shouldn't we make this province and this community a haven for these youngsters who assert their independence from their own homes — breaking a few parental hearts in the process — and are willing to stay with us as guests?

Obviously their life style is better than ours. We've been simple-minded enough to work for what we wanted, to earn our keep and, hopefully, to lay aside a buck or two for retirement above the subsistence level.

By what right do we withhold some of our earnings from these young people who, with infinitely superior knowledge, understand that working for a living isn't everything in life? Why shouldn't we sacrifice some of our personal funds — above those we give to the organizations we support — to make it possible for the young to rise above the concerns of money-grubbing just to live? Why should we feel put-upon if they've found a higher form of existence and merely want us to pay for it?

* * *

Why shouldn't we indulge their whim to get away from home? After all, it helps to free their own parents of responsibility for keeping them when the youngsters aren't earning.

It's only a deformity of sprit that suggests to me a number of answers to those questions. They're entitled to their life style, and nothing but the blindness of advancing years lets me think that they shouldn't practice it at my expense.

Police Court

Albert Wade, 47, of 1322 Clover Ave., was a three-time loser Thursday when he tried to persuade Victoria city policeman he shouldn't be arrested and charged with impaired driving.

First Wade told the arresting constable he was a friend of the police chief and would have his job, Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre was told in provincial court Friday.

That didn't work.

Then he said he was a restaurant owner and if any police officers came into his establishment he would poison the hamburgers.

That didn't work.

And finally Wade told the officers he was a serviceman, snapped to attention and rapped off a salute.

That didn't work either.

"It's good to see a man with respect for the laws of Canada," St. Jorre said.

Prosecutor Cory Stolte told St. Jorre Wade's breathalyzer reading was .22 per cent, well above the .08 level which determines impairment under the criminal code.

Wade had pleaded guilty to the impaired driving charge, but he said he had an explanation.

He said he was taking medication which could have affected him.

He said he had been some eight blocks from home when his nose suddenly started to bleed for no reason, and pointed to obvious bloodstains on his blue shirt. While simultaneously bleeding and trying to park his car he ran into a parked vehicle, he explained.

He said he was fatigued. "I shouldn't have been driving."

The judge fined Wade $350 and prohibited him from driving except for business purposes.

Wade said he wished to apologize to the court and the policeman who arrested him. He said they were "very decent" about the incident.

Two 18-year-old Americans who pleaded guilty to shoplifting three candy bars, a can of crabmeat, a loaf of bread and some dried apricots were each fined $300.

Gail Gossage, of Hutchison, Kansas, and Walton Marshall, of Thornwood, New York, had only 12 cents in their possession at the time of the offence Thursday, Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre was told.

The two had been living on $271 in tuition fees returned to Marshall when he dropped out of the University of Kansas, court was told.

Marshall said he hoped to receive $300 by mail in a few weeks.

The two were only visitors to Canada but hoped to obtain work permits and seek status as landed immigrants, the judge was told.

"What we did was pretty much a juvenile prank," Marshall said, " . . . a very large lesson has been learned."

"I believe in treating Americans and Canadians alike," said St. Jorre, ordering the $300 fine payable forthwith with 30 days in default.

* * *

Henry Henderson, 24, serving a sentence at Wilkinson Road for impaired driving offences, was sentenced to one year when he pleaded guilty to a charge of public mischief outstanding since March 19, 1967.

At that time, court was told, he led two Toronto Metropolitan policemen to a house he said was a bootlegger's, went in with marked money and reappeared with a 12-ounce bottle of liquor.

Later, however, he turned up in court as a defence witness for the "bootlegger" and admitted he had used the marked money to pay a debt and had stolen the bottle of liquor.

St. Jorre said the man's story was like a detective novel.

* * *

Christopher Cook, 18, of 12 Boyd Street, was sentenced to nine months definite and 12 months indeterminate on two counts of breaking, entering and theft and breaking and entering with intent.

The sentences were concurrent.

* * *

Court was told he had not left the store but was in the vicinity of a doorway.

When stopped he refused to go to The Bay security office and had to be dragged there by force, and while there he grabbed a report form from the security officer, crumpled it up and thrust a lighted cigarette into the paper, court was told.

Lunn argued that he was closer to the counter where he tried on the vest than he was to the door and that he had no intention of stealing the article.

He challenged the security officer's evidence that he was arrested some eight feet from the doorway.

"Me, I'm slow," he told St. Jorre. "At school people used to call me dozy." He said he often slipped into daydreams and wandered around dazed.

"There I was standing next to the counter when this guy grabbed me."

Lunn said he refused to accompany the security officer to the office.

"I said, 'Why should I? I mean, why should I? I'm a citizen. I've got my rights'."

The Bay official then "got a bunch of guys" and forced him to to go to the office, he said. Lunn said one of them hurt him by twisting his arm.

In cross-examination, prosecutor Cory Stolte asked Lunn if he had a record for theft.

"Once when I was 16 I got picked up in Yorkville for stealing a piece of cheese worth 39 cents. I was barefoot and hungry," he said.

He also said he stole some merchandise while in Ottawa.

"That was two records. I was hung up on music at the time. I'm not hung up on music now."

St. Jorre remanded Lunn for preparation of a pre-sentence report after Stolte told court he had a letter from a doctor which said little would be accomplished by a jail sentence.

"He was logical in many ways," St. Jorre observed, but said Lunn presented himself in a "very peculiar, bizarre, odd way."

Priests Sue Prison

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Daniel and Phillip Berrigan, the brother priests imprisoned for destroying United States draft records, have filed suit against the federal prison in Danbury, Conn., for allegedly denying them the right to practise their religion.

A spokesman for the Roman Catholic priests said the suit grew out of rejection by prison officials of requests that the priests be allowed to deliver sermons in person or on tape to various congregations outside the prison

Both were convicted with others of the burning of draft records in Catonsville, Md., in May, 1968. Father Phillip Berrigan also was convicted of helping destroy draft files in Baltimore.

Would God condemn man to eternal hell?

Perhaps you've asked the question. Is God vengeful? Does He commit man to everlasting hell? If so, how can He then be loving?

In fact, the Bible clearly indicates that there is no eternally burning hell. True, sinners will perish, but there will be no endless punishing.

The Bible tells us that when Christ returns to earth, He will raise the righteous dead to life. Those living, who have claimed Him as their Lord, will be caught up with them to dwell with Him in heaven.

After 1,000 years, Christ and the saved will return to earth with the Holy City. At this time the wicked dead will be raised to life. Led by Satan, they will encircle the Holy City in an attempt to take it. But fire will fall from heaven and destroy them. THIS IS HELL-FIRE!

Once it has consumed the wicked, the fire dies. Hell is over and the earth will be cleansed from sin. (Check the Bible, Malachi 4:1-3; Jude 6 & 7; Revelation 20:7-9; 21:8.)

Fantastic? Yes, but real. This is the Bible account of what will occur. Perhaps you've wondered what the Bible has to say on this and other related topics. A special brochure with more detailed information is yours for the asking. Just complete the coupon below. No one will call on you.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Conditions were quite varied in the province overnight. Cloud was general with showers along the coast and fog and a few snowflurries in parts of the interior. Arctic air has pushed down into the north east corner of the province but is expected to recede over the weekend.

Another active Pacific system is now approaching Vancouver Island and will cross into the Pacific Northwest tonight. This will keep conditions wet and unsettled with rain along most of the coast with some spilling over into the southern interior Sunday.

Temperatures will continue much the same.

Pollution Control Study Launched at Alberni Mill

A $3.5 million treatment plant about to go into operation at MacMillan Bloedel's Port Alberni pulp mill will star in a new pollution control study by industry and the federal government.

Montreal-based T. W. Beak Consultants Ltd. has been retained by the department of energy, mines and resources to do a study on treatment of pulp mill wastes at a cost of $200,000, to be shared by the government and three pulp makers.

Research will be done at Eurocan Pulp and Paper Ltd. at Kitimat, and at Northwest Pulp and Paper Ltd., Hinton, Alta., besides MB's Port Alberni mill.

SYSTEM STARTS

MacMillan Bloedel said Friday its new effluent lagoon and aerator system was about to start up in a day or so.

The researchers will study the performance of aerating lagoons and means of improving their efficiency. MacMillan Bloedel will provide operating records, technical data and other assistance, a spokesman said.

FERTILIZER

A clarifier for water used in the pulp-making process is located near the mill in central Port Alberni's waterfront. Large diameter pipe carries the waste under the Somass River to an aerating lagoon about half a mile away on tide flats.

Part of the treatment process is the addition of commercial fertilizer to the lagoon to support bacteria which maintain oxygen in the water.

T. W. Beak said research will concern the reduction of oxygen demand of waste materials and toxicity of effluents.

Effects of various types of equipment and operating conditions will be included, and when the study is finished, results will be published by the government.

Granada Author Dead At 73 Years

Author of Granada, You Belong to My Heart and about 400 other songs, Lara died in a Mexico City hospital of a stroke.

The skinny, thin-faced Lara was Mexico's best-loved composer and his romantic songs were popular in all Spanish-speaking countries.

The Divine Skinny One, as he was called, romanced some of the most beautiful women in Mexico, including actress Maria Felix.

His paso-dobles, many of them writren in honor of famous bullfighters and such Spanish cities as Granada, Toledo and Madrid, were written before he visited Spain.

In 1965, the city of Granada gave him a house in appreciation for the song.

Bad Piano Stops Ballet

LONDON (AP) — The piano broke down Thursday night at the Royal Opera House at Covent Garden and stopped the ballet.

The incident resulted in a 15-minute interruption in the ballet Dances at a Gathering, by Jerome Robbins to Chopin music. Rudolf Nureyev was the principal dancer.

The ballet is staged without orchestra. Pianist Anthony Twiner, positioned in a box where the audience could see him, was providing the only accompaniment when a pedal broke.

An official came on stage to announce the trouble. Twiner moved to another piano hidden in the orchestra pit and the show went on.

Post May Return As Quarterly

PHILADELPHIA (AP) The Saturday Evening Post, the queen of United States magazines until heavy losses ended its publication 22 months ago, may be back on news-stands next spring as a quarterly publication.

A Curtis Publishing Co. spokesman said the first issue will come off the presses in April.

Howard W. Taylor Jr., a lawyer representing Curtis, said no decision has been reached on the new Post's size, format or price. But he said the first cover will be similar to the magazine of old, featuring a drawing by artist Norman Rockwell.

"We're looking for ways to make money," Taylor said. Price won't be as important as the amount of advertising sold."

When it folded because of a lack of ads the Post had three million subscribers, less than half of its circulation high.

Collapse Kills 3

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A shipyard gangplank collapsed, dumping about 20 workmen onto a wharf or into the Mississippi River. Three men were killed. The men fell about 20 feet. Four were admitted to a hospital with broken bones. Twelve others were held for observation, with two treated and released.

Batman to Marry

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Today is wedding day for Adam West, television's Batman, and Marcelle Lear, 29. It is the second marriage for each.

West, 41, formerly was married to Polynesian Princess Ngarau Frisbie. His bride is the former wife of John Lear, son of jet plane designer William Lear. Each has two children.

12% INTEREST
Now Offered on Sinking Fund Debentures

The Slegg Acceptance Corporation Ltd., a subsidiary of Slegg Brothers Lumber Ltd., can pay its Debenture holders this attractive rate of interest because the money derived from the sale of these Debentures is used to purchase time payment contracts and to factor accounts arising from retail sales of the parent company. Operating in this manner we can effectively reduce the overhead expense as no costs are incurred in the investment of funds. We are able to pass on the resulting savings to our Debenture holders. Economy of operation always results in higher revenues to the investor.

Interest is paid on our Debentures every quarter, giving the investor an even flow of income throughout the year.

memo to advertisers

Multiplication and fluctuation have to be the real thing for us. The Audit Bureau of Circulations keeps close tabs on our circulation audience—their auditors, their standards, their reports, and their figures.

Not a bad arrangement. At least you know for sure exactly what your advertising moneys are buying.

Counting only those willing to pay the price makes us publish a paper people will want to read—an audience interested in what you have to say about your products and services.

Be ABC-sure!

EXPORTS FROM FRANCE TO CANADA TAKE LEAP

PARIS (CP) — French exports to Canada this year are valued at $153 million, more than six times as much as the $25 million sold 15 years ago, Jean Trocme, commercial counsellor to the French ambassador to Canada, said Friday.

Furthermore, he told members of the France-Canada Chambre de Commerce, the average Canadian in 1969 bought about $7 worth of French products, as compared with the average United States citizen who bought about $4 worth of goods from France.

"Nearly all our commercial research is concentrated in Quebec," he said, "which is by far France's major client in Canada."

Last year, said Trocme, France sold about 146 million worth of produce to Canada, while Canada exported some $165 million worth of materials to France, a 42-per-cent increase over 1968.

Wilkinson Named Polymer Director

SARNIA, Ont. (CP) — F. C. Wilkinson of Vancouver, president of Wilkinson Company Ltd., a Canadian steel and metal distributor, has been appointed to the board of directors of Polymer Corp. Ltd., Sarnia.

He succeeds C. A. Massey, formerly president of Lever Brothers Ltd., Toronto, who recently retired from the Polymer which is a producer of synthetic rubber and plastics.

Advance Ends String of Losses

By ART JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets showed a modest advance this week as a moderate rally interrupted a long period of successive losses.

The Toronto Stock Exchange's industrial index, a broad indicator of market movement, advanced 1.47 points on the week to 163.61.

However, markets appeared to be settling back to a losing pattern toward the end of the week as small declines were posted on Thursday and Friday.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index was up 1.72 to 162.52.

Observers said markets moved upward during the early part of the week on speculation of a renewed drive by General Motors and United Auto Workers negotiators to settle the widespread strike.

Analysts also cited hopes of a discount rate reduction by the United States Federal Reserve Board as another factor in market strength.

Shares of four major grocery chains moved lower through the week as Dominion Stores set off a price war in Ontario by reducing prices 10 to 15 per cent.

Following the move by Dominion Tuesday, prices began to slide as Loblaws, Steinberg's and IGA Stores, controlled by Oshawa Wholesale, met the reductions.

Loblaw A was down ⅝ to $5½, Loblaw B ½ to $5⅛, Oshawa A 1¼ to $11¼, Steinberg's A 1¼ to $13½ and Dominion Stores ⅜ to $10.

On index at Toronto, golds were up .36 to 178.65 and western oils 2.53 to 182.42. Base metals were down 1.46 to 94.01.

Volume was 8.06 million shares, down from 9.53 million last week.

Losses outnumbered gains 395 to 350 with 243 issues unchanged.

At the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, combined volume was 5.14 million shares, down from 5.99 million last week.

Gov't Bank Balances Decrease

OTTAWA (CP) — Government bank balances decreased by $73 million in the week to Wednesday night, reflecting continued pressure to buy up U.S. currency and resist large gains in the exchange value of the Canadian dollar.

Weekly statistics issued Thursday night by the Bank of Canada show a federal bank balance of $382 million, down from $455 million a month earlier.

In other developments on the Canadian money market, average rate on three-month government treasury bills auctioned Thursday dropped to 4.97 from 5.01 a week earlier.

The six-month bill rate dropped to 5.10 from 5.14 the week before.

Average yield on long-term government bonds fell to 7.91 from 7.94 in the previous week.

House of Stein

House of Stein Electronics Ltd. reports an increase in net earnings for its fiscal year ended July 31, to $382,720 or 47 cents a share from $327,795 or 40 cents a share last year.

Ker, Priestman, Keenan & Associates Ltd.

H. G. Harris, P. Eng.

A. A. Day, P. Eng.

W. Allen Ker, P. Eng., President of Ker, Priestman, Keenan & Associates Ltd., is pleased to announce a further expansion of the consulting engineering services offered by the firm by the addition to the staff of Mr. Harris and Mr. Day.

Hugh Harris, B. Eng., D.I.C., M. Sc., P. Eng., takes over responsibility for the Fraser Valley Branch office at Abbotsford. After graduating in civil engineering from McGill University he gained experience in environmental engineering in eastern Canada before obtaining his Master of Science degree at London University, England. He specalizes in engineering hydrology, with particular emphasis on underground sources of supply, and before joining Ker, Priestman, Keenan & Associates Ltd. he was in charge of civil engineering design for the District Municipality of Surrey.

Al Day, B. A. Sc., M. S., P. Eng., is joining the expanding Industrial Wastes Division in Victoria. After graduating in Chemical Engineering at U.B.C. in 1943 he took his Master's Degree at the University of Tennessee and subsequently spent some 17 years as Plant Manager for Colgate Palmolive Company at various locations throughout the world. His experience includes design, construction and operation of industrial complexes. For the past two years he has been Manager of the Industrial Engineering Department, for Scott Paper Limited in New Westminster. He brings to Ker, Priestman, Keenan & Associates Ltd. a detailed knowledge of industrial waste problems which will give strength to the rapidly expanding industrial air and water pollution control section of the Company.

YOUR TAXES

Doing Business With Relatives

By I. H. ASPER

Everyone knows that having a lot of relatives has its problems. But doing business with them may give you more, particularly in the tax field.

The cardinal tax rule between husband and wife is that if a man transfers any property or asset to his wife, then he must always pay the tax on her income from that property. For example, if a husband sells some share of his business to his wife, even though she pays the full price for the shares, he will have to pay the tax on all dividends she receives from those shares.

This is manifestly unfair in itself, especially if the wife has paid full value for the shares out of her own money. The inequity is carried further by the fact tat the husband can't legally get his hands on the income his wife receives, still he has to pay the tax on her income at his own rates of tax.

Even if they are separated and dealing completely at arm's length with each other, the rule prevails.

If a wife receives money from her husband, and she suffers losses on her investments, he can't deduct the loss from his income — it's a one-way street.

Husband and wife transactions in business are also penalized by the rule that if a husband employs his wife in his business, her salary is added to his, for tax purposes Thus he's again taxed on her income.

If he's even a partner in business which employs her, then a percentage of her wages equal to his percentage of the business is taxed as his income.

And if a husband goes into partnership with his wife, even if she uses her own money, or borrows it from a stranger, the tax department can treat all income from the business as being the husband's and tax him on her share of the profit, even though he can't legally touch her share.

These rules are frequently responsible for family businesses being incorporated. The tax law doesn't prevent a husband and wife from being co-shareholders in a company, provided the wife receives her shares from the treasury of the company and not from her husband. Under those circumstances the wife can receive a deductible wage from the family corporation.

The tax law is based on the presumption that people who are related to each other can't possibly deal at arm's length with each other. Thus, their business dealings are tax-penalized. Those who have had anything to do with family business relationships will know that this presumption is preposterous. Yet the law makes it an absolute fact.

ACTUAL CASE

The fallacy of this can be seen from an actual case. A man owns a building which contains 2 stores of equal size. Both stores are leased for 5 years at $5,000 each per year.

The tenant in one store is a stranger to the owner but the other is his brother-in-law. A buyer approaches the owner and offers him a good price for the building, but only if he can get the tenants out.

The owner negotiates with both tenants and they agree to cancel their leases if the owner will pay them $5,000 each. He agrees and pays them.

Now the tax rules apply. The $5,000 he pays the stranger is a deductible expense for him. But the $5,000 he pays his brother-in-law for precisely the same thing is not deductible, because they are related

You can't find any rational explanation for this. This theme runs throughout the whole piece.

There are tax penalties if you sell anything to a related person; there are even more potentially serious tax penalties awaiting those people who invest in several companies with different relatives. In that case, the income of all the companies can be lumped together for tax purposes, producing higher tax rates than would normally be encountered.

(Mr. Asper is a Winnipeg lawyer.)

B.C. TEL REVENUES INCREASE

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Telephone Company Friday reported net earnings of $10,879,000 or $3.78 a share for the nine-month period ended Sept. 30, compared with $10,581,000 or $3.80 a share for the same period last year.

President J. Ernest Richardson said in the company's third-quarter statement gross revenues of $129,777,000 for the nine-month period under review were 11.8 per cent higher than in the previous year while operating expenses, including depreciation and taxes, rose by 12.7 per cent to $103,786,000.

Fractional Gain Made By Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian bond market closed fractionally higher in light trading this week.

The short-end of the market gained about 25 cents. Mid— and long term issues rose about one-quarter of a point. The corporate sector was unchanged to fractionally higher.

TransCanada PipeLines introduced a new issue Monday totalling $60 million. The 9¾-per cent 20-year sinking-fund debentures sold at $98.00 to yield 9.98 per cent. Dealers report it sold well.

A new issue by the province of Saskatchewan was well received by isvestors. The issue, totaling $15 million sold at $98 to yield 8.97 per cent.

One deaer said "with banks reducing their interest rates on term deposits many investors now are looking at the attractive interest rates on the bond market."

Observers said an influx of new money on the market has helped relieve much of the pressure caused by the large number of new corporate issues floated during the past /wo weeks.

Day-to-day money closed at five per cent, three and six-month treasury bills traded at five and 5.10 per cent, respectively.

Simpsons

Simpsons Ltd. reports a drop in net earnings of 17.7 per cent during the first nine months of the current fiscal year while its partially-owned subsidiary, Simpsons-Sears Ltd., had a 30.8 per cent decline.

Simpsons Ltd., the department store company, had net earnings from operations of $3.4 million for the nine-month period ended Oct. 7 compared with $4 million for the period ended Oct. 8 last year. Earnings per share were 38.1 cents compared with 42.5 cents for the same period last year.

Simpsons-Sears had net earnings for the nine-month period of $4.6 million, or 30 cents a share, compared with $6.67 million or 43 cents a share last year.

Moore Corp.

Moore Corp. Ltd. reports third-quarter profit of $8.98 million or 32 cents a share, compared with $8.77 million or 31 cents a share for the corresponding period last year. The earnings are in U.S. dollars.

The company, which manufactures business forms and other related paper products, said third-quarter sales were $105.8 million up from $101 million in 1969.

Nine-month earnings were $26.59 million or 87 cents a share last year. Sales totalled $319 million up from $290.94 million in 1969.

Asbestos Corp.

Asbestos Corp. Ltd. reports net income of $4.13 million or $1.45 a share in the first nine months compared with $4 million or $1.41 in the corresponding 1969 period.

W. W. Oughtred, president and chief executive officer, said sales increased about 8.3 per cent to $36.34 million while net income rose by 3.4 per cent.

Greyhound

Greyhound Lines of Canada Ltd. earned $3.2 million during the nine months ended Sept. 30, up from $2.45 million in the comparable period of 1969.

The earnings, on a gross revenue of $36 million were equivalent to 69 cents a share compared with 53 cents.

The 1970 figures include income from the Coachways system which was acquired by Greyhound in January, but the 1969 figures were not adjusted to show the expansion.

Endako

Endako Mines Ltd. reports net earnings for the nine months ended Sept. 30 of $7.35 million down from $10.55 million for the corresponding period of 1969.

Per share earnings drop was 41 cents, to .95 from $1.36.

Company president T. H. McClelland said "the decrease in earnings is attributable to the company's fully taxable position in 1970 and the loss on foreign exhange as a result of the adoption of the floating exchange rate for the Canadian dollar."

Atlantic Sugar

Atlantic Sugar Refineries Co. Ltd. said in its nine-month report that consolidated net earnings were $5 million or 81 cents a share compared with $3.86 million or 59 cents in the corresponding 1969 period.

Sales were up to $54.89 million from $48.36 million.

Mobile Home Park Proprietor Seeks to Eliminate Stigma

For Ken Robertson, president of Wagon Train Estates Ltd., the $250,000 project represents a challenge: break down the prejudice against manufactured or "trailer housing."

He hopes his park will lift the stigma and prod Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. into financing such developments.

* * *

Robertson says his "Hidden Valley" undertaking is a first for Canada. Americans, he says, have been at it for years and have hundreds of first-class mobile home parks.

The Americans have concentrated on the warmer states, notably mid-to-southern California and Arizona. Many cater to retired persons wanting plenty of comfort, some luxury, little maintenance and a price they can afford.

Robertson, a well-travelled native of Victoria who has seen 80 or 90 versions of the American mobile home park, has transplanted the concept to a cooler clime, improved the land-to-dwelling ratio compared to many similar layouts, and added provision for small families.

Robertson has 78 initial plots spotted about six to an acre on winding, irregular streets climbing the sidehills overlooking the lake; and built-in recreation facilities.

The "mobiles," which are actually dead stationary, cost $12,000 to $15,000, plus monthly rental and service charges of $75 to $95.

Besides leaving the tax onus on the company, this allows Wagon Train close control over the type and behavior of residents.

"Mobile home does not mean 'moveable home' and it is not cheap housing," said company representative Roland Sartorius.

Robertson adds: "We have to live down a reputation not of our doing, created by trailer parks and gypsy camps. We have to convince by pilot project we can produce low-cost factory housing that merits consideration by municipalities."

Municipalities so far are loathe to recognize the mobile home.

Wagon Train expects Hidden Valley's 30-acre "adult community" to be well established by next spring.

Work will start early in the year on the family section, 20 acres rising off to one side with a natural wood dividing homes from the adult community.

The third phase will cover the remaining 20 acres climbing to the top of the ridge behind.

Features of the development include complete underground services — the company's own well-drawn water system, electric power, telephone and TV cable, sewer and drainage pipes and domestic heating oil lines.

* * *

The recreation areas will include tennis courts, small boat moorage, picnic ground, barbecue area, playground, trails in the woods, putting course, beach and swimming float.

A recreation building in modern rough cedar and shakes is actually the property's old homestead remodelled.

It has lounge, billiard room, table tennis, hobby shop, shuffleboard, snack kitchen and manager's office, with sun deck on three sides overlooking the lakefront.

A two-storey clubhouse and detached swimming pool will be added.

* * *

The homes themselves, which may be chosen from leading manufacturers or or custom-ordered, are provided with skirting, patios, carports, sundecks, screening and landscaping. They range from bachelor units to three and four-bderoom houses in single and double widths (up to 24 feet).

Rent includes garbage collection and water, but not electricity, oil, phone and TV.

Down payments average about $3,000.

* * *

Wagon Train's backers have spent nearly $250,000 on the project as a private company. They have applied to the B.C. Securities Commission to become public with an offering of 150,000 $2 shares.

FOCAL POINT of community being built by a Victoria housing developer at Florence Lake is modern lounge-recreation centre to be joined by clubhouse and pool. About half of the first phase consists of park and recreation area fronting on the lake, a short distance behind the shake-covered building. (Times photo)

Outgrow Bedwetting
When?

Half the children wetting the bed at age 5 will still be wetting at age 11. And bedwetting can go ON and ON. Walter C. Alvarez, M.D., Prof. Emeritus, Mayo Clinic, says: "What can the doctor prescribe . . . He can send the child to a urologist or psychiatrist, but rarely can they help . . . We physicians should know that 1 in 100 Navy recruits are quickly dismissed because of enuresis." Pacific International has ended bewetting for tens of thousands in the past two decades, and if not caused by organic defect or disease, we can end the problem for both children and adults. Five years ago, who'd have thought there'd be a Volkswagen this different?

The Super Beetle.

Nobody did.

Quite frankly, least of all us.

Because five years ago, we thought the Beetle was virtually perfect. (And to all intents and purposes, it was.)

But, as part of our continuing madness and because we've never been able to leave well enough alone, over a thousand changes have been made to it since.

A bigger, more powerful engine that's still as economical as ever.

A new and refined ventilation system with a two-speed blower to keep you cool. And a new heating system that has two heaters and a total of 7 different outlets to keep you warm.

There's now a rear window defogger. A trunk that'll carry twice as much as ever.

We actually even quadrupled the length of the warranty. From 6 months or 6,000 miles to 24 months or 24,000 miles.

The end product of all this incredible nit-picking?

WEEKEND'S TOP TV SHOWS

Tonight

THE GLEN CAMPBELL GOODTIME HOUR, 7 p.m., Channel 8. Tom Jones does the tit-for-tat routine, repaying Campbell for Glen's visit to the Jones show, with this rhythmic visit. His contributions include "Get Ready" and "Can't Stop Loving You" plus a duet with Glen to "All Through the Night." Other features: Karen Wyman's duet with Glen to "El Condor Pass;" Paul Lynde in three comedy sequences; Mel Tillis and his "Commercial Affection" and the Jones-Campbell medley of rock classics.

COUNTRYTIME. 7:30 p.m., Channels 2 and 6. Singers Terry Roberts, Hal Lone·Pine and Jeannie Ward are the guests. Regulars include Myrna Lorrie, Don Tremaine, Vic Mullins and the Hickorys. Songs include City Lights and One-Woman Man, by Terry, Daddy Sang Bass by Hall and Jeannie, Wedding Bells by Myrna and My Elusive Dream, by Myrna and Terry.

MISSION: IMPOSSIBLE. 7:30 p.m., Channels 7 and 12. "Decoy". Here's another of the good old-fashioned IMF plots filled with all the imaginative technological trickery the series is famed for, along with the more familiar use of disguises and duplicity. The focal point is the daughter of a recently deceased ruler of an Iron Curtain country. She and her brother are trying to defect, but American intelligence knows that her brother is only using her to get a secret list of American sympathizers she has and embarrass American agents helping her. "In spite of the trap, your mission, should you choose to accept it, is to get the document and bring Anna Kerkoska to safety," Jim Phelps is told.

THE ANDY WILLIAMS SHOW. 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. This mini-musical imitation of Laugh-In looks even more like that series tonight with the presence of Arte Johnson. The little man's big hit is a comedy sketch in which he appears as an Irish leprechaun which is actually a trial run for a characterization he wants to use in his upcoming series. Co-starring on the show is Kate Smith who, in the Laugh-In manner, pops in and out throughout the show and also solos "Any One Can Move a Mountain." Another feature is Gladys Knight and the Pips singing "If I Were Your Woman."

THE MARY TYLER MOORE SHOW. 8:30 p.m., Channel 8; 9:30 p.m. Channel 5. One of Miss Moore's better abilities is to project comedic anxieties that would dissolve any other woman in her position. For instance, it's frightening enough to work in a TV newsroom and suddenly be told you have to produces a news show because a heavy snowstorm has stranded other personnel. If that's not enough, it just happens to be election day. And to make it perfect, the electrical system breaks down leaving her without the single most important news source, the voting figures.

ADAM-12. 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. "Have a Nice Weekend." This series goes back to the one-plot, detective-type story, focusing on a series of burglaries in a well-to-do neighborhood. The common denominator is that each crime took place in the daytime, when the residents were away. Our heroes show us the dull routine of police activity in this type of case, exemplified in the phrase, "leg-work."

ARNIE, 9 p.m., Channel 7. Herschel Bernardi as the title star shows us frustration on both sides of the generation gap, with Arnie both getting and giving. He dishes it out when he tells his son in no uncertain terms that the young man is to get a haircut, and a real one. The son doesn't like it and a little later, Arnie learns exactly how he feels when the boss tells him to get rid of his walrus moustache, and no back talk.

THE MOST DEADLY GAME. 9:30 p.m., Channel 4. "Who Killed Kindness?" Since the locale of this episode is a dude ranch, you might think there would be some lightness to the script. When there is, it's soon inundated by a wide variety of vicious emotions which could have caused anyone of several people to have killed the ranch owner. Jonathan and Vanessa infiltrate the ranch, after the man's murder, working from the inside. An excellent guest cast includes Carol Lynley, Paul Richards, Andrew Prine, Sheree North and Robert Wilke.

MANNIX. 10 p.m., Channel 7. This one starts as a love story with Gail Fisher (Peggy) and Hari Rhodes (remember "Daktari"?) as the lovers. They meet in a hospital where she goes after an accident. He tells her he is being treated there under an alias and that he is really a high African diplomat. Peggy and Mannix swear to keep his secret, but his identity leaks out, and the next thing you know, the bombers are working on the hospital.

Sunday

THE WONDERFUL WORLD OF DISNEY. 6 p.m., Channel 2; 8:30, Channel 5. "Snow Bear" (PART TWO). This concluding chapter is the two-part episode on a young Eskimo and his pet polar bear should be the finest nature film of the year. Shot entirely on location around the Point Barrow, Alaska, region, the photography far outdistances the story, and yet it is the story that enhances the photography. It has the young Eskimo boy setting out on his own, pitting his life against the terrors of a North Pole winter, to make amends for the destruction his pet polar bear wrought on his village. The bear had disappeared before he left the village and you can expect a welcome reunion in the wilds.

WILD KINGDOM. 7 p.m., Channel 5. "Giants of the Dadanawa" (REPEAT). This series has been going back and forth from naturalism to theatrics and with this repeat goes back to one of the most blatant of the latter. It is a South American trek, searching for a giant anteater, which doesn't look very gigantic; a tapir and an anaconda, one of the largest snakes in the world. While the size and strength of the anaconda is awesome in itself, the staged properties in this sequence causes the loss of the value the program seeks: naturalism.

THE YOUNG REBELS. 7 p.m., Channel 4. "The Hostages." The Yankee Doodle Trio are getting so well known the enemy is forced to take action. The Hessian army is given the job, with Eric Braeden guesting as the German major who takes ten hostages and threatens their lives unless Captain Yankee Doodle is delivered to him. He doesn't know he has him among the hostages.

THE BILL COSBY SHOW. 7:30 p.m., Channel 2; 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. A small amount of research would undoubtedly show that every major male star of a situation comedy on television eventually had to take a Boy Scout troop on a march and suffered the consequences of a city man in a country setting. Tonight, it's Chet Kincaid's turn at that role with the only difference being in the show's eventual lesson in unity.

HOGAN'S HEROES. 7:30 p.m., Channel 7. Monte Markham guests as a German intelligence officer who gives Hogan a go at his own game. He shows up in camp as a POW who completely convinces the conspirators of his legitimacy. In fact, they are quick to tell him all about their various enterprises. Then they discover what he is before he is ready to reveal himself or turn them in.

THE ED SULLIVAN SHOW. 8 p.m., Channels 2, 6, 7, 12. Another special in this season of Sullivan's "extra effort" telecasts is a visit to Vietnam veterans at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D.C. The special troupe Sullivan put together for these tours includes Rodney Dangerfield, The Four Tops, The Carpenters, Hank Williams, Jr., Skiles and Henderson, Ron Carey and Dick Ryan.

BONANZA. 9 p.m., Channel 5. "The Love Child". One of the toughest scripts for this series this season is not an easy one to take. It deals with a girl who has a child out of wedlock, and brings her baby home hoping her own father will give her fatherless boy some advantages he will otherwise be denied. But the baby's grandfather is an embittered angry old man who not only slams the door on his daughter and grandson, but threatens the Cartwrights when they take her in. Will Geer, Carol Lawson and Michael-James Wixted are featured.

A TOKEN GESTURE stars Geraldine Overton as a young American girl in a resort town near the Canadian border, Ralph Endersby as a draft dodger on his way to self-imposed exile in Canada. It will be telecast on Theatre Canada, at 9 p.m. Thursday on Channels 2 and 6.

The TV Political Blurb As a Record of Our Time

By PAUL RICHARD

WASHINGTON (WP) — The campaigning politician is given 60 seconds. He spends it strolling pensively down polluted beaches and manfully up the Capitol steps. His glance is clear, his manner sober; he is listening to policemen, he is rolling up his shirt sleeves, he is speaking to the issues, he is trying not to sweat.

The 1970 campaigns blizzard now is over, ended by the voting. TV viewers who hate hokum and the hucksters may rejoice at the departure of those paid political announcements, but I am just a little sorry to see them go.

Sure, they oversimplified, sure, they conned us and they lied.

Yet those political commercials have a special virtue. They are the most revealing, the most accurate and artful political portraits of our time.

When this nation was new, our politicians posed patiently for portraits. A Washington museum has been founded to conserve the canvases and statues that the early image makers left us.

It is called the National Portrait Gallery. As the law forbids it to collect photographs and films, it cannot preserve the political "portraits" of our time.

★ ★ ★

An exhibition of the lift portraits of President John Quincy Adams will opened to the public today at that museum. President Adams, aware that he could not be everywhere at once, sat frequently for painters and frequently for sculptors, and more than 40 of his portraits will be included in the show.

But what sort of exhibitions will that museum give us a hundred years from now? The life portraits of Richard Nixon, of Lyndon Johnson and John Kennedy, would not fill a single room.

President Adams spent endless hours sitting for his portraits, but artist Peter Hurd was given only 20 minutes of President Johnson's time. "That's the ugliest thing I ever saw," said the disappointed sitter. His 1964 campaign commercials were made with greater care.

And at greater cost. Candidates in this election spend some $100 million to produce and air their television portraits, and they paid their artists well. The artistry of Charles Guggenheim cost Ohio's Howard Metzenbaum about $100,000 and Metzenbaum considered that a bargain.

Ironically, no painter could portray his subject with greater clarity or power than the wart-erasing TV specialists, who worked in this campaign. The 60-second portraits of Guggenheim, Roger Ailes, Robert Goodman, and the others reveal more about the candidates, about the issues and esthetic styles of our time than could any painting. The National Portrait Gallery — or some other government archieve — should add them to its collection and should begin to do so soon.

True, those short commercial films cosmeticize their subjects, but portraits always have. Those who examine those many Adams portraits will discover that despite the politeness and idealizing of the artists, something of the sitter and something of the time peeks through every one.

Likewise, those 60-and 30-second political commercials, no matter how hokey, how carefully cut and rigorously edited, never wholly lie.

Those films are the sort of revealing historical records that future generations should be given a chance to see.

Bridelines Indicate Surplus of Lovelorns

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — "Goodness, the country must be full of lovelorn women," said contractor John Patania.

He was looking over his shoulder at his cement-mixing employee, John Kovaceivich, 22, embracing his chosen bride—picked from among about 150 applicants a day after word got out that he had to get married by Sunday to avoid deportation to his native Yugoslavia.

Patania had released Thursday the word of the possible deportation because Kovaceivich's visa is expiring. He called the San Jose News, which informed The Associated Press.

"Since then it's been girls, girls, girls, with the phone ringing constantly" at the home where Kovaceivich rents a room, Patania said.

'IT HAPPENED'

"She's just what I've always wanted," said Kovaceivich as he hugged Christine Green, 21, shapely five-foot-two sandy blonde from nearby Cupertino.

"They just looked at each other and it happened," said Patania.

John speaks English haltingly; Christine speaks only English.

Christine waited while six other girls talked with the prospective bridegroom after answering invitations to "come to the house and talk it over," Patania reported.

"When she finally got her turn, they couldn't have talked more than a minute before John turned to me and exclaimed he had found his happiness," he added.

Christine said she would give up her job clipping dogs in a kennel and devote herself to being "a good wife and hopefully a good mother."

Patania said he would drive the engaged couple to Reno, Nev., 250 miles to the east, where there is no waiting period before marriages, in plenty of time to beat the Sunday deadline.

Original Amateur Program Finally Falls by Wayside

AMATEUR HOUR AXED

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS says that The Original Amateur Hour, television's oldest entertainment show and before that a long-time favorite on radio, has been cancelled.

The program, last seen in late September, was dropped by the network when it was not renewed by the sponsor, Geritol. Its disappearance was not immediately noticed because of a number of doubleheader National Football League games which pre-empted its Sunday afternoon time slot.

An estimated 10 million faithful viewers tuned in the show Sunday afternoon to watch host Ted Mack introduce young performers, but it was reported the show had seen its best days and was not attracting new audiences.

The show was first broadcast on the old Dumont network on Jan. 18, 1948, and survived cancellations previously by switching to other networks. CBS broadcast it for 10 years.

The program dates to the 1930s when the Major Bowes Original Amateur Hour was a popular radio program. It launched the careers of such stars as Frank Sinatra, Jack Carter and Maria Callas.

Mack became host after Bowes died and was in charge during the changeover to television.

'If there is a third world war, it will be the end because you cannot have a world war that will not escalate into a nuclear one. I am rather keen to prevent that.'

—EARL MOUNTBATTEN OF BURMA

War Horse Works for World College

WASHINGTON (WP) — He sat deep in a comfortable sofa, chewing one peanut after another, joking about being an old relic.

The admiral of the fleet the Earl Mountbatten of Burma, former chief of the defence staff, last Viceroy of India, great-grandson of Queen Victoria and uncle of Prince Philip of Edinburgh was in Washington for a day to attend a stag dinner Thursday night at the White House.

From the start of the press conference, he took charge.

"Come in, come in, hello, how are you," he said, as members of the press arrived one by one. "I'll tell you what this is about when you are all here."

Once we were all in place, he decided that the chairs in the room were too far apart for conversation. He pushed them around, displacing a perfectly good room arrangement, and formed a cosy circle. Then he sat down, and we waited respectfully.

He said, "of all the generals and admirals who served with me as chiefs of staff in World War II, I am the only one who survives. That is because I was in my 40s when World War II began and the average age of chiefs of staff was over 60. So you see, I am a relic of the past."

He had become president of the International Council of United World Colleges, a system of international schools for 16-to-18-year-olds which established its first school in Wales eight years ago.

Specifically, Lord Mountbatten wants to establish a similar school on the borders of Western Canada and the U.S. and Thursday night's White House dinner was an attempt to interest potential committee members and fund raisers.

"I'd like to say I'm an educationist. But I'm basically keen that my grandchildren should survive, because if we have another war, it is the end.

"The generation which fought in the war of 1914 made a mess of things. They didn't understand what they were in for, and luckily technology had not reached an advanced point so that they didn't destroy everything while they were attempting to destroy each other."

"Twenty-five years later," Earl Mountbatten continued, "another generation made an equal mess of things. They didn't know what they were in for, either. Do you think Hitler would have gone ahead if he'd known he would commit suicide in a bunker? Would Mussolini have entered the war if he'd known he would be hung upside-down by his heels?"

During the Second World War, Lord Mountbatten's ship, the Kelly, became a legend. After she was mined off Norway, her captain brought her home with her bow almost blown off. In a subsequent battle, she went down with her guns firing. Lord Louis and other survivors were picked up after several hours in the sea.

Churchill said of Lord Mountbatten, "He is equally at home in earth, air, and water and well accustomed to fire."

Lord Mountabatten said, "if there is a third world war, it will be the end because you cannot have a world war that will not escalate into a nuclear one. I am rather keen to prevent that."

Referring to the school, he said: "It's an idea that cannot be arrested because it is so good." He has already started the ball rolling in Germany, Singapore, Sweden, Norway, Italy, France, Spain, Malta and the Bahamas.

●

"As this grows, there will be a gradual infusion of intelligent people into society who know what the whole thing's about," he added. And who won't, he implied, make the same blundering mistakes that their fathers and grandfathers did.

Lord Mountbatten talked about the impact of living and working together on children whose countries are traditional enemies.

He told a story of a German boy, meeting a British boy, who asked why the English hated the Germans so much.

"You damn Germans started the war and killed my father," the British boy said. The German replied, "The Royal Air Force came over my city and killed my father and two brothers."

"Then they stopped blaming each other and started talking sense," Lord Mougttatten added, with satisfaction.

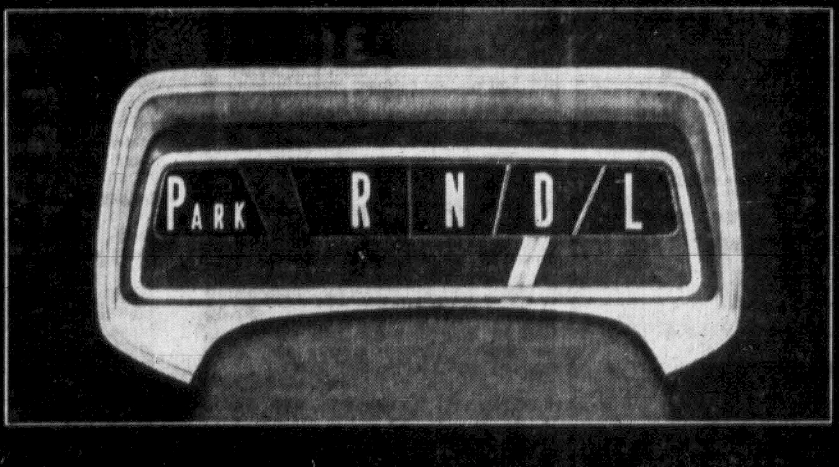
DATSUN 1600
AUTOMATIC



It's so good we're thinking of making the stickshift an option

There are semi-automatic small cars.
There are two-speed automatic small cars.
To us, none of these makes sense.

Which is why we developed the Datsun 1600 automatic
It's a three-speed automatic transmission that's designed to work with Datsun 1600's gear ratios. To put it simply, the transmission is engineered to match the engine's performance.
It sounds logical enough, but it isn't true of every car.
We took a lot of trouble to make sure our automatic transmission didn't rob the engine of horsepower. We were careful to see that the difference in gas mileage was hardly appreciable... and that Datsun 1600's performance remained just as sharp.
After all, Datsun 1600 has won more international rallies than any car in its class, so it has a reputation to maintain.

An automatic transmission is usually an option
But in today's traffic conditions, Datsun 1600 automatic makes so much sense, that maybe we ought to make the stickshift the option.
See your nearby Datsun dealer today.

YOUR OWN
PRIVATE GENIE

Dreaming of a Genie? Many people have found him in the magic of the Classified Ads. Wouldn't you call it "magic" if you could turn that extra bedroom furniture into living room drapes . . . your old refrigerator into a new summer outfit . . . sporting equipment into power tools . . . outgrown bicycles and toys into a musical instrument? Classified Ads find cash buyers for items you no longer want so you have extra money for today's needs.

Try using the "Classified Ad Genie" yourself. Make a list of things you no longer use, but that would be worth cash to someone else. Then dial 386-2121 for a friendly Ad Writer who helps you word your ad for prompt results and at very little cost.

They Came From Sooke and Found Ignorance

Yes, Said Victorians, It Was a Good Idea to Sell Queen Charlottes to U.S.

By PETER McNELLY

Dykes bet that most people on the street could not correctly answer simple questions on Canadian affairs.

Many of his students were skeptical—after all, this is an age of "instant communications." The class decided to prepare 11 questions and spend a day in Victoria interviewing people on the street.

●

They broke into eight groups. Armed with questionnaires, pencils and pluck, they walked up to passers-by, introduced themselves and fired away.

They interviewed nearly 340 people, asking:

Do you feel Canada is controlled too much by the United States?

Do you think Canada should keep control of the Arctic islands?

Do you think the federal government should move the capital from Ottawa to a central location?

Could you tell the prime minister's name and party; the leader of the opposition; how many provinces exist; which province is Ottawa in?

Do you think Quebec's separation is the answer to Canada's present problem?

Who is your local member of Parliament?

Do you think the reduction and unification in the armed forces is a good thing?

They asked one false question—just to see how many people would sniff it out: Has the economy benefited from the sale of the Queen Charlottes to the U.S.?

On every question but two, 25 per cent said they had no opinion. Almost 40 people said they did not know the prime minister's name, and 74 people could not correctly say how many provinces the country has.

On the fake question about the Queen Charlottes, 210 people not only believed that Canada sold the islands to the U.S., but they also thought the sale had helped the economy.

●

The students found overwhelming rejection of separatism.

On armed forces reduction and unification, 135 people in favor, 111 against, 103 without an opinion.

Only 21 people thought Canada should not retain control of its Arctic islands.

Most people thought Canada was not controlled too much by the U.S.

What did the class learn?

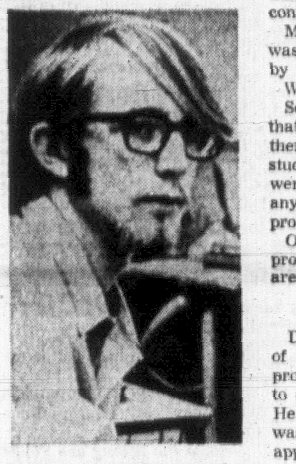
Some said they discovered that people were not hostile to them because they were students. Others said people were often afraid to say anything for fear of being proved incorrect.

One student said the survey proved that many Victorians are stupid.

●

Dykes said the best aspect of the study was that it proved the students could talk to adults about public affairs. He said one girl in the class was so frightened of approaching people on the street; she had told him she didn't know if she could go through with it.

But, it turned out, she interviewed more than 50 people.



WITH A PASSION to understand change, Pat Hull, Edward Milne Secondary student, listens intently before jumping into another lively class discussion.

One group went to the Legislative Buildings. When they explained themselves to one cabinet minister's secretary, she immediately tried to find someone else to speak to them.

The students gave up asking questions of provincial employees, preferring to stop visitors who were more willing to talk.

The questionnaire has become part of a year-long program that Dykes' calls urban studies.

These Students Don't Merely Look at TV They Make Up Programs . . . And Good Ones

Dykes does not lecture. He just gets a discussion going on issues. The kids seem to participate not to gun for approval but to speak their minds.

"The kids . . . the kids are just fantastic," says Dykes. "I don't have to tell them what to do very much any more. They're already at the point where they stop and say, 'that's not good, that has to go.' They're getting very critical, analyzing what they're doing."

Last year, the school spent $2,000 for a videotape television unit. Dykes' class is making several television shows this year. The projects are ambitious, but he is convinced the students can do them.

One project well under way is a documentary introduction to jazz. The students have been filming jam sessions at the Barbary Banjo.

The musicians, members of the New Vaudeville Band, are performing various styles of jazz before the camera. When the shooting is finished, part of the tapes will be edited on a mixing machine to produce a split screen effect.

Another project is a mixed media effort involving videotape, super 8 and 16 millimetre film, 35 millimetre stills and music. The class is drafting a program of interviews with civic and elected officials in the region. And it will look at recreational, housing, political, ecological and industrial problems.

●

The most ambitious project is production of a one-hour videotape film tentatively called the Urban Crisis. Shooting has been under way since September.

The class is inviting to the school an urban planner, a psychiatrist, a theatre professor, an ecologist, a lawyer, and a sociologist.

These people are being videotaped in discussion with students. The rest of the scheme involves taped man-in-the-street interviews and shots of local urban scenery.

Dykes estimates that 11 hours of footage will be videotaped. CHEK-TV was so impressed with the preliminary footage already shot, Dykes said, that they offered to let the students use their editing equipment.

The Urban Crisis project involves Edward Milne students from grades 8 through 12, though most are in grade 11.

●

Videotape equipment is simple to operate. Shooting can take place in ordinary light. Grade 11 student Pat Hull said that prior to this year's projects, the equipment had been used to record TV specials and school sporting events.

"That's good but not good enough. Not for 2,000 bucks," Hull said.

Dykes says social studies is meaningless unless the students can get involved in the community, and the community involved with the students. He says a teacher is like a guide with his finger on learning resources.

The questionnaire is a good example.

"No amount of statistical information could have had the same effect as going out and talking to those people," Dykes said.

"Last year in our science class, the teacher told us we were completely on our own, no exams, nothing. It was exciting at first, but I wound up wasting the whole year. Everybody else did too," said Marge Lee, contrasting the two courses.

Gregory was saying that one of the problems with schools is that they teach people to make decisions about static situations, while the world is changing faster than ever before.

Hull kept playing around with the tape, spinning it forward to another segment of the discussion.

Tenant Head 'Devastated' By Mayor's Reluctance

Brian Jewitt, president of the Capital Region Tenants' Association, said today he was "devastated" by Mayor Courtney Haddock's apparent unwillingness to set up a grievance board or to meet with Jewitt.

Haddock said Thursday he thought an acceptable means of settling landlord-tenant disputes could be set up under the aegis of the Better Business Bureau.

Jewitt said municipalities are not obliged to create advisory boards, but would be shirking their responsibilities to tenants if they did not do so.

'MOST TIMID'

"For some reason, tenants are the most timid people in the world," he said.

"People elected to city hall have a responsibility to protect the tenants, but by refusing to set up a tribunal, they're really protecting the land speculators."

Jewitt said some aldermen, who must own land to run for office, are protecting their own interests to the detriment of tenants.

He estimated 67 per cent of the population of the city consists ot tenants.

'CRASS IMPUNITY'

"These landlords never read the Sermon on the Mount. The thing that irks me is that they operate with such crass impunity.

"They can, just by the stroke of a pen, say 'Your rent has been raised by $25 or $35,' and there is nothing you can do about it."

If no advisory board exists, tenants and landlords must take their grievances to small debts court, Jewitt said, which means a wait of at least three months.

Municipalities were given power to create advisory boards under the Landlord and Tenant Act which was amended by the Legislature earlier this year. Under the amended act landlords must give three months' notice in writing before increasing rents.

The role of the advisory board, as outlined in the act is as follows:

"Advise landlords and tenants in tenancy matters.

"Receive complaints and seek to mediate disputes between landlords and tenants.

"Disseminate information for the purpose of educating and advising landlords and tenants concerning rental practices, rights and remedies.

"Receive and investigate complaints of conduct in contravention of legislation governing tenancies."

Victoria Labor Council supports the advisory board idea, and has urged Haddock to appoint a representative of tenants to sit on the board.

Jewitt said he set up the tenants' association last year after his rent was increased from $100 to $135 a month.

Pentiction? It's Really Very Cornish

A non-status Indian wants to set the record straight as to origin of the name of Penticton in the Okanagan Valley.

H. A. (Butch) Smitherm, president of the British Columbia Non-Status Indians Association, says it isn't an Indian name as claimed by historians and the Penticton Chamber of Commerce.

The word pen is a distinctive Cornish name and ton stands for town, he says. The tict could either mean insects or running into debt.

"So the namer must have either been eaten alive by insects or taken for a ride money-wise when he first settled there," said Smitherm, whose grandfather was Cornish.

"We estimate there are about 50,000 non-status Indians in B.C. who get little or no help from senior governments," he said. "We need to organize ourselves so that we can enjoy the same rights and privileges of registered Indians."

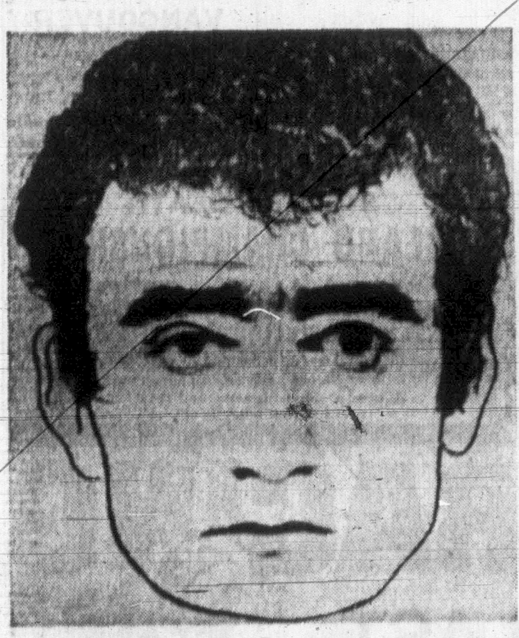
Ask the Times

Q. What is the Portuguese population of Victoria?—E.E.R.

A. The 1961 national census indicates that there are very few Portuguese in Victoria at the time and the number was insufficient to justify a separate listing. The exact figure, however, could be obtained by writing the Dominion Bureau of Staistics, Census Division, Ottawa, Ont.

Q. Was Jimmy Braddock—heavyweight boxing champion of the world in the mid-1930s—a Canadian or an American?—W.G.L.

A. Braddock, described as an Irishman from New Jersey, was 29 years old when he won the title from Max Baer June 13, 1935. Braddock defeated Baer, the 10-to-1 favorite, before 30,000 spectators at Madison Square Gardens.



Police Drawing of Gunman Suspect

POLICE SEEK AID TO FIND BANDIT

Saanich police are looking for anyone who can help them with information about a suspect in a credit union holdup Thursday.

Insp. John Post said today the man, paunchy, dark-haired, about 35, was spotted in the vicinity of the credit union office at 4512 West Saanich Road an hour before the robbery at 1 p.m.

"We believe he was looking over the office for about an hour," Post said. "If anyone saw anything even remotely suspicious in that period we'd like to hear from them."

The bandit fled with $5,000 in cash in a 1967 fastback Barracuda after demanding, at gunpoint, all the money in the office. Police are checking a number of leads in the case but admit little progress.

Cool-Aid Invites Opponents

Cool-Aid organizers announced today they are holding a special "open house" Sunday. They hope people who have been signing petitions opposing their expansion plans will come along.

"Ninety per cent of the people who have signed those petitions are on our side — if they only knew it" said Hugh Wade, one of the adults supporting the youth group.

"And they'll never know it if they don't come and look."

The open house will be at 953 Balmoral Street all day and coffee, tea and cookies will be served visitors. Cool-Aid operates its limited accommodation, meals and counselling program for youth out of this house.

The Cool-Aid program, which is financed by provincial government and municipal grants, has grown so rapidly the group has been eyeing a church for sale at Gladstone and Fernwood, to be developed as a youth resources centre.

Petitioners argue that use would depreciate property values and cause congestion.

Arthur Mayse . . .

ONE OF THESE DAYS, I am going to buck the tiger and put on my new birthday tie. It is a thing of beauty, young-leaf green and four times as wide as the tired old string that nooses my neck. But when I do take the plunge, one of the immutable laws that govern our lives will assert itself.

This law has so far escaped formal definition. The gist of it, though, is that someone down there hates perfection.

Careful though I intend to be, something will happen to that tie. If an unseen hand doesn't dabble its end in my coffee cup, a cigarette spark will be directed against it, or our loving dog will decide to nestle his drooly chops on it.

With that first marring accomplished, nothing more will happen to it. Law X will have fulfilled itself.

I could dreary you for hours with examples of this sort of thing. But a few will suffice.

You are, let us suppose, in the market for a new car. A day comes when you turn in your old brute, which for the past year has survived all the hazards of street and highway without adding so much as a paint-scratch to its scars.

You set out in the new car, with firm resolve to keep its condition immaculate. On the way home, you remember an errand that needs doing. So you put into a parking lot, choosing your berth with finicky care.

The cars on either side are well-positioned. There's no over-length vehicle opposite that might clip your rear while backing out. At least, there wasn't when you walked away.

And when you come back? A nick in the rear bumper, and a dimple in one plump and previously flawless door. The law that denies us perfection has been at work again.

There was a time when I used to blame poor planning, carelessness or downright stupidity for much that ganged agley. Like the year we decided to do a really good job of painting our front-porch concrete.

We wire-brushed and sanded. We washed down. We chose our paint, bought new brushes, and didn't hurry the job. As a final touch, I rigged a two-ladder barricade in front of the fresh-gleaming expanse, and mounted a large, boldly-lettered "Wet Paint" sign. Then we went off to clean our brushes and ourselves.

That done, we strolled around front to admire the perfect job. Only it was no longer perfect. The barricade had been scaled. A set of firmly planted footprints led to the front door, and away from it.

The anti-perfection law had employed a human agent to get its licks in.

It never fails, as witness what happened to a speaker-in-public who, up to a point, delivered the perfect speech.

He had a good voice. His jokes were brief, fresh, and to the point. His message was meaningful, his topic timely. He had everything going for him until, well along in his discourse, the reporters to whom he had supplied copies realized that something had gone amiss. The speaker had hopscotched from page seven to page 11.

His voice trailed off. He fumbled with his pages on the rostrum. They fell to the floor. The chairman darted to retrieve them. He and the speaker bumped heads.

What he should have done is overlooked the fact of pages misplaced and steamed on to his conclusion. Instead, he merely compounded the effects of Law X, which had struck again.

Moments meant to be dramatic set up a climate that courts an application of this law.

The curtain jams as the plaque is about to be unveiled. The shears that were to sunder the blue ribbon and open the bridge come unhinged.

And once, a ceremony planned to be perfect ended in a scene of low comedy before these delighted eyes.

In aid of some worthy cause, a keg was to be tossed into the Fraser River for a timed float to New Westminster. A minister of the crown stood with other dignitaries on a little scaffold that projected over the turgid grey flow.

Upstream, the guys were ready with the keg. The minister was well along in his pre-launching spiel. Right then, for reasons that only the law I've cited can explain, the over-eager functionary behind him on the scaffold raised a revolver and blasted the launching signal.

In went the keg. So, almost did the minister, who snorted, leaped, and staggered against the scaffold rail. Hands grabbed his coat-tails and hauled him back, while behind on the shore, a band cut loose with Colonel Bogey.

Perhaps there's a reason for Law X, which intrudes itself between man's hopes and their ideal fulfilment. The Venus de Milo with arms might be a touch too much, and perfection unblemished the least bit boring.

PIPES SELECTED AS TOP LINEMAN

REGINA (CP) — Defensive tackle Greg Pipes of Edmonton Eskimos today was named top lineman in the Western Football Conference for 1970 and offensive end John Senst of Winnipeg Blue Bombers was named Canadian rookie of the year in the WFC.

Pipes, first-time winner of the Becket-DeMarco Trophy, topped second-place Jack Abendschan, the place-kicking offensive guard for Saskatchewan Roughriders. Third place went to linebacker Wayne Harris of Calgary Stampeders.

Pipes, 22, is in his third year with Eskimos. Harris won the trophy, awarded by special judges in the five WFC cities, in 1966. The honors in 1969 and 1968 went to defensive tackle Ed McQuarters of Saskatchewan.

* * *

Senst, a product of Simon Fraser University, drew the most votes from sports writers for the rookie award. Eskimos' Jim Henshall, a defensive half, and punter Fred Dunn finished second and third, respectively, in polling for the Dr. Beattie Martin Trophy.

The Becket-DeMarco Trophy is named after Mel Becket and Mario DeMarco, two Saskatchewan Roughriders who were killed in a 1956 air crash, while the Dr. Beattie Martin Trophy is named after a former president of Roughriders.

Juach Hopes Esks Can Avoid Errors And Extend Skein

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos have never lost a Western Football Conference semi-final game at home and coach Ray Jauch says they can keep the string going Sunday by avoiding mistakes.

"It's who's going to make the mistakes and who will do the things that will hurt" that will decide the outcome of the sudden-death clash with Calgary Stampeders in Clarke Stadium.

With temperatures expected to be in the 20s, the field would be frozen to some degree.

The first WFC playoff game in Edmonton since 1961, the last time the Eskimos finished the regular season in second place, will start at 4 p.m. EST and will be televised on the CTV national network.

TRULL CAN'T LOSE

Quarterback Don Trull, Edmonton's master of the short pass, is bound to do better than he did in his last playoff game—for Houston Oilers of the American Football League in 1969.

The Oilers were clobbered by Oakland Raiders. Trull called one play in the game and lost his job.

"I think Wally Lemm (the coach) would have probably kept me, but what could he do when Adams (Houston owner Bud Adams) told him to get rid of all the quarterbacks."

Trull isn't worried about the cold Sunday.

"I don't really mind it. Twenty or 30 degrees up here doesn't seem as cold because it's drier. Cold doesn't seem to bother my throwing. It's a wet ball that isn't good."

The big thing against Calgary, he said, "is not so much how many points we can score but not to give any away."

STAMPEDERS FAVORED

The bookmakers have made Calgary three-point favorites to become the first third-place team to capture the WFC semi-final since 1963, when Saskatchewan Roughriders turned the trick. The playoff was a two-game, total-points affair then, but was switched to a sudden-death game in 1965.

The Eskimos have played six semi-final games at home, three against Calgary, and won most of them easily. But only one was a sudden-death encounter, a 4-1 verdict over Winnipeg Blue Bombers in 1951.

FORT SMITH FANS . . . . . . WILL JOIN BAND

Jake Couldn't Say No

TORONTO (CP) — A determined group of Northwest Territories football fans has found a way to get in to see the Grey Cup game Nov. 28 without tickets.

Jake Gaudaur, Canadian Football League commissioner, said Friday he failed to find tickets for the game at the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium so he gave the group permission to sit on the field with the band.

"Okay, come on—but can you give me any idea of how boiled your guys are likely to be by game time?"

Gaudaur said he asked about the fans' probable state of sobriety because of the field-level position they would occupy.

"It shoots our field security full of holes, maybe. That's why I had to ask about behavior. But I just couldn't listen to a man talk about the CFL and the Grey Cup and Canada the way he did, and say no."

Karin phoned Gaudaur Oct. 19 and asked to buy 50 tickets but found all had been sold. He then wrote Gaudaur a letter pointing out that the Fort Smith fans couldn't possibly hold season tickets that would give them first chance at Grey Cup passes. But they were Canadian football fans regardless and wanted a chance to see the Grey Cup.

Karin enclosed a certified cheque for $750, said he had booked a plane to bring the group to Toronto and told Gaudaur they couldn't take no for an answer.

After the commissioner failed to find anyone who would part with their tickets, he agreed to the field seating.

Busy Man at Sandown Once 'Killed' in Spill

By BILL WALKER

G. S. "Scotty" Hughes was killed in a race track spill 43 years ago in Chicago.

The same Scotty Hughes today is a patrol judge and paddock steward at the B.C. Jockey Club thoroughbred race meeting at Sandown which will conclude on Wednesday.

If there appears to be some sort of discrepancy, it is understandable. For in the 1927 season, Scotty Hughes was a jockey, good enough to be under contract to J. W. Marchbank, who later was to build the Tanforan Race Track, and was riding at Washington Park in Chicago.

Actually his career had begun a few years earlier, in Vancouver, when he had joined the McLennan stable.

Then he went to work for a U.S. owner Fred Nancoulas and broke his maiden at the old Tijuana Track in the 1926-27 winter season on a horse called Runheight.

Scotty had enjoyed a good year and, still sporting his "bug" had been leading rider at Omaha and Salt Lake City.

It was then that his contract was sold to Marchbank.

Six horses went down, three were killed and Scotty's horse was almost sliced in half as it hit the railing.

After the doctors had arrived, Scotty was pronounced dead, and he was put in the ambulance, with the others.

On the way to the hospital, something happened, and Scotty was suddenly alive again.

Banner Headline Reported 'Death'

He didn't know it himself for two or three days, because he was unconscious. But in Vancouer, his home town, they had mourned his passing.

The Vancouer Morning Star came out with a banner headline on the spill. "There was a big story saying what a good guy I was," says Scotty today of the epitaph.

"I was in hospital for a few weeks and then released," he recalls. "But one of the boys never rode again. A fellow named Walters was riding his first race. He broke his back.

LEADING RIDER

Scotty then came back to Canada, and went to work for C. C. "Charlie" Emmert. In the 1928 season he was leading rider in the province and won the Brighouse and Lansdowne derbies on a horse called Forbeck.

He continued to ride mostly on B.C. tracks, Colwood, Willows, Lansdowne and Brighouse, and was always near the top of the standings until 1936.

During that time, he also worked and rode horses for former Lieutenant Governor Eric Hamber, and Austin Taylor. One of the horses he galloped for trainer Wally Dunn was Mafosta, one of B.C.'s finest.

Of course, it was different in those days, Scotty will admit, if pressed.

"They didn't have patrol judges, and you were liable to have your saddlecloth grabbed, or get caught in a leglock. But now now."

In all, Scotty rode "about 300 winners."

Later he went to work as a valet, in a partnership with Commission steward Billie Bell. "We usually had about 10 riders, and often topped the meetings", he said.

Scotty was appointed a patrol judge in 1950 and paddock judge in 1961. As such he is required to check every horse for equipment and identification before each and every race. "No, we haven't had any ringers," he said.

ULRICH NABS ANOTHER

Meanwhile, on the track Friday an upset was in the making, and thievin' Charlie Ulrich had stolen another.

It was in the featured seventh race at one mile, and Ulrich was up on Gold Crazy, a three-year-old bay gelding which had broken his maiden here on Oct. 19.

Well, Ulrich took his mount to the front, as it figured, and he kept him there, which didn't, because Gold Crazy had never gone that far before.

Beau Bunnie got his nose in front about 100 yards from home, as a favorite should, but Ulrich and Gold Crazy were equal to the test, and won in a photo. Gold Crazy paid $31.90.

Arnold won four, Mr. Hornet ($7.30), in the first, Hokay's Wonder ($8.30) in the third; Pixaway ($5.80) in the fifth, and Tawasentha ($9.30) in the sixth.

AUSSIES WIN STORMY FINAL OVER BRITAIN

LEEDS, England (AP) — Australia defeated Britain 12-7 in a stormy final Saturday to win the Rugby League World Cup. The Australians led 5-4 at half-time.

Two players, Billy Smith of Australia and Sid Hymes of Britain, were sent off the field in the last minute for fighting at the final whistle. Players of both sides swung fists and had to be separated by police and officials.

Australia and Britain reached the final by finishing in the top places of a four-team pool. France and New Zealand also competed.

Harry Franklin Takes Hoop Post

VANCOUVER (CP) — Harry J. Franklin, 48, of Vancouver was appointed Friday to the newly-created paid position of executive director of the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association.

Franklin, a former University of British Columbia basketball star and currently executive secretary of the CABA, will move to Ottawa to assume his full-time CABA duties Jan. 1.

Distance Runners Slowing Down In Record Chase

By GEOFFREY MILLER

LONDON (AP) — Are long distance runners getting near their limit?

A new edition of progressive world record lists, published in London by the International Amateur Athletic Federation (IAAF), shows that the momentum of record-breaking events of 800 metres and over is slowing down.

The book lists all world records set in track and field this century.

While pole vaulters soar higher and higher, distance records are staying unchanged for longer periods than they used to. Here are some examples:

The 800-metre mark has been lowered only twice in the last 15 years. In the 1930s it was lowered six times.

Thirteen records for 1,500 metres were set between 1952 and 1960. But since Australia's Herb Elliott ran 3:35:6 in the Rome Olympics of 1960 only one man—Jim Ryun of the United States—has beaten it with 3:33.1.

The record for 2,000 metres has stuck for four years now at Michel Jazy's 4:56.2. When the Frenchman set that time in 1966 it was the fifth record in five years.

The 3,000-metre mark was cracked three times in 1965 but has not been lowered since. Kip Keino of Kenya still holds it with 7:39.6.

By contrast the book shows the pole-vault records. Two more world marks were set as the book was being printed—17-11 by Wolfgang Nordwig of East Germany last month and 18¼ by Chris Papanicolaou of Greece two weeks ago.

BROAD JUMPERS BETTER

Broad jumpers are leaping ahead too. Bob Beamon's fantastic 29-2½ at the Mexico Olympics of 1968, was the ninth new mark since 1960. That meant more new broad jump records in nine years than in the previous 60 years.

But Clarke bowed out without setting an over-all world record for world records.

He set 17 world marks in his career. Emil Zatopek of Czechoslovakia set 18 in the years after the Second World War and the legendary Paavo Nurmi of Finland set 19 back in the 1920's.

Streaking Cents Take Over First

Pennock Back As Cats Face Leaders Tonight

The high-riding Coast Division clubs will reach a cross road tonight when they meet in Memorial Arena, starting at 8:30 p.m.

For the moment, the Ron Matthews coached Centennials have the upper hand. They earned it, and the Coast lead, by defeating Chilliwack Bruins 8-4 Friday. That moved Vancouver into first, one point ahead of the Cats.

DYCK RETURNS

Bolstered by the return of centre Alex Dyck, the Centennials spotted Chilliwack a 3-0 lead in the first eight minutes of play, then bounced back strongly.

It was Dyck, rejoining the Vancouver team this week after a contract dispute, who touched off Centennials' comeback. He scored Vancouver's first goal and set up Grant Casper for the second as teams packed all of the game's goals in the first two, loosely-played periods.

Despite the loss, Chilliwack turned in one of its better efforts of the season, outshooting Vancouver 46-43.

BRONCOS ON MOVE

In the only other game played Friday, Penticton Broncos took over the Okanagan Division lead by piling up an 11-1 victory over Kelowna Backaroos.

Harry Turk, a converted defenceman who had held the league scoring lead until being shut out in an earlier 11-1 win over Chilliwack, came back to pace Penticton with three goals.

Brain Matlock scored the lone Kelowna goal mid-way through the third period against back-up Bronco goalie Ian Faraday, who had replace Dave McClelland in the second. McClelland, before being relieved, had rolled up 131 minutes of consecutive shutout goalkeeping.

Cougars, who launched their win streak by defeating Vancouver 4-2 last month, will be bolstered by the return of defenceman Dale Pennock. The lanky Cougar "policeman" has missed Victoria's last two games because of a broken bone in his right hand.

Surging Seals Clobber Leafs

By The Canadian Press

Ten days ago, California Golden Seals looked as if they were taking up permanent residence in the West Division cellar of the National Hockey League.

They were still there Friday night after crushing Toronto Maple Leafs 8-4 in the only scheduled game, but they gave the impression they have their eye on the division penthouse—or at least a walkup flat.

In their first nine games of the season, the Seals registered only two points, both coming on ties, while losing the rest.

The latest win gave California eight points, one less than Pittsburgh Penguins, two back of Minnesota North Stars and four behind fourth-place Los Angeles Kings.

LEAFS LEAD BUFFALO

Toronto's loss leaves the team with six points in the East Division, one ahead of last-place Buffalo. The Leafs have three wins and eight defeats in 11 games.

At Oakland, both teams scored twice in the first period, Garry Monahan and Guy Trottier for the Leafs, Carol Vadnais and Billy Hicke for the Seals.

Featherstone registered his second goal of the night early in the third period before Toronto attempted a rally on goals by Trottier, his second of the game, and Ron Ellis.

LEAFS IN VANCOUVER

In tonight's action, Toronto travels to Vancouver to meet the Canucks, Montreal Canadiens play host to the Sabres, New York is at Los Angeles, Boston Bruins visit Pittsburgh, Chicago Black Hawks are at Philadelphia against the Flyers and St. Louis Blues encounter the North Stars at Minnesota.

Punch Imlach, manager-coach of the Sabres, says he is counting on Larry Keenan and Jean-Guy Talbot, whom he obtained in a trade with St. Louis Blues, to play tonight in Montreal.

"I hope the two new guys are ready to play," Imlach said. "We need them."

The expansionist Sabres have lost their last six games and have won only two in 12 starts.

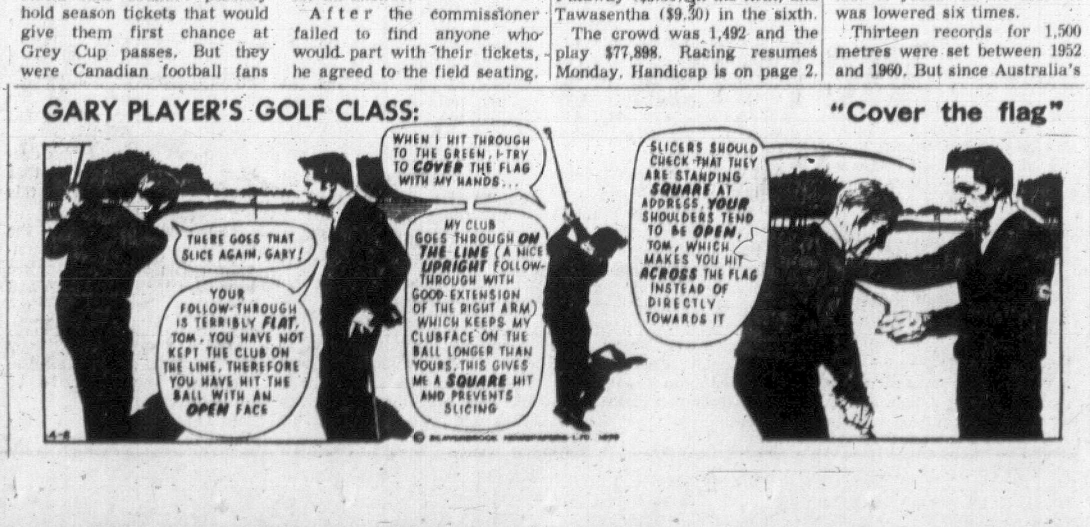
GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS: "Cover the flag"



WHEN I HIT THROUGH TO THE GREEN, I TRY TO COVER THE FLAG WITH MY HANDS...
THERE GOES THAT SLICE AGAIN, GARY!
YOUR FOLLOW-THROUGH IS TERRIBLY FLAT, TOM. YOU HAVE NOT KEPT THE CLUB ON THE LINE, THEREFORE YOU HAVE HIT THE BALL WITH AN OPEN FACE
MY CLUB GOES THROUGH ON THE LINE (A NICE UPRIGHT FOLLOW-THROUGH WITH GOOD EXTENSION OF THE RIGHT ARM) WHICH KEEPS MY CLUBFACE ON THE BALL LONGER THAN YOURS. THIS GIVES ME A SQUARE HIT AND PREVENTS SLICING
SLICERS SHOULD CHECK THAT THEY ARE STANDING SQUARE AT ADDRESS. YOUR SHOULDERS TEND TO BE OPEN, TOM, WHICH MAKES YOU HIT ACROSS THE FLAG INSTEAD OF DIRECTLY TOWARDS IT

Curling Tips

By Ron Northcott

(Three-time World Champion)

Let's discuss one of those situations disregarded far too often by the average curler. It's the first end, with whites holding last rock. Whites' second is about to play either of his rocks.

There are three possibilities: (1) draw around the guard for shot; (2) play a draw to the open side of the house; (3) split off the short rock.

* * *

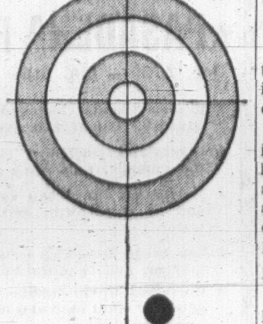
THE STRATEGY: Because it is the first end, I would remove the short rock. Don't take a chance on being fancy when you don't know the ice. A hit is relatively easy but anything else is going to be a guess and could well get you started wrong.

Should you decided to come around and end up short, your opponent has two rocks to get behind. If you play to the open side, and make the draw, your opponent can hit and roll and put you in trouble.

So play it safe. Peel the short rock.

* * *

TODAY'S TIP: Throwing an in turn, most of the better competitive curlers start with the handle of the rock pointing towards the player and directly in line with the skip's broom.



Some curlers hold the rock with the handle pointing ever so slightly to the right of the skip's broom, but I recommend keeping it in a straight line.

The important thing is the grip itself. Grasp the handle with only your fingers curled around it, so that it rests on a line between the first joint of the little finger and the first joint of the index finger. Place your thumb lightly on the side of the handle, and you are ready to deliver.

Cash 'Spiel Date Key to Success

By ERNIE FEDORUK

There are a few "purple hearts" floating around playing Curling Club and, if it turns out as they hope the money 'speil will, more are on the way.

The "purple hearts" on the sweaters are the crests that indicate past provincial champions. It was to be expected that some would show up for British Columbia's richest bonspiel.

Neil Dickson, president of the Playland Men's League, Dave Stubbs, Norm Stewardson et al have worked hard and, justifiably, are looking to break even on the 'spiel that winds up Sunday.

They're also looking to another big 'spiel next year. Which means more "purple hearts" will be on the way. Hec Gervais, Ron Northcott and Merv Mann are among some of the names, contacted in Vancouver last week, who would be "very interested" in coming to Victoria.

* * *

Good money and good dates are the keys. The payoff is ample enough now, but dates set hard on the heels of Vancouver's Evergreen Bonspiel would be a greater attraction for the nation's finest rockthrowers.

Mann, incidentally, is not a wearer of the purple heart. The Saskatoon slicker has to be the finest curler who has not yet won a provincial championship.

Mann makes his presence felt in the big prize 'spiels. It's being shispered, by reliable informants, that Merv picked up $14,000 last year, the bulk coming from victory in three carspiels.

Now you see why these cash 'spiels are so popular.

ICE CHIPS: A new, noise-making nylon broom, which looks very much like a braided horse's tail, is creating mixed feelings . . . Executives fear the on-ice din may become unbearable . . Players who favor the broom think they are effective sweepers because they can make a great deal of noise . . The Racquet Club hasn't come right out and banned the broom by name . . . Instead, they've worded it carefully and have made "synthetic" brooms verboten on their sheets . . . Victoria Club combats the influx by refusing to stock or sell the noise-making monster . . . Neither Playland nor the Sports Centre have taken action . . .

A new Saturday night mixed league at Victoria provided an instant success . . . It was quickly filled, is proving to be highly competitive, but Gus MacDonald insists on touting the social niceties of the league . . . Also at Victoria, a number of curlers are needed to fill-out a new Sunday night league that has the ice from six to eight o'clock . . . Pat Thompson's Victoria Club foursome remains the only undefeated rink in the elite Masters League . . . A total of 21 entries have been filed for Playland's men's bonspiel, Nov. 20-22 . . . Another 10 quartets from the host club are ready and waiting, and it looks as if they will have no difficulty in reaching the limit of 48 rinks.

Madrid Club Wins

MADRID (Reuter) — Atletico de Madrid beat Cagliari of Italy, 3-0, in a European Cup second-round second-leg match Thursday night to qualify, 4-2, on aggregate for the quarter-finals.

Rivals Can't Relax When Jim 'Rests'

The pre-med course is tough, and the studies are time-consuming. Victoria's Jim Armstrong is aware of the degree of difficulty but feels he has one valid reason for taking time out to enter the $5,000 Invitational Bonspiel at Playland Curling Club.

Some relaxation is involved.

The money is good, and so is the opposition. But bonspieling, in contrast to book-pounding, can have its relaxing moments.

The opposition might not see it that way, but Armstrong had his "fun" Friday as the University of Victoria shotmaker started this day as one of the eight unbeaten skips chasing first prize of $3,200.

FINALS SUNDAY

Armstrong, Keith Dagg, Mo Hill, Harry Gulka and Don Moss, all of Victoria; Port Alberni's Earl Ewart; Ossie Isfeld and Bernie Sparkes of Vancouver each posted two victories to move to the "A" quarter-finals — one step away from qualifying for Sunday's eight-rink championship playoff.

The four "A" semi-finalists move into the championship series along with the "B" and "C" event finalists.

Armstrong scored his most notable victory on Friday's opening draw, shading former provincial champion Jack Arnett 6-5. Then Armstrong, a former B.C. schoolboy winner, "relaxed" while routing Al Olson's Winnipeg foursome, 9-3.

HARPER BEATEN

Arnett, Glen Harper of Duncan, Ed Risling of Seattle, Glen Pierce of Vancouver and New Westminster's Trev Fisher were among the highly regarded rinks dropped on the opening day and relegated to a last-chance stand.

Sunday's quarter-final battles will start at 9 a.m., the semi-finals at 12 noon, and the championship playoff at 3 p.m.

Three Shutouts For Duncan Girls

KELOWNA (CP) — Queen Margaret's of Duncan, pre-tournament favorite at the seventh annual high school girls' field hockey championship, carved out a 3-0 record on the first day of play Friday.

Queen Margaret's breezed through three encounters in Section 4, defeating Kelowna 2-0, Columneetza from Williams Lake 6-0 and Burnaby South 2-0.

The other team to advance into today's championship draw from Section 4 was Kelowna, which ended the day with a 1-1-1 record, deadlocking Burnaby South but advancing because of a greater number of corners.

Co-favorite in the playdown, Vancouver's Point Grey, finished first in Section 1 play, ending the day with a 2-0-1 record, defeating Salmon Arm 2-1 and Chilliwack 5-0 and tieing Cowichan 1-1. Cowichan advanced to the championship draw with a 1-0-2 record.

Other teams advancing to the single-knockout championship round were Queen Elizabeth of North Surrey, L. V. Rogers of Nelson, John Oliver of Vancouver, and Rutland.

Ski Jumping Coach

TORONTO (CP) — Slavomir Kardas, 25, a former member of Poland's national jumping team, has been appointed national jumping coach for the Canadian Ski Association.

Victoria Runners In Canadian Meet

Four runners from Victoria and Ken Hurst of Nanaimo were among 22 athletes from British Columbia scheduled to compete in the Canadian cross-country championships today at Edmonton.

Representing Victoria Track Club were Wendy Thompson, who is bidding for the women's title; University of Victoria star Charlie Thorne, in the men's open section; Dave Weicker (junior) and Alan Weicker (juvenile).

Bob Tease, a cadet at Royal Roads Military College, was competing for his home province of Ontario.

Run for Third Down to Wire

The first two positions have been settled but the scramble for third place in the Inter-High Senior Boys' Soccer League won't be decided until all teams cross the season's finishing line on Monday.

First-place Mount View Hornets belted Belmont 7-0, second-place Victoria Tyees tied Claremont 2-2, Esquimalt edged Oak Bay 2-1 and Reynolds blanked Mt. Douglas 2-0 in Friday's schedule. The 14-game season winds up Monday.

Loris Corletto recorded his seventh shutout, Mike Wilson counted three times and Bob Bolitho scored his 20th goal as the impressive Hornets scored their 10th straight victory. Joe Poulton, Rick Matte and Al Moir pumped in the other View counters.

Garnet Moen's goal with 10 minutes remaining gave Tyees their draw against Claremont, unbeaten in its last five games.

'MR. WORLD SOCCER' PEERS INTO CRYSTAL BALL

Electronic Aids for Referees And 'Great Flowering of Skill'

By LEWIS LEVENDEL

LONDON (CP) — Sir Stanley Rous, known as "Mr. World Soccer," predicts that within the next three decades or so soccer umpiring may undergo sharp change, including use of instant television replay and electronic recording of goals.

While the referee will still be the arbiter of whether a ball has crossed the goal line in a legitimate way, the crossing will be registered scientifically, says the 75-year-old Briton who has presided over the International Football Federation since 1961.

In a story on soccer in the year 2001 written for the periodical Inside Football, Sir Stanley peers into his crystal ball and declares referees will command such resources as instant playback of television and film.

"It will be possible for the referee to refer instantaneously to a replay of an incident so that he can clear his mind as to what happened. Since the game is likely to speed up, I can foresee the time when there will be two referees on the field in charge of the game instead of one and two linesmen."

STILL FINAL ARBITERS

He expects one referee will operate on each half of the pitch, but admits this will cause problems of ultimate authority which will have to be resolved.

Although referees will use gadgets in the future, the athletes "must play" to them, Sir Stanley says. "Their decisions are final and must not be questioned."

Worldwide competition between confederations of football associations will grow, and parts of the world which have barely appeared on the soccer scene will become major forces in the game, he predicts. There will be league competitions covering distances which seem impossible today.

He expects with the growth of leisure "a great flowering of skill" in the sport and the emergence of women's soccer in its own right.

In Britain, there will be super or premier leagues, says Sir Stanley, who was secretary of the English Football Association for 27 years before taking up his position with the world body.

BEAT BAD WEATHER

Within 10 to 15 years he expects to see the development of two or three large English soccer centres "which will not be at the mercy of the weather and where artificial grass is laid."

Stadiums of the future are likely to be part of an over-all community centre and not solely devoted to one sport, he writes.

Direct television of events may no longer be permitted but closed-circuit screenings will "certainly" take place, bringing a greater financial return to the sport.

"We must be prepared, however, to fight to maintain certain things we have now. If sportsmanship, modesty in victory and goodwill in defeat were lost to the game, then the game itself would be lost."

BOWLER OF WEEK

Returning to parade of winners in Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest is husky Doug Baird of Youbou, who collected men's tenpin award in fourth week of eighth annual event. Twice-weekly commuter to Victoria for bowling sessions, Baird topped division as he tumbled pins for sizzling 201-214-245—660 series in Sunday's Men's League at Mayfair Lanes.

Pat Paces Cubs Again; Vikings Nip Blues 3-2

The Vancouver Island Hockey League has come up with a slight change in its standings format, but there's nothing different about Pat Askew.

The league switched from a points to percentage format in determining standing because of an unbalanced schedule.

CANOE RACE

Victoria Canoe Club's first major event on its winter calendar will be a 12-mile race on the Cowichan River on Sunday.

Reynolds Rules Roost

Reynolds proved to be the class of the Lower Island girls' high school volleyball championships, but Claremont and Victoria will be right behind when doors open on the Vancouver Island tournament next weekend.

Reynolds won its seventh straight match Friday, defeating Claremont 15-13, 17-15 to move into the Island finals at Campbell River next Saturday. Reynolds topped the eight-team, round-robin preliminary round with a 6-0 won-lost record while Belmont topped its section with a 5-1 mark.

Victoria claimed the third south berth by defeating Belmont 15-7, 15-12 in Friday's consolation final.

A MOST TRUSTED NAME IN TRAVEL

Visit Santa Barbara

Santa Barbara. Beautiful scenery. Beautiful weather. Beautiful holiday.

Santa Barbara is more than a glorious escape to sun and sea and mountain grandeur. Santa Barbara is a precious crystallization of California's richest treasures and pleasures.

Here is where California's Old Spanish heritage flourishes, not only in the famous Queen of the Missions, the historic Presidio, and the Street in Spain . . . but also in the quaint adobes, the ever-present fiesta moods, the pretty tree-lined streets with names like Alameda Padre Serra, Micheltorena, and Calle Palo.

By day, you can enjoy the whole spectrum of land and water sports, or just luxuriate in a long delicious siesta. At night, take your pick from a host of gourmet restaurants offering choice Continental, Spanish, Oriental, and American cuisine.

Too, the city's hospitable hotels and motels provide excellent accommodations, whether your budget is little or lavish. Visit Santa Barbara now. It could well be the most beautiful vacation you've ever taken!

Let me help you plan your visit.

It has one of Canada's finest restaurants. And it goes right along with you as you cross the country. It has a master chef and food so good you'll look forward to mealtimes. There are other conveniences, too. Lounges and a variety of accommodations. Soft music. Air conditioning, of course. Scenic Domes that stay with you all the way. With all this you'd expect the cost to be high. It's not. Call your Travel Agent or CP Rail.

OOPS! BACK TO THE OLD CHESS BOARD

Chess is a game of surprises, some of them shocking Masters as well as novices sometimes find that they have made a gaffe of magnificent proportions, and that the game is over before it has fairly started. Here are some examples, the first from last year's Lasker Memorial, a tournament featuring some fine players, including the victim of this ambush: WHITE: Wasjukov, USSR. BLACK: Settsev, Bulgaria.

Churchill Named

LONDON (Reuter) — Housing Minister Julian Amery has appointed Winston Churchill, 30-year-old grandson of the war-time British leader and statesman, as his parliamentary private secretary. The post does not rank as a government job but is widely recognized as a stepping-stone to ministerial office.

HIS WRITING CAUGHT HIM

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI) — A 16-year-old high school honor student, called "very knowledgeable" in the use of explosives, has been charged with attempted extortion and threatening to blow up the city unless he was paid $1 million in small bills.

The youth was arrested following a police investigation into a letter sent to Orlando city hall demanding the money and safe passage from the country. Police matched the handwriting to that of an earlier letter reporting a bomb which the youth claimed he had found, and which turned out to be a fake.

AFTER OUSTING EX-BOSS RAFFERTY

Winner Riles Plans to Do Job

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Wilson C. Riles, a Negro who ousted controversial right-winger Max Rafferty as head of California's school system, takes a strong position on school standards but none on moving children by bus to achieve racial balance.

Riles said frequently before upsetting Rafferty in Tuesday's election that so called "busing" of pupils should be left to the discretion of local districts.

RILES
. . . first Negro

The first Negro ever elected to statewide office in California, Riles overcame odds of race and anonymity in wresting the sensitive post of state superintendent of public instruction from Rafferty, his former boss.

"I think this campaign proves that people are looking for someone to do a job, whether he's black, brown, yellow or white," Riles said Wednesday.

BACKGROUND VARIED

Riles, 53, a Democrat, won election to the $30,000-a-year post with 3,195,555 votes to Rafferty's 2,716,369.

It was his first venture into politics.

He has been a teacher-principal, worked in the defence industry, joined the U.S. Army Air Corps during the Second World War, afterward obtained a master's degree, served as an elementary school principal and in 1954 came to California as executive secretary of the Pacific Coast region of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, which he describes as a pacifist group.

He joined the state department of education in 1958 as a consultant. Last year Raffety picked him as a deputy superintendent in charge of the state's $100 million-a-year compensatory education program.

TOOK CHALLENGE

Rafferty had rolled up large margins in twice winning his office and won the Republican nomination in 1968 for the U.S. Senate, defeating incumbent Thomas Kuchel. He lost to Democrat Alan Cranston in the general election.

Known as an educational fundamentalist who favors a return to the three Rs and instruction in old-fashioned patriotism, Rafferty, a silvery-tongued speaker intoned against sex education classes, teacher strikes, busing for racial purposes and Communist teachers.

"I saw the system deteriorating under Max Rafferty and I felt very frustrated," Riles said. "So I either had the choice of quitting or making the challenge and I decided to make the challenge."

Rafferty refused to comment on the election.

Riles, who has five children, told reporters that under his administration public schools will be required to set performance and behavioral standards for students and will be held accountable for any failure to meet the goals.

"I intend to do a job for the children of California on that basis, not on any ethnic considerations," he said.

On student unrest: "You can't permit a few revolutionary ones to burn down an institution and create havoc."

Methods Questioned

WINNIPEG (CP) — A former Progressive Conservative cabinet minister has questioned the effectiveness of the RCMP in the Laporte and Cross kidnappings and says methods used by the police should be investigated once the present crisis ends. George Hees (PC — Prince Edward-Hastings) says he wonders what has happened to the RCMP's tradition of always getting their man.

Boffumbled Visitors Beg For Easy Guide to English

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Special to the Times

MANCHESTER — Who says English is one language?

A British engineering firm moved nine miles and then had to call in an interpreter to translate the dialect of its local employees.

When part of the Rowsin Engineering Company moved from the centre of Birmingham to Lye in the industrial Black Country, expressions like "lommock" had them completely baffled.

"Lommock means going wild," said the interpreter, retired trade union official Wesley Perrins.

Boffumbled, he added, means puzzled; Chamboe is to "chew over"; Noggen Yedded means Stupid; Shommock is to shuffle; Lodge means to patch up a quarrel.

'TERRIFYING'

"This Black Country English is terrifying," said draughtsman David Farrow from Birmingham. "We moved only nine miles but it seemed as if we had gone to another country.

"We decided to call in an interpreter. It was the only way."

So the firm hired 66-year-old Wesley Perrins, himself a Black Countryman. He used a blackboard to explain to the 55 newcomers exactly how Black Country dialect is spoken

"They couldn't have moved to a worse place for dialect," he said. "People who live only two miles from here have trouble with our lingo."

'FOREIGNERS'

This is not so surprising in a country where Cornishmen still regard Devonshire people, living just over the border, as "foreigners."

When the BBC started broadcasting radio programs in 1923, it was forecast England's dialects would disappear because of the "standardized" English spoken by the announcers.

On the contrary, a great many people accused the announcers of talking a dialect known as "Oxford," meaning the Oxford accent acquired at Oxford University. Examples of this peculiar dialect are "orf" for off, "crorss" for cross; "Maudlin" for Magdalene College; "Goff" for golf; "Rafe" for Ralph.

I can still remember the time when these BBC announcers gave out batches of popular song titles, mostly American, as they were broadcast from the Savoy Hotel. Something like this:

'BANARNAS'

"The Savoy Orpheans hev just played the following numbahs: 'It Ain't aye-goin' to rain no' mo,' 'I whish I could-er-shimmy like my sistah Kate,' 'Doo Sher-rimps Make Good Moathahs?' 'Yes, we hev NO Banarnas,' 'Er-Show Me The Way to Go Home,' and 'Why did you hev to-er-throw me in the ashcan, honey?' "

Since the Second World War, the BBC's Oxford accent has been considerably modified while accents from other parts of Britain, including Scotland, have been introduced for the sake of variety and local appeal.

Even within the boundaries of Greater London many different accents are still heard, ranging from the "Gor Blimey" of the Cockney to "the bleck cet set on the met" (black cat sat on the mat) favored by the inhabitants of fashionable Earls' Court.

Down in Dorset, when it's windy and wet, they still talk of a "woild noight" (wild night) while in Lancashire a happy event, such as a good party or a popular movie, are described as "a bit of all-reet" (all right).

Cornishmen from the south and Scotsmen from outlying parts of Scotland are practically unintelligible to the rest of Britian unless their accents have been modified in school or university.

Scotland itself has a great variety of accents and the purest of them all comes from Aberdeen; in fact it is often said that Aberdonians speak English "pure and undefiled."

NO PAY, NO SMILE

LONDON (Reuter) — Passengers travelling on Air India flights from London have been warned to expect service from scruffy, unshaven, grim-faced stewards.

Because of a salary dispute, Air India stewardesses also have been ordered by their union not to smile or comb their hair, and stewards to leave their shirttails flapping outside their pants.

Staff at London's Heathrow Airport were warning passengers about the sour faces and the wage claim, which has caused cancellation of some flights.

Etna Erupts

CATANIA, Sicily (Reuter) — A mile-long stream of red-hot lava has oozed from a crater on Mount Etna, Europe's largest active volcano. The lava stream was between two and three yards wide and came from a crater on the northeast side of the mountain.

Man-Made Lake Threatens Rainbow Arch

By SANFORD J. UNGAR

WASHINGTON (WP) — For President William Howard Taft, it was "an extraordinary bridge, having an arch which is in form and appearance much like a rainbow."

So impressed was he with the "example of eccentric stream erosion" that he declared Rainbow Ridge and 160 acres of land around it in southern Utah a national monument on May 30, 1910.

For the last 60 years the sandstone arch—largest natural bridge in the world—has been a favorite shrine for naturalists, conservationists and tourists alike.

Approachable only on foot or horseback, it is large enough to straddle the U.S. Capitol building and wide enough to hold a major expressway.

By next spring, however, Rainbow Ridge may also be reachable by water, and that is what brought the desert monument into court Thursday.

* * *

Two environmentalist groups, Friends of the Earth and The Wasatch Mountain Club of Utah, filed suit in U.S. District Court here to force the interior department and bureau of reclamation to preserve the arch.

Joined by a man who operates tours along the Colorado River, they sought court action to prevent Lake Powell—a by-product of the seven-year-old Glen Canton Dam 58 miles downstream—from invading the boundaries of Rainbow Ridge National Monument.

According to conservationists, the spring runoff from this winter's snows will increase its elevation by at least five feet. It is at that height that the protected area begins.

When the man-made lake reaches an elevation of 3,654 feet, the suit charged, it will begin washing the foundation of Rainbow Bridge itself. Lawyers said this could occur later in 1971.

And that is what President Taft, his successors and the congressmen who authorized the Glen Canyon Dam in 1956 sought to prevent.

If the water is allowed to flow under the bridge, say the Friends of the Earth, it will cause destruction of natural vegetation and leave waterlines on the surrounding canyon walls.

* * *

What is more, "constant wetting and drying of the foundation sandstone may weaken the structure until it crumbles," the lawsuit said.

Two provisions of the legislation creating the Glen Canyon Dam, adopted after heated argument in congress, aimed at protecting the natural arch.

But in subsequent debate, congress refused to appropriate funds for a retainer dam that would have limited Lake Powell's growth.

The only way to save Rainbow Ridge now, the lawyers said, is by careful control of the water flow through the gates of the dam.

It will now be up to District Court Judge William B. Jones whether to compel Interior Secretary Walter Hickel and Ellis L. Armstrong, commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation, to take permanent action

Fiji Centennial

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

Fiji's first postage stamps were released 100 years ago.

To observe the centenary, that newly-independent country placed on sale a photogravure-printed, Victor Whiteley-designed trio Nov. 2, the day after the actual anniversary.

The first set from Fiji (typeset, printed in black on pink-colored quadrille paper by The Fiji Times) consists of four stamps — 1d, 3d, 6d and 1s. On the day they appeared, that newspaper inaugurated a postal system called the Fiji Times Express.

Shown on the new stamps are: 4c, examples of the 1-pence and 6-pence values from the premier set; 15c, six Fijian stamps (from the reigns of King Cakobau, Queen Victoria, King Edward VII, King George V, King George VI, and Queen Elizabeth II); and 20c, the Fiji Times office in Levuka (once the capital of Fiji), and the General Post Office in Fiji's present capital — Suva.

Three offset-printed postage stamps released by Singapore Nov. 1 depict ships. Fifteen-cents, 30c and 75c are the denominations.

Ethiopia issued a trio (15c, 50c and 60c) Oct. 30 They celebrate the 40th anniversary of the coronation of Emperor Haile Selassie I, and each one reprodues a portrait of His Imperial Majesty.

SELASSIE
. . . on stamp

On Nov. 5, the U.S. issued five 6-cent Christmas stamps in Washington, D.C. One represents a painting by Lorenzo Lotto (c. 1480-1556) which depicts Mary and Joseph looking at Christ in His manger. That painting, entitled "The Nativity," is in the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C. The other four (printed on the same sheet) each show a toy from the 19th century, namely: a mechanical tricycle, a horse on wheels, a doll in its carriage, and a cast iron and tin locomotive.

Many post offices in the United States are selling the preceeding set precancelled. Such stamps are valid for use only until the end of January, 1971.

Five lithographed stamps placed on sale Oct. 30 by the Falkland Islands pay tribute to the steamship Great Britain. They depict that ship as it looked: 2d, in 1843, coming out of Bristol's Great Western Dock, where it was built (recently, it was returned to that dock); 4d, in 1845, on its maiden voyage from Liverpool to New York; 9d, in 1876, when it was a full-rigged, three-masted vessel; 1s, as a three-masted sailing ship in 1886; and 2s, in 1970, in Sparrow Cove, Falkland Islands, where it was beached years ago.

A new pair (2c and 10c) from Jamaica record the Jamaica Agriculture Society's 75th anniversary. Both picture bananas, sugar cane, tobacco, and citrus fruit. Designer: G. Drummond They were printed in lithography by Questa Color Security Printers, Ltd., and they came out Nov. 2.

Artifacts are pictured on four multi-colors placed on sale Oct. 28 by Papua and New Guinea. They are: 5c, a Wogeo Island food bowl; 10c, a lime pot; 15c, an Aibom pot for storing sago; and 30c, a Manus Island bowl.

Nov. 1 was the date on which Tristan da Cunha released four pictorials publicizing their crawfish industry, Denominations: 4d, 10d, 1s 6d and 2s 6d.

The Ryukyu Islands issued a 3-cent stamp for Cultural Protection Week Nov. 2.

Last month, the Philippines came out with three photogravure - printed anti - cancer adhesives. They each feature a sculpture of a crab (symbolic of cancer) by the American sculptor Alexander Calder (b. 1898).

Longhair Elected Justice

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Voters of this University of Kansas community trounced a far-out candidate for sheriff this week but another longhair was elected justice of the peace.

"I just stayed in the background and tried to make as little noise as possible," said Phillip C. Hill, 23, who said he thus avoided a write-in campaign against him as he ran unopposed on the Democratic ticket.

George Kimball, the bearded, cowboy-outfitted Democratic candidate for sheriff, who promised to work for legalization of marijuana and LSD, garnered 2,089 votes to nearly 18,000 for Republican Rex Johnson, the winner.

Hill picked up 6,391 votes.

DUTIES LIMITED

The functions of Hill's office are restricted by a 1965 act of the state legislature to performing marriages and presiding in civil suits for damages of less than $1.

Hill said he expected a lot of "50-cent lawsuits charging harassment by police, pollution and mental cruelty by slum landlords."

He also said he will perform group marriages, marriages for homosexuals and heterosexual marriages, "although the latter will cost extra."

Ottawa Unemployment Performance 'Poor'

By THE CANADIAN INSTITUTE OF PUBLIC OPINION
(World Copyright Reserved)

By a more than three-to-one ratio, the general public is critical, rather than approving, of Ottawa's success in handling the unemployment situation.

It's a poor job, say 57%, while only 16% consider it a good one. Another 19% rate it as fair. Highest level of disappointment lies in the ranks of skilled and unskilled labor (63%) and in the province of Quebec, (63%).

In Ontario and the Maritimes, about half the adult population calls the government's performance poor, while the West is almost as critical as Quebec (60%).

Management and Labor see the situation differently. In those homes across the nation, where the head of the household is in an executive or professional capacity, about half (49%) consider the government actions in trying solving the problem unsatisfctory, but almost as many (44%) rate it as either good or fair. In Labor, however, almost two-thirds (63%) say it's a poor job, while only 29% term it good, or fair.

Periodically, the Gallup Poll checks the nation's point of view on this question, by asking:

"ON THE WHOLE WOULD YOU SAY THE GOVERNMENT IS DOING A GOOD JOB, OR NOT A GOOD JOB OF HANDLING UNEMPLOYMENT?"

In 1963, when unemployment was not the wide-spread problem it is today, opinion was reversed. At that time 51% labilled the government's handling of unemployment good or fair, and 33% poor. Today, the figures are almost switched, as 35% think it's good or fair, and 57% that it's not.

CZECHS CAR-CRAZY

PRAGUE (Reuter)—Prague may well be the antique car capital of the world.

Its narrow, crooked, cobbled streets are lined with the coupes, sedans and roadsters of a bygone era. Its main roads echo with the roars, stutters and belches of 1927 Fords, 1935 Mercedes and a variety of Czech-built automobiles, all kept alive and running because of the shortage of new cars.

A new car can often mean a three- or four-year wait and the payment is two or three years' salary. Sometimes the simplest way out is to keep Grandpa's 1924 Fiat running or to rescue a 1929 De Soto from a scrap heap.

The grey-green Bugatti roadster is owned and raced by automotive engineer Miroslav Nadrehal. He won the traditional Zbraslav hill-climb outside Prague recently, covering the twisting, climbing 3.1-mile course in two minutes 59.9 seconds.

Nadrehal said he turned down two offers from westerners for his car. One man offered to buy it for $12,000 and another offered to trade him a brand-new Ferrari. But Nadrehal is not selling — even though the five-litre engine, whose honey-sweet roar has to be heard to be be believed, burned up a half-gallon of expensive gasoline during the hill-climb and he cannot afford to drive it much.

Most of the old cars in Czechoslovakia are pre-war, Czech-made Aeros, Skodas and Tatras, but there are a surprising number of Western machines, relics of the jazz age that have found a loving home in a Communist state.

Sea Travel.

The constellation Virgo: now appearing on P&O Cruises.

There doesn't seem to be much anybody can do about the terrible things the world seems intent on doing to itself these days. But a P&O Cruise can reduce the effect those headlines and news bulletins are having on you.

Time, and an uncluttered view.

Out beyond the territorial limit, world events of another sort are taking place, where you can see them: meteor showers, the passing of comets, the migration of fish and the flight of birds, sunsets, the changing of the moon. Suddenly, there's time and an uncluttered view. At sea, you begin to realize that you are living on an ancient planet, and moving through a natural world.

A new perspective.

Gradually, your whole perspective changes. The daily ship's tote begins to seem more interesting than the stock market. At night, you're free to do what you want, star-gaze, go dinner dancing, drop in on a party, see a movie. Free from the routine clamor of daily life on shore, you find that it's easy to discard old habits and acquire new ones (like reading books). When you arrive home, your interest in the world and the people in it is restored.

Get the other half of the world situation.

P&O can't claim to change the world situation, only the way it affects you. But since you're getting the bad news of the world so many days of the year, don't you owe it to yourself to let P&O show you the other side?

Rich and Provocative Study of Canada; Its People

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Canada and the Canadians is one of the most important books dealing with the nation and its people that has been published in years.

This is no exaggeration. Woodcock in his 344-page book packs so much history, fact, viewpoint and reflection that it will remain for many years to come a valuable source of information.

For example turn to page 152. He tells you in a few paragraphs the history of the North West Mounted Police and when it was united with the former Dominion Police, a federal security force, to become the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

CANADA AND THE CANADIANS, by George Woodcock. Oxford University Press. $8.50.

Then he traces its expansion and growth, makes the observation that it has grown to a monolithic national police force and concludes with the punch line: "Its centralization, its efficiency and even its relative incorruptibility, make it an instrument ready-made for the hands of a dictator."

No one has to accept this observation or many others that Woodcock makes, but he gives the reader plenty to think about. His view of Canada is like that of an outsider scrutinizing all aspects of Canadian life. This is the way books of this type should be written.

Sometimes he is flattering, such as when he says that Canada came into existence because a group of British colonies did not wish to be subjected to the Caesarism that is endemic in the American political system.

As a political being, he says, the Canadian has remained markedly different from the American, experimenting with socialism and social credit, and favoring a parliamentary style of government which avoids the dangers of disguised dictatorship implicit in the American institution of the presidency.

These conclusions are questionable. There is nothing to suggest that Canadians are liberty loving individuals. Thousands today would welcome a two-party government and wish minority political parties blown sky-high.

A year ago when a Toronto University historian advocated a system of government similar to that of the United States, not a word of protest was heard. The historian's view was that the English parliamentary system became obsolete when the franchise was granted to all classes.

Perhaps if Woodcock had dug a little deeper, he would have come to the conclusion that Canadians got their system of government by 'chance,' and are not truly appreciative of its advantages.

The second part of his book discusses the Canadian class system, the rich, the poor, the Indians, the Eskimos, Canadian cities and various aspects of the nation's politics. There is little he misses and some of the things he says on these subjects will irritate some readers.

On the Canadian class system, he points out quite correctly that it differs from that of England and France. British and French workers still take pride in the code of manners of their class, and in the very fact of being workers. That is, they consider themselves equal if not better than those of other classes.

But he observes the successful skilled artisan in Canada will do his best to imitate the life style of the lesser executive or the lawyer, because this is what the cinema, television and the press have conditioned him to envy.

To quote Woodcock: "I know one part of suburban Vancouver inhabited mostly by foremen and well-paid technicians. The ranch-style houses, with their manicured lawns and gardens in the Pacific Coast manner, are almost as large (though more cheaply built) as those of doctors and professors who live in the University Endowment lands: almost as pretentious as those of the executives who live on the mountainsides above West Vancouver.

"All three groups in their leisure hours try to carry on the same kind of easy, self-indulgent, gadget-adorned way of life, a life idealized in a local snob magazine like Vancouver Life . . ."

And he points out that while class barriers are not impenetrable, the workers, no matter how skilled or well paid, do not mingle with the doctors and managers and the lawyers.

Woodcock could have been somewhat blunter and said the class system — the same as in the United States — is linked with the gross national product.

Its barriers are rigid and some historians are now beginning to wonder if North America's violent society is not partly due to this class system.

The strange thing is that many Canadians think they have no class system. They get hot under the collar if you tell them so.

Woodcock writes an excellent chapter on Quebec and its politics and has a deeper understanding of French-Canadians than most Anglo-Saxons. But he misses some points.

For example, many literate French-Canadians argue that English-speaking Canadians are rejecting their English culture to become part of the American melting pot. They are justified in thinking that way if one looks at the books in use in English schools and universities.

The French-Canadian definition of culture is also more basic and down to earth. Language is the main ingredient. As one politician put it, "Nous some Canadiens, mais notre culture est Francaise."

It's easy for the English-speaking people to set themselves up as separate identities, to dissect and to differentiate, when they control most of the world's resources and occupy vast global areas. But if they were a minority struggling for survival and believed they had a destiny to fulfill, their attitudes would be quite different.

This English-speaking Canadian smugness and hypocrisy with regard to culture is detested in French Canada.

In the opening paragraph on his chapter "Pyramids of Prosperity and Power," Woodcock states: "Canada is a rich country scarred by poverty, a democracy governed and controlled by elites restricted by class, race and creed. It is a land where lethal discrimination does not exist, but where the fact of being a Catholic or an Indian or child of a poor family may have a considerable and detrimental effect on one's future. It is a land of disparities, regional and human."

A lot of research went into this chapter and his image of Canada is supported with plenty of facts.

As this book discusses so many aspects of Canadian society, it is difficult to give an overall picture of its content. It has to be read from cover to cover. The reward is a realistic picture of Canada.

There are few writers today who can cram so many facts and thoughts in one sentence. Woodcock doesn't waste words, nor does he pull his punches.

The Winnipeg-born author, now a resident of Vancouver, is a prolific and versatile writer. He won the Governor-General's award for The Crystal Spirit: A Study of George Orwell in 1966.

His book The British in the Far East is a classic.

Canada and the Canadians is illustrated by more than 80 excellent photographs taken by his wife, Ingeborg, as well as a number of maps.

But the author made one mistake when he referred to Vancouver's depressed district. It's not Skid Row, Mr. Woodcock, it's Skid Road, from the loggers' vernacular.

Prophetic Epitaph Of a Way of Life?

By STEVE HUME

"In those days shall men seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them."

Writers these days are not much on quoting scripture to prove their points. The Bible doesn't hold much water with technical men when it comes to authority.

THE DOOMSDAY BOOK, by Gordon Rattray Taylor. Oxford University Press. $6.50.

It is entitled Population Crash and it describes the prophetic vision of a world in which a third of the trees and green grass is burned off, the waters and air are poisoned, a third of sea life has perished, and many men are dying in agony.

Revelations has always been taken as the prophetic, apocalyptic description of events just prior to and including Armageddon.

In the context of Taylor's writings that vision isn't symbolic, it's an accurate description of what's happening in the world today and how it will shape the world of 30 years from now.

And Taylor's view cannot be described as anything but apocalyptic.

The author of the controversial book The Biological Time-Bomb turns himself to problems of environment and ecology in The Doomsday Book.

"Look 30 years ahead to a time when the world population has doubled and national income per head is three to five times the present figure and what do we see? At best, a way of life marked by stress diseases and frustration, with a majority of the world population living in megalopolises of fifty million inhabitants or more. At worst, a disturbance of the balance of nature which could eliminate whole species, even man himself.

"The technological dream is becoming a nightmare and it is time to wake up, or we may die in our sleep."

Any way you look at it, Taylor's book is a tome of disaster that is packed with enough facts for the expert but is general enough for the dilletante.

The writing is excellent, the scope is wide, and the factual aspects are accurate and fully documented.

It is a book that will be remembered for a long time.

And, unfortunately, if Taylor is right, one way or another, it will be remembered as an epitaph on a way of life.

One way or another, because as Taylor explains in his lucid and fast-moving prose, things are either going to get better or they are going to get a hell of a lot worse — they can't continue as they are.

Starting with the problems of over-population as his basic premise the author expands his thesis to deal with the technological offshoots of over-crowding.

He uses the analogy of bacteria growing in a petri dish culture, expanding until the wastes generated by the population are so extensive they destroy life itself.

Taylor talks about he population boom and the population crash. He does not talk about the possibilities of the crash, he talks about when it will occur. The only possibility he discusses lies in the realm of alternative causes.

In 1916 four or five Sika deer were released on James Island in Chesapeake Bay, half a square mile of uninhabited territory less than a mile from shore.

By 1956 the population was 300. An ethologist began watching for a population crash predicted after a certain density was reached.

In the first three months of 1958 half the deer were dead. Deaths continued the next year until the population levelled off at an optimum 80.

This, Taylor says, is normal for a population crash. It falls to around one-third the original level extremely rapidly.

And what killed the deer, he points out, was not poison, famine or fighting. It was stress caused by overcrowding. That fact, he points out, has been scientifically substantiated beyond a doubt.

"Man is in no way exempted from the laws of population growth. He has rejected the practice of infanticide, but he has, up till now, been able to expand into new territory, thus avoiding the build-up of stress.

"But now expansion is becoming very difficult, while his preference for living in ever-larger cities introduces a new element into the situation.

"Is it now likely that he will be constrained by stress more than by starvation? In either case, biology suggests that the population will not merely press against the limits, as Malthus supposed, but will decline catastrophically."

A BOOK OF FUN AND ERUDITION

By ELIZABETH BENNETT

The Book of Beasts, a translation of a 12th century beastiary by T. H. White, is the kind of book that would be at home equally in a posh library or a dentist's office.

THE BOOK OF BEASTS, by T. H. White. Clarke, Irwin. $20.

It is a book for all seasons and all kinds of people.

It successfully combines fun with scholarship. The appendix and foot-notes are feasts of information, but can easily be ignored.

The fantasy is more or less restricted to distortion. As White points out, about 90 per cent of the beastiarist's animals bear some sort of resemblance to real creatures, which considering that 12th century communications was a giant game of whispers, is quite remarkable.

The morals he finds in the habits of the animals are both wonderful and hilarious. "Christ is as the littlest elephant," he explains at one point, while elsewhere he claims that the devil and the partridge are very similar.

No one could write a book like this today. No flight of imagination could compare with man's confusion when he first tried to see order in nature.

On the Track Of Jungle Explorers

By TORCHY ANDERSON

Like to stroll along forgotten and overgrown byways of History — and with an interesting guide? Then this is your book.

It meanders through the jungles of central America when Spanish, English, French and Dutch were exploiting, exploring and buccaneering in the carefree manner of their day.

Timothy Severin is an Englishman who, in other books, has tracked Marco Polo and early explorers of the Mississippi.

THE GOLDEN ANTILLES, by Timothy Severin. Random House. $10.95.

He begins with Sir Walter Ralegh (he favors that spelling). Ralegh like most of his contempories believed in El Dorado — the mythical king of the South American interior who lived on a lake.

It was the custom to sprinkle this king with gold dust before he jumped into the lake for a bath. No matter how much this sounds like a TV commercial a lot of lives and money were spent looking for him. Ralegh failed twice, tragically.

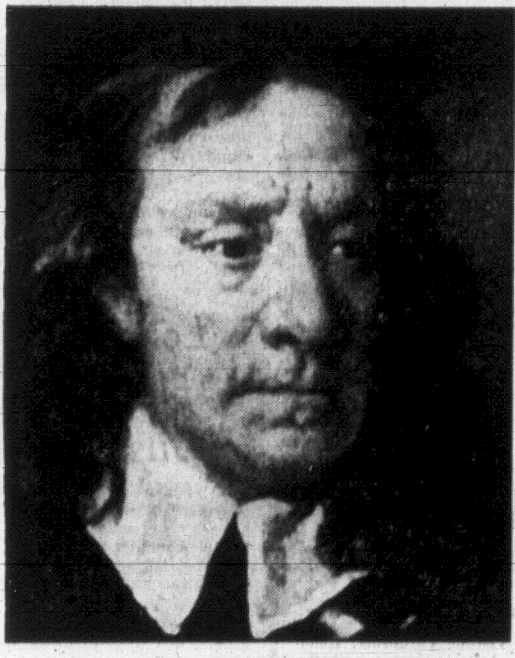
Wafer's story is one of the most fascinating in the book. Promoters used it to persuade the thrifty Scots to invest virtually all the loose money available in Scotland at that time in a great scheme to colonize the Panama coast and form a gigantic trading centre.

The financial loss resulting from the utter failure of this scheme was exceeded only by the loss of eager, ignorant men. Today Caledonia on the coast of Darien is not even on the map.



OLIVER CROMWELL

A Man for His Times

By DAVID DUNSMUIR

And now for today's look-alike game, kids . . . lengthen Spiro Agnew's patent-leather hair to the shoulders (we dare you), change the piggish glint of the eyes to something more patrician, dab on a wart or two, and who shows?

Oliver Cromwell, that's who.

Perhaps the resemblance is only skin-deep. Across more than three centuries, though, an air of stolid self-righteousness links the two in their political morality as well as their physical appearance.

GOD'S ENGLISHMAN, by Christopher Hill. Ryerson. $9.95.

When it comes to personal tolerance, similarities end. England's country gentleman wins by a country mile.

Cromwell is still a bogey to Britain's minorities. The Scots remember butchery at Dundee, and their bitterness pales beside Irish emotion over the massacres of Drogheda and Wexford. English memories are mixed: of a champion of common sense and property rights, of a psalm-singing desecrator of churches who was too stiff-necked to heed advice (even from the Mother of Parliaments!) and too narrow-minded to rule wisely.

Christopher Hill, master of Balliol College at Oxford, has already published half a dozen books on religious and social thought surrounding England's brief and bloody rejection of kingship. His latest work suggests that Cromwell deserves kinder treatment from most historians.

By then, of course, the more-or-less-legitimate monarchy had been restored, after an embarrassing attempt to govern by Cromwell's milksop son. As Hill makes clear, the protectorate reached and maintained its greatness only through one man's strength of purpose, one man's readiness to wait patiently upon the Lord.

Even Charles II, with an understandable bias against Oliver's policies, could not — or dared not — change the drift of history.

Cromwell was no democrat by modern standards, he was not even enlightened enough to be a Republican. His government, according to John Milton, was "only as good as the stubborn struggles of the wicked citizens allow it to be"; papists, atheists, and Anabaptists were strictly non-persons.

His government can fairly be described as the best that the times would permit. It broadened the base of electoral power and achieved its greatest triumphs by conciliation, not by the sword.

Dealing with the factions of his day — the Byzantine protestants of parliament and of the standing armies — Cromwell seems to have been guided by an honest concern for his countrymen's well-being. The execution of a monarch, like other events, stemmed from pragmatism rather than ideology.

Those who feel that the issues of the Commonwealth are long gone (though how can anyone ignore the news from Belfast, Washington or Montreal?) might think about Cromwell's response to advice that his plans were against the will of the people, with nine out of ten against him:

"But what if I should disarm the nine, and put a sword in the tenth man's hand? Will not that do the business?"

Thus it was to be a prisoner of grace. Still, from an oppressive age there is comfort in Cromwell's later reprimand, "In things of the mind, we look for no compulsion but that of light and reason."

His biography shows that he meant what he said, and battled prayerfully against those who placed ideology above all else. He was true to his principles, but he was true to God's other Englishmen as well.

Depressing View of Indian Plight

By JOHN GIBSON

How a People Die is less a novel than a personal memoire. Alan Fry has had 15 years of experience as superintendent of various Indian agencies in Western Canada and he has put down some of his thoughts and conclusions. Unfortunately, the experiences and thoughts have not been distilled, and this book remains the raw material from which a novel might one day be written.

A small child dies. The Indians drink and fornicate while the white administrators argue about their failure to bring the good life to the Kwatsi reserve. Alcoholism is a symptom of chronic poverty. But increased welfare payments bring dependency and apathy. Education fails. The men do not find work. The children are neglected. It is all very depressing.

HOW A PEOPLE DIE, by Alan Fry. Doubleday. $5.75.

Mr. Fry's hero, non-heroic to the end, searches for the truth, but he is only concerned with a bureaucratic truth. He sees the Indian way of life totally within the context of the Indian Act or department regulations or band budgets or vote numbers. One feels that if Indian agencies and superintendents ceased to exist the Indian population would wander helplessly towards a new Stone Age.

We may all be heading in that direction, and no one has a final solution to the human condition. But the pessimism of this book is unrelieved. Perhaps it is an indictment of the whole system whereby priorities are passed from Ottawa to the Agency superintendents who, in turn, make suggestions to band councils.

Should the Indians have different priorities, the superintendents become frustrated; they have not been successful. In fact, of course, success on those terms would be unconditional surrender by the native Indian people. Mr. Fry's book seems to indicate that the administrators are retiring in confusion and that the outcome of the struggle is undecided.

A very heavy and almost endless responsibility rests on the shoulders of the man who administers an Indian Agency. Interference and non-interference can be the same thing. Each can cause harm.

Government directives have to be interpreted to suit local conditions but in such a way that no one is fired. Prejudice and discrimination exist in many white communities through which the superintendent passes in the course of his day. There are disagreements between government departments.

Mr. Fry mentions that the superintendent was often involved in the removal of Indian children from their homes although this was normally the responsibility of the provincial authorities. He thinks that residential school is better than a broken home and a drunken mother. He suspects that poor people cannot judge another way of life.

Can rich people for that matter? Or white people? It seems not.

Banff Theatre Shows Us Way

By MAUREEN DUFFUS

BANFF — At a cost of $46 million Ottawa has acquired a mammoth national centre for the performing arts.

For $44 million less, this little town in Alberta has acquired a three-part theatre complex, ingeniously designed to meet the needs of the town and the Banff School of Fine Arts.

The theatre's artistic director, Laszlo Funtec, pointed out that ten cities across Canada could have had similar centres, all built for $26 million less than the one centre in Ottawa cost.

In designing the three-part complex Funtec and his colleagues insisted on practical, functional perfection as well as architectural suitability.

The result is a triumph, in a country noted for spending millions of dollars on buildings that look impressive but don't work.

An airy, informal foyer around three sides of the auditorium is more than large enough to avoid the intermission overcrowding of older theatres.

An added bonus: comfortable chairs to sit in and enjoy pictures, view or conversation.

■

Funtec found time between a performance of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, and a reception for the company in the foyer later, to give a quick guided tour of the theatre complex.

Next to the Eric Harvie is the Margaret Greenham Theatre which includes large classrooms and rehearsal rooms.

An important section of this wing is the 300-seat rehearsal theatre, a versatile area used as a pre-performance warm-up studio or for experimental theatre.

For rehearsal, the stage can be cut off from the steeply-tiered audience seats by tall triangular pillars designed by Funtec.

The solid seeming but easily movable pillars can also serve as backdrops for theatre-in-the-round or other experimental work.

The recently completed teaching wing provides additional classroom and practice facilities for theatre arts and musical theatre, opera, ballet and graphic arts.

Large seminar rooms, with seating around a central point rather than in conventional rows, can also be used for lectures, seminars and conferences.

Backstage facilities of the complex include a costume room, with sewing machines lined up by large windows, and open storage space for costumes.

The Banff theatre, as part of the School of Fine Arts, was designed with emphasis on teaching.

Other cities could modify designs to provide maximum facilities for community needs.

Victoria, for instance, would need adaptations including a larger theatre with from 2,500 to 3,000 seats, more emphasis on convention facilities.

The Banff theatre has already been used as an example for a similar project in Austria.

To Publish Nikita's Memoirs

NEW YORK (AP) — Life magazine and Little Brown and Co. announced jointly Friday they will publish the memoirs of Nikita S. Khrushchev, the son of a poor coal miner who rose to lead the Soviet Union in the cold war.

In announcing the forthcoming publications, a spokesman for Time Inc. gave no indication of how the 275,000-word manuscript was received, but said the publishers were convinced of its authenticity "without any doubt."

Little Brown will put the volume, titled Khrushchev Remembers, on sale Dec. 21. Life will publish excerpts in four successive issues, beginning with the Nov. 23 edition.

Edward Crankshaw, a specialist in Soviet affairs and author of Khrushchev—A Career, wrote an introduction. The Time spokesman said Crankshaw reacted to the manuscript, saying:

"What we have is an extraordinary, a unique personal history."

The Western world has had little contact with Khrushchev since his retirement in 1964 — an event shrouded in mystery.

In Stockholm, literary sources said Friday the memoirs of Khrushchev have been smuggled out of Russia — possibly without his knowledge. The manuscript comprised little more than 100 pages, the sources said.

The sources said the memoirs contain references to Stalin, the power struggle between Malenkov and Kaganovich and the Middle East and Cuban crises in the early '60s.

The Life instalments and the book will both contain previously unpublished photographs, the Time announcement said. The Book-of-the-Month Club will distribute the book as a selection in early 1971.

'EDIFICES REEK WITH NOSTALGIA'

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (UPI) — The outhouse, probably the first type of building constructed by pioneers here, has been outlawed by the city council because they are no longer desirable in a city that hopes to "wear the mantle of progressiveness."

Said a local newspaper:

"Certain edifices which not only reek with nostalgia, but have for some years provided Fairbanksans with refuge and an opportunity for meditation, may no longer grace the city landscape."

Travellin' Man Slows

By AUDREY JOHNSON

When and why is a performer semi-retired? And what is he anyway?

He's not a has-been necessarily. But he might be classified as a drop-out, or better still, an opt-out.

John York elected to leave the non-stop, high-gear speedway he has been travelling in order to live longer at a lower tension — to enjoy life and leisure while at the same time keeping his hand in.

One of the most recent arrivals in this city's ever widening circle of professional artists, the towering, club-touring purveyor of folk music and racy humor has been semi-retired here for just about one month.

* * *

And right now he's busy with plans. Like forming a back-up group for his song-patter-and-strum act and assembling ideas for a television show that would surround his own music and humor with interviews on a local and international scale.

The six-foot-six Vancouver-born entertainer started his career in Toronto along with Gordon Lightfoot and Ian Tyson, worked down into the United States and soon became a headliner, appearing with people like Josh White — "I was with him in the last concert he gave before his death" — Wilf Carter, Sonny Terry, Brownie McGhee and others.

He also taught Joni Mitchell to play the guitar.

Performing all kinds of music on his 12-string instrument, singing, satirizing, telling jokes and indulging in repartee, York spent more than a decade travelling around North America.

Especially well known on the West Coast circuit, he has appeared at San Francisco's hungry i and at one time owned a string of five clubs, including one in Victoria.

He was the first imported star to appear at the late lamented Secret Coffee House in this city, has sung on various occasions at the University of Victoria, and been a headliner at the Alberta Jubilee Auditoriums and the Calgary Stampede.

* * *

Once regarding himself as a strictly serious singer of pure folk, he has adapted to the demands of club patrons and provides a well-spiced sophisticated brand of entertainment these days.

Is Victoria a good town for John York?

He can't know for sure after one month's residence. But there's no doubt, he says, that it offers the artist something close to the ideal existence in climate, beauty and serenity.

As to opportunity — the other side of the semi-retired bit — he's setting about making that for himself.

Australian Problem

CANBERRA (Reuter) — The beer-swilling Australian male is not just a national stereotype but a reality, says a study on alcoholism.

The study, made by a research team from the University of New South Wales, concludes:

"Alcoholism constitutes a major public health hazard and there is overwhelming evidence that heavy drinking is the characteristic pattern for the entire adult male population of Australia."

MUNRO'S BOOKSTORE

753 YATES ST. 382-2464

HERE ARE THE NEW BOOKS AND A FEW OLD FAVORITES FOR FALL 1970

CIVILIZATION
By Sir Kenneth Clark. This beautiful book was prepared to parallel the enormously successful television series now being shown. The text closely follows and rounds out the narrative of the series. There are 286 illustrations, 48 pages in colours. $16.75

THE NATIONAL DREAM
The Great Railway 1871 - 1881, Pierre Berton. A vivid account of political intrigue, adventure, idealism and chicanery. This is Berton at his best, and his telling of the events leading to the building of Canada's first transcontinental railroad makes fascinating reading. It's not disturbing reading. $10.00

SIBIR
My Discovery of Siberia. Farley Mowatt. The author travelled 29,000 miles in Siberia and visited regions not seen by any western man since 1917. This is the lively and anecdotal account of his travels. Autographed. $10.00

BIRDS OF THE EASTERN FOREST No. II
Victoria's Fenwick Lansdowne did the superb paintings, and John Livingston, one of Canada's best known naturalists did the text in the third volume of their widely acclaimed series. 60 full colour illustrations. Autographed by Lansdowne. $19.50

COLOUR OF CANADA

BALL 4
Jim Bouton. A thoroughly honest book about baseball. It's funny, candid, revealing. The most controversial sports book of 1970.

VANCOUVER
Eric Nicol. Humorist Nicol outlines Vancouver's development from its earliest exploration and settlement to its still growing present. A witty and superbly documented chronicle of all aspects of Canada's most youthful city. $8.95

INSIDE THE THIRD REICH
Albert Speer. By far the most extraordinary and startling book on Hitler and the Third Reich from the pen of one of Hitler's most intimate associates. An engrossing portrait of Hitler and his entourage by a close friend. $12.50

SEXUAL POLITICS
Kate Millett. The relationship between the sexes is and always has been a political one—a continuing power struggle in which women are sometimes idolized, other times patronized, always exploited according to Miss Millett. To support her theory she examines the work of important culture heroes including D. H. Lawrence, Norman Mailer, Henry Miller and Sigmund Freud. This is a brilliant book written with style and wit. $9.50

EVERYTHING YOU ALWAYS WANTED TO KNOW ABOUT SEX
This book has been on the best seller list for a very long time. Uninhibited, funny, informative, honest and factual. $8.50

ISLANDS IN THE STREAM
Ernest Hemingway. Here is the major novel long rumored to have been left among Hemingway's writings at the time of his death. It tells of the life of a painter living on the island of Bimini in the Gulf Stream and in Cuba in the 1930s. A major work. $11.95

A bursary fund benefit for the Conservatory of Music, the revue will be seen Wednesday through Friday at McPherson Playhouse.

Gallery Needs More Than a Patch

Sounding Board

. . . By Audrey Johnson

It seems, on the evidence, that in the whole of Canada only in Victoria has a major art gallery received such shabby treatment and been faced with such a situation as ours.

This week the municipalities — belatedly—have indicated they apply a patch that will temporarily heal the financial gap.

But unless the situation is dealt with sensibly and in an enlightened manner on a basis of greater security for the future, we must stand revealed to ourselves, never mind others across the country, as either (a) the poorest capital in Canada (b) the most miserly, or (c) the most culturally obtuse as far as administration is concerned.

Many of us — and I'm not speaking of those whose prejudice on behalf of one form of activity makes a blind spot in any other direction — could point to areas in this city where community funds are being wasted.

But from close personal observation I would say unhesitatingly that every grudging dollar the municipalities have put into the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria has been an investment that has returned a high rate of interest.

Over the years the Gallery has brought many of the world's masterpieces to our people. Indeed it could have done much more along these lines if funds had not always been so scarce.

If it were forced to close, an important educational service to our school population would be eliminated and so would the wonderful and productive (from a mental health as well as an artistic point of view) children's non-profit art classes.

Also the city would be infinitely the poorer because there would be no repository for its due share of the world's art treasures.

We would then be faced with the distressing fact of many beautiful and valuable treasures being bequeathed by Victoria and others to nearby and more fortunate cities.

●

I would suggest that the municipal and city administrations consider this fact:

Years ago when the trustees of Emily Carr's estate were seeking a home for the works of this now world-famous artist they had no alternative in their desire to keep the collection intact but to place it in the Vancouver Art Gallery.

There was no Victoria Art Gallery equipped to receive it. If there had been this native Victorian's work might have proudly resided in her home city.

From its beginning many people, most of them voluntarily, have worked hard and with devoted enthusiasm and generosity to the end that today Victoria can boast — though officially it has little right — of a gallery that is considered by experts to be second to none of its size in Canada, and which possesses a million-dollar permanent collection.

Knowing something of the tremendous strain which working with a total staff of four has placed on its director, Colin Graham — knowing and deeply admiring his dedication, his patience under all the adversities that have been placed upon him by the short-changing policies of the various civic administrations, makes me ashamed.

Ashamed especially to catch the grudging note in the press release concerning the providing of a little extra grant money.

Close budgeting, anxious financial scrutiny, economies continually practised to the absolute margin of artistic integrity, have never relaxed from the very beginning when the gallery inhabited an automobile showroom on Yates Street.

Anyone who knows this must have felt his hackles rise when he read Alderman Tom Christie's comment that it didn't seem to him "that frankly they are managing their affairs properly."

Are the aldermen ignorant of the fact that all the money for the new wing which will provide seriously needed housing for the permanent collection, was raised by the gallery board through private subscription?

●

With the horrible example of the library board's actions in regard to our library and the shambles that has resulted including the injustice to librarian John Lort, we, the public, have a right to shudder apprehensively.

The thought occurs that we will wake up some morning to find a computer-minded, push-button oriented gaggle of management consultants prowling through the art gallery.

It could happen. As long as our city administrators cannot or will not perceive that art galleries, symphony orchestras, libraries and the like must be on a totally different footing in a business sense to commercial and industrial concerns.

And so long as they allow their personal indifference to these amenities to cloud their judgment.

Aaron Copland: One of Select Few

By PAUL HUME

Next Saturday, Aaron Copland will celebrate his 70th birthday, and a great many musicians and music lovers will be celebrating with him. One of the astonishing facts about Copland is that he bears no resemblance to a man who is about to turn 70.

He looks and acts as freshly vigorous as ever. He plays the piano in chamber music and occasionally in his own concerto; he conducts the major orchestras of this country and, each year, at the request of the musicians of the London symphony, he goes to London for concerts and recordings.

In the world of recordings, Copland has made his mark as few composers ever have, for he is one of the select band of men who have lived to see all of their compositions recorded under their personal supervision and with their own participation.

Thanks to this series, it is possible to study and enjoy at length a remarkable body of music which expresses in a rich variety of styles and idioms much that we think of today as most characteristic of the American music of our time.

* * *

The fact that it seems right to say "of our time" in speaking of a man who is now reaching his 70th birthday also says quite a bit about Copland's continuing development.

Like most of the leading composers of today, Copland has met his share of resistance from both performers and audiences. Unlike some of his contemporaries, Copland, by his own announced, deliberate decision, altered his manner of composing precisely in the hope of writing in awareness of a "new public for music . . . grown up around the radio and phonograph." He decided "to see if I couldn't say what I had to say in the simplest possible terms."

Hindsight, coupled with our acquaintance with many new sounds and ideas in music, make it easy for us today to listen to Copland's early Dance Symphony, or his 1925 Symphony for Organ and Orchestra, or the now widely accepted Piano Variations and to hear them as familiar, logical, impressive milestones in the music of the U.S.

In common with many composers of his post-First World War generation, Copland turned away from the idea of writing for huge forces and, at the same time, from the custom of writing symphonies in numbered series from one to four, or nine, or for that matter, 25.

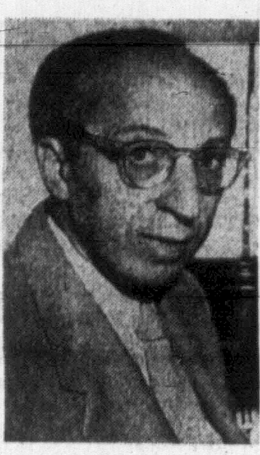
* * *

Instead, his symphonies are the Dance Symphony, the Organ Symphony, the Short Symphony, and finally the Symphony No. 3, actually his fourth work in this form, and the only one to carry a number rather than a more desciptive label.

Along with his more progressive colleagues, Copland was fascinated with the possibilities for symphonic treatment of the ideas underlying jazz. His early, larger works contain elements taken over from the world of jazz which is hardly surprising in a man who was raised as a piano-playing kid in Brooklyn.

The piano has always been Copland's first love among instruments, just as his first recital was a 1915 Brooklyn Academy of Music event by Paderewski.

One of the things that fascinated young Aaron was the fact that Paderewski was both pianist and composer. The strongest guiding influence in his years of study came when he went back to France in 1921 to the newly-forned school of music for Americans at Fontainebleau. It was not his assigned teacher, however, who fired up the young American's imagination and determination, but a teacher of harmony and orchestration.



COPLAND

Long before anyone was getting heated up over women's lib, this woman was producing the greatest effect on the world of new music of anyone then teaching. Her name was Nadia Boulanger and she had taught at Fontainebleau in the summers and at her own studio in Paris in the winters ever since the time Copland first visited her classes.

He once wrote, "No one to my knowledge had ever before thought of studying composition with a woman . . . everyone knows that the world has never produced a first-rate woman composer; so it follows that no woman could possibly hope to teach composition."

* * *

Years later, Copland was to cite as the most important event of his life, "My introduction to Nadia Boulanger and her acceptance of me as a pupil!"

Following the time that Copland decided to reverse the trends in his own composing, we can list some of his most famous and often-played scores: El Salon Mexico; the ballets Billy the Kid, Rodeo, and Appalachian Spring, and the opera, "The Second Hurricane," written for New York's High School of Music and Art.

Because of its extra-musical content, Copland's most frequently played work may well be "The Lincoln Portrait," for which the composer made his own choices among various Lincoln speeches and writings, adding a brief commentary. There is an extraordinary eloquence in Copland's use of folk song in this score.

That is, however, only one facet of Copland. For his total repertoire has its share of completely unprogrammatic works, such as the thorny Connotations, which was commissioned for the 1962 opening of Lincoln Centre's Philharmonic Hall.

* * *

Copland has contributed with signal beauty to a few films, including "The Heiress," "Red Pony" and "Our Town."

While Copland's songs and choral writings are less well known, the unaccompanied choral work, "In the Beginning," written for the 1947 Harvard symposium on music criticism, and his set of 12 Emily Dickinson songs rank among the finest achievements in their fields in American music.

As a writer of music, Copland has proven one of the most lucid and successful translators to tell laymen something of the inner secrets and outer esthetics of music.

'SPRING THAW' RUNNING OUT?

TORONTO — The annual theatrical production Spring Thaw may not be produced in 1971 for the first time since it originated 23 years ago.

Mavor Moore, who holds rights to an annual show of that name, said in an interview he has no intention of doing the show next year and does not think anyone else will.

"I would love to see that tradition maintained," he said. "I'd like to see it done as it was originally, as an intimate, modest production, emphasizing sharp satire sweetened by a great deal of fun.

"I don't think it should ever be turned into a spectacle."

Howard Bateman and John Uren, the producers of last year's show, introduced spectacle to the production by including a nude scene.

Mr. Uren said in an interview he now thinks the market was right for satire and not spectacle.

Robert Dubberley, of the St. Lawrence Centre of the Arts, said it is already too late to get the show ready for a January opening.

"Spring Thaw, as a property, is by no means dead," he said. "I just think it is too late for this year," he added.

The show has traditionally opened in Toronto and toured to other Canadian centres.

On Stage Next Week

Two largely different programs will be danced by the Royal Winnipeg Ballet in their Victoria Symphony sponsored appearance at the Royal Theatre, Sunday and Monday. Classical and contemporary works will be performed on both occasions which begin at 3 p.m. and 8:30 p.m. respectively.

Victoria City Police Youth Band is scheduled to present a concert at McPherson Playhouse Sunday, starting at 2:30 p.m.

A Thurber Carnival, a unique revue type show with music will be seen at McPherson Playhouse, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday with curtain at 8:15 p.m. A preview matinee will be held Wednesday exclusively for students and Silver Threads.

Friday's Noon Music at University of Victoria will present student ensembles at 12:30.

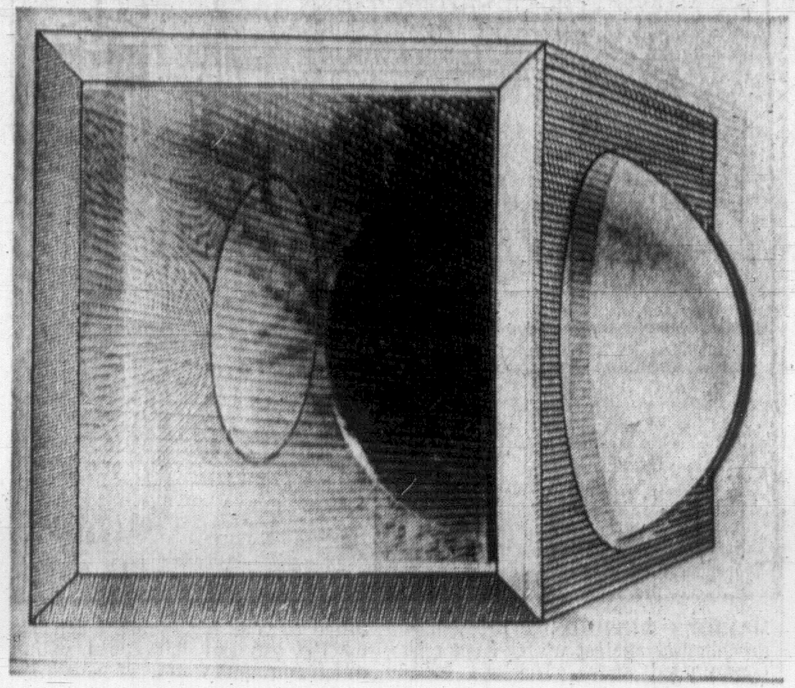
Sculpture Mirrors Traffic of Ideas

Looking at Art

. . . With Gordon Rice



Untitled Sculpture/Drawing by Jack Kidder

Sculptor Jack Kidder has been working on a large construction called "Triplum" for almost two years now. It was in his first show (early last year) but in incomplete form. The now completed piece is twice as large, standing almost seven feet high.

"Triplum" is a conspicuous feature of Kidder's present show at the Print Gallery, which runs through November 27. It is unlikely that any viewer, regardless of age or background, will miss the extraordinary quality of craftsmanship, artistry, and imagination this work contains. They may be surprised to learn that the artist has been doing such work, here in Victoria, for almost six years now and almost without notice.

"Triplum" contains so much work and so much expense that the artist reckons that if he ever managed to sell it (for its present price) he would be making about 25 cents an hour in wages. Were it exhibited widely one would not worry over its fate so much. It would be serving its purpose, blowing people's minds.

As it is the city lavishes its "cultural" attention on dead geniuses like Beethoven and Shakespeare, believing that either no such quality is available today among live artists, or else feeling that the latter's "time will come" some two hundred years hence. A dangerous procrastination!

Fortunately there are some younger people, and some adventurerous older minds, who have discovered Kidder's work. Young people have no trouble understanding these pieces, and you will find them tripping out on them, as was the case in last year's show.

Kidder is a master technician in steel and plastic, materials we live with every day. This is one of the reasons which gives you an immediate rapport with his work. But what holds you is the surprise that here, for once, these materials are employed in the service of poetry, to launch you into wider realms.

Some of the smaller, newer pieces in the show will be used (in photo form) as illustrations for poet Mike Doyle's forthcoming book, "Earth Meditations." The photographs are exhibited here too, in large "photo-mural" blow-ups, along with the original pieces.

It is seldom one find works of art that profit from enlarging; on the larger scale these small white box-constructions really "carry." One realizes that they are miniaturized monuments . . . monuments in that they suggest immense scale. One also realizes the perfection of the details by these blow-ups. Some, over six times larger than the original pieces, seem in fact to be reductions of giant architectural pieces.

Several contemporary trends are absent from Kidder's work. The ironies of Pop art are too topical, too temporary to interest him for long. Irony hasn't the height, depth, or width we need to graps the complexity and subtlety of ideas, events and feelings in which we're immersed today.

Conceptual art, "idea" art, can perhaps suggest more, though it often seems little more than an intellectual game. Shunning beauty and emotion, it lacks force.

Beauty and poetry and emotion are a continual concern in Jack Kidder's work, as they are in the most forceful and vital (and important) art of our day, rock music.

He's ontinually had to shelve plans to extend his art by incorporarting moving parts, lights, and electronic sound through lack of proper assistance.

"Classic" and rock experiments in electronic sound have been of continuous interest to him, as well as an immense traffic of ideas passing through literary, media, and conversational channels.

His is highly individual work, and yet always related somehow to cosmic process and order, universal order.

The marvel that we seem to be passing into a deeper understanding of this order, and the peril that we face as our eyes open wider are the two elements you see throughout this artist's work.

Terms like "atom," "sun", "bomb", "brain", "time", and "space" will no doubt echo through your mind as you view the pieces he's made. Yet the longer you look the more you realize that there are other qualities here, ones which perhaps can only be suggested by analogy to music and poetry.

EXPOSING WILD WEST MYTH

Theatre of the Absurd playwright Arthur Kopit is most widely known for his farce with one of the longest titles in show annals — Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mama's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feelin' So Sad.

Last year his new play, Indians, took critics by storm.

The satirical piece will be seen, starting Thursday, at University of Victoria's Phoenix Theatre. It is an all-student production under the direction of John Krich.

Performers include Billy the Kid, Jesse James, Ned Buntline, Wild Bill Hickok and assorted politicians and their victims — Geronimo, Chief Joseph, Sitting Bull and others.

As they re-enact their parts in the conquest of the West, the legend of the western hero bravely taming a savage land is shown to be a fraudulent mythologizing of greed and stupidity, just as the Wild West itself was.

Setting is by Robert Cothran, costumes by Rosemarie MacNeill and music by Christine Chester.

The show will run through Nov. 21, including Sunday, starting at 8 p.m.

Two special public lectures pertaining to the play will be given. On Thursday at 12:30 p.m., Dr. Brian Dippie of the history department will lecture in the theatre, and Dr. Ann Saddlemyer will speak in the upper lounge of the Student Union Building at 12:30 p.m., Friday.

Weak Play, but Pure Vonnegut

By RICHARD L. COE

NEW YORK — To those who have discovered him, Kurt Vonnegut Jr. is one of the best of today's modern American writers: humorous, fantastical, trenchant and with it. That he has written a play, "Happy Birthday, Wanda June," is good news for the theatre.

It is not a good play, not even a satisfying one and often you itch to re-work it and tinker with it while it trundles along.

But the essence of Vonnegut is here, the outlandish but wholly credible characters, the sense of loony fantasy, the concise, literate dialogue and the sharp social criticism that so endears Vonnegut to the young.

"Happy Birthday, Wanda June" revolves around a roistering American he-man vanished in the Amazonian jungles eight years ago, a Hemingwayish fellow who fought in the Spanish war, killed the Nazi gualeiter of Yugoslavia with his bare fists and, to hear him tell it, took every woman he wanted.

One of these was Penelope, his third wife, a former Hamburger Heaven car hop who, after eight years of apparent widowhood, is about to agree with the insuracne company that Harold Ryan is dead. Trying his best to keep her from remarriage and himself from a stepfather is her son, 12-year-old Paul. There are two suitors: a placid, peace-loving doctor and a vacuum cleaner salesman who cons 30 grand a year from his trade.

Like his obvious inspiration, Ulysses, hero Harold comes back from the dead with his pilot-pal Capt. Looseleaf Harper, the man who dropped the bomb on Nagasaki. How will the returned heros be received?

Looseleaf is shaken to find bare bosoms visible on the newsstands. "They must have changed the law," he reasons. "I think something very big must have happened while we were gone." To the vacuum salesman, a Little League enthusiast, the return of his girl's husband is a thrill. To the doctor, the larger-than-life hero is an old-hat fraud.

About the son, Penelope admits "The only thing I've told him about life is to stay out of the park after the sun's gone down." Introducing him to his father, she proclaims: "There stand the loins from which you sprung." But Harold sniffs at the kid: "We're going to have to do something to make this boy's voice change."

Penelope sums up the theme in these words: "The old heroes will have to get used to it. The new heroes will refuse to fight."

Vonnegut, then, is tearing apart the past, declaring this is the time for new rules, much as he does in "Slaughter House Five." The themes he stated in "Mother Night" are reiterated in heavenly interludes, a heaven where Christ and Hitler might well join the shuffleboard games that occupy the Wanda June of the title.

She's the child who got killed by a truck on her and Harold's birthday, which is why the bakers had a leftover cake iced with "Happy Birthday, Wanda June."

TIPS FOR HOME GARDENERS

Greenhouse Warming Plans

By JACK BEASTALL

Before going into methods of frost protection for a small greenhouse it would be wise to review a few facts.

We know that warm air rises and cold air drops, giving frost in gardens at the bottom of a hill while gardens at the top remain frost free.

A slight breeze will stir the cold air, mix it with warmer air, and immediately the temperature rises a few degrees.

The same happens in an unheated greenhouse. The cold air settles to ground level and warmer air collects in the peak of the roof.

A variable speed electric fan set on the ground, pointed to the roof, and operated at low or medium speed, will mix the cold and warm layers of air and the thermometer at bench level will rise a couple of degrees in a few minutes.

Here we have the simplest form of frost protection. It is the method used in some citrus groves in California and Florida.

Another way of preventing frost damage indoors is by using heat to raise the temperature. To gain any measure of success with the minimum of fuel it is necessary to know some basic facts about heat rays and heat radiation.

The sun emits short waves to the earth. These rays do not give up their heat until they strike a solid object. They do not heat the air; they heat solid objects that come in their path, and the solid objects radiate heat waves.

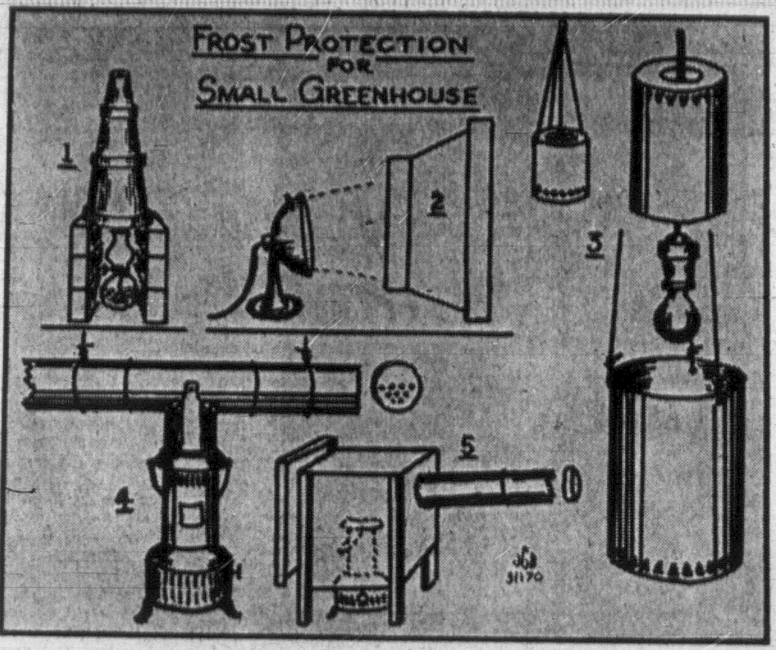
The short waves easily penetrate the glass in the greenhouse, and give up their heat to objects and the soil inside. But the heat waves these objects radiate are long waves which do not pass through glass, therefore they are trapped in the greenhouse and the temperature rises.

Once the greenhouse owner understands this principle of radiation from a heated surface, he can keep frost out of a small greeshouse with the minimum of fuel consumption.

The illustration shows various methols I have used, and are given here as ideas for the handy man to adapt to his own conditions. Remember, we are not trying to heat a greenhouse to provide winter growing conditions. We are attempting to reduce the number of plant losses in a house without an elaborate heating system.

Sketch No. 1 is a simple radiator described in gardening books written over 100 years ago, and still widely used. It consists of a stack of clay pots of different sizes, a few bricks to support them, and an old kerosene lamp.

The lamp heats the air inside the pots, and the pots radiate heat from their outer surfaces. It is sometimes necessary to enlarge the holes in the bottom of the lower pots in order to get sufficient heat into the top of the stack.



VARIOUS METHODS of protecting greenhouses against winter frost are diagrammed above. The one best suited to your requirements depends on the physical limitations within which you must work.

Electricity is a convenient form of heating today. A 60-watt light globe has little effect on the temperature in a cold greenhouse, but when enclosed in a radiator the effect will record on a thermometer.

Sketch No. 3 illustrates this method. First cut a hole in the bottom of a large juice can so it will rest on the cap of a porcelain socket attached to an extension cord. Also punch large holes in the sides of the can near the solid end. Use a 40 or 60 watt globe in the porcelain socket.

Next, take a gallon can, punch holes all around the sides above the solid bottom, and attach three wires to the open end to hang on a nail in the roof.

The large drawing shows the separate parts and the small sketch shows the unit in use. Hang it near ground level. When the cans are warmed they will radiate heat waves and start the air circulating.

The use of two cans is to prevent light from reaching the plants during hours of darkness. This is important where growing plants are concerned.

The electric portable heater is used in many small greenhouses, but few make use of the radiating principle. Beam the heater to a sheet of galvanized iron (sketch 2) and you will get higher temperatures for the same consumption of power.

The devices shown in sketches 4 and 5 employ the portable kerosene heater. For small houses a six-inch tee pipe coupled to lengths of stove pipe works well. The tee sits on top of the heater and the pipes provide the radiating surface.

An alternative is to place the heater at the cold end of the greenhouse, and use a 90 degree elbow instead of the tee. Suspend the pipes on wires so the heater can be easily moved for servicing. A tin lid cap with holes punched over one-half its surface goes over the far end of each run of pipe to hold back the warm air.

Sketch 5 is an elaboration of this idea. The heater is placed in a bottomless box made of scrap pieces of galvanized iron nailed to wooden legs, with a loose lid on the front for easy removal of the heater.

The radiating surface is again six inch stove pipe fitted to the back of the box and suspended just under the bench. The rate of air flow through the pipe is controlled by changing the level of the pipe and capping the end with a perforated lid.

All these devices need some experimenting to obtain maximum results. The slope of pipes, and the size and number of holes in the caps have to be determined by trial and error.

When using oil lamps and heaters, keep the flame low for the first 10 to 15 minutes after lighting. A high flame will cause condensation on the lamp globe or heater body and result in a lot of unnecessary smell. Warm up slowly, then a high flame to heat the whole unit, and after it has heated turn down to lowest point that will maintain a warm radiating surface.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

Best time to plant roses early this month. Keep graft point two inches below soil surface.

Climbing plants put in now will be ready to grow in spring: clematis, ivy, jasmine, honeysuckle, ampelopsis (Boston-ivy) and wisteria.

Herbaceous plants best left undivided: Romneya coulteri, Clematis recta, Bocconia cordata (Maclaya cordata) and fleshy rooted anemones.

Cuttings of many hardy shrubs will root in spring if taken now for overwintering in coldframe or other slight shelter. Callusing takes place during winter and roots form in late spring. Deciduous shrubs such as mock orange, forsythia, weigela, roses, privet and escallonia will give fair percentage of success with this method.

Wood ashes and pieces of charcoal should be kept in covered can for use in vegetable rows in spring.

Draw soil up to brussels sprout stems, make firm.

Still time this week to sow dwarf broad beans and early (smooth seeded) peas.

FASCINATING STUDY OF POLITICS

DALTON CAMP

Readable Account Of an Era

By
ANTHONY WESTELL
Special to the Times

OTTAWA — New information on one of the most fascinating feuds in Canadian politics between John Diefenbaker and Dalton Camp emerges today.

Camp discloses in the first volume of a political biography that he began to have serious doubts about the chief as long ago as 1956, on the morning after the day Diefenbaker was elected Conservative leader, and 10 years before he deposed him.

Comfirming what had previously been private dinner table talk, Camp tells how he was summoned to the chief's dimly-lit hotel room at 8 a.m. to take part in an extraordinary conversation which set alarm ringing in his mind.

* * *

He realized, he says, that here was a very complex and perhaps dangerous man, as Diefenbaker—sprawled on the bed amid piles of newspapers and telegrams of congratulations—dropped mysterious hints, talked of his alleged humiliation by Tory leaders years before, and demanded to see all the mail going in and out of Tory party headquarters.

"I felt a nearly overpowering sense of claustrophobia, and a desperate urge to escape this dim, stale-smelling room," writes Camp. "Perhaps it would be different later in the day, in an office, in the sunlight."

went on to play a major role behind the scenes in the 1957 election which made Diefenbaker prime minister.

He packaged and advertised the Diefenbaker party, a new brand name for the Progressive Conservatives that year, and devised and organized the Maritime strategy which, he says, helped to put the chief over the top far more than his own Prairie supporters.

This first volume, Gentlemen, Players and Politicians (McClelland and Stewart Limited), ends with that election of 1957, toppling the arrogant Liberals, and Camp writes:

"But the triumph was complete. The tragedy was only beginning, as with the first flicker of sensation too fleeting to be recognized as pain, but which heralds the certain death of a dream."

* * *

He is now gearing for the second volume which will carry him to 1966—10 years after his first serious doubts—when as Tory president he set about mobilizing the party to overthrow Diefenbaker, and to the 1967 leadership convention.

It should be a fascinating study of politics, for Camp writes with wit and style and commendable candor about people still active in public life and events which remain controversial.

He sets a new standard for Canadian politicians who have usually been unwilling to write frankly about their own experiences until it can be of interest only as history.

* * *

Quite apart from his importance as the deadly adversary of Diefenbaker, Camp is one of the most engaging men to have been prominent in politics in recent years. In the words of a friend, he "combines the art of the publicist with the values of an intellectual." Which is to say, that while he knows more about making political images than any other Canadian, he is deeply concerned also with the content behind the image.

It is a serious misfortune that in destroying Diefenbaker, Camp made himself so unpopular with sections of the Tory party that he is barred from the centre of power. He cannot even be seen to be assisting Robert Stanfield, the man he helped to make premier of Nova Scotia and groomed to become national leader, succeeding Diefenbaker.

But while Camp is out of national politics, at least publicly, and says he has no plans to run for election, he still serves the art of politics and of democratic government by writing this revealing book.

It is largely a thoroughly readable account of the nuts and bolts of politics, of the manoeuvres and methods, triumphs and tragedies, of the election campaigns in which Camp has participated, mainly as an advertising expert.

* * *

It is also, of course, as are all good biographies, an exploration of the author by the author. Camp is exploring his own political roots and motives, how he was part of the Liberal establishment when still a young idealist, became disenchanted by the clay feet of power, was radicalized by the famous socialist professor Harold Laski at the London School of Economics, and became a Canadian Tory in his home province, New Brunswick, to fight the Grits.

Camp, in other words, was motivated not so much by the philosophy of conservatism as by that great power house of Canadian dissent, Anti-Liberalism.

The dream was to cast down the Grits, which he helped to do in 1957, erecting Diefenbaker in their place. Then, when the dream died, he cast down Diefenbaker, and helped to put in Stanfield.

Camp went last month to Nova Scotia to help elect the provincial successor to Stanfield. When he failed and the election was lost, he commented: "Scratch one expert."

But he has too much to tell in his next volume, and too much to contribute to current affairs, to accept that judgment.

Announcers Must Dress To Read

LONDON (AP) — Does dress make a radio newscaster?

Ray Beaty, 35-year-old manager of Radio Leeds, thinks so and has ordered announcers to wear dinner jackets at the microphone when they read the evening news bulletins after 5 p.m.

"An announcer is influenced by his dress," says Beaty. "If he wears a sweater his reading may be sloppy."

"We have no rule about dress," a BBC spokesman said, "and local stations are the responsibility of the individual station managers."

David Williams, one news reader on Radio Leeds, protested the order as "waste of time" and ealled a union meeting to fight the move.

Beaty said he was "all for improving the BBC image" and explained announcers would be given a special dress allowance "to cover this sort of thing."

Lord Reith, the BBC's first director-general, made all announcers wear evening dress in the 1920s. But the rule was quietly dropped before the Second World War.

Birtwistle — Hewko

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Frank Birtwistle are pictured here following their wedding which took place at 3 p.m., Sunday, October 18, on the birthday of the bride's mother, in Parkdale Evangelical Free Church. Pastor C. Klassen officiated. The bride is the former Carmen Estelle Hewko, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald J. Hewko, and the groom is the second son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Birtwistle.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in short white crocheted lace dress over beige taffeta. Her headpiece of studded pearls held her chapel length veil and her corsage was red roses. Maid of honor, Miss Roberta Davies wore a yellow short dress and yellow rosebuds in her hair, while bridesmaid Miss Linda Birtwistle chose a short pink dress with pink rosebuds in her hair. Both carried corsages of white carnations. The groom and his attendants, Mr. Larry Ritchie as best man, and Mr. Reginald Hewko as usher, were dressed in blazers and flannel pants. Mother of the bride chose a yellow linen dress with yellow carnation corsage and the groom's mother, a beige coat-dress with pink carnation corsage.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for immediate families. Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Charmley of Nanaimo, longtime friends of the family, were the only "out of the family" guests. Mr. Charmley acted as Master of Ceremonies and proposed the toast to the bride, and also to the bride's mother on her birthday. The bride proposed a toast to her mother, also.

Gillis — Hobbs

A double-ring ceremony was solemnized on October 17, 1970, at 7:30 in St. John's Church, when Laura Lorraine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. K. H. Hobbs, Beechwood Avenue, exchanged marriage vows with Gordon D. Gillis, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. O. Gillis, Victoria, B.C. Canon G. Baker and Father M. O'Connell officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in an elegant full-length empire-styled wedding gown of Chantilly lace, with a portrait neckline, long sleeves ending in lilypoints. A front panel of Paloma silk was bordered with deep scallops of Chantilly lace. Small covered buttons centred the full cathedral train that swept back from the shoulders. A bouffant veil of silk illusion misted from a floral headpiece. She carried a cascade bouquet of red roses and stephanotis. Her jewelry was an opal pendant and matching earrings, gifts of the groom. Matron of honor, Mrs. Kathleen Phillips, sister of the bride, and attendants Mrs. Lynda-Lee Gillis, Misses Janet Medd, Dale Forgie and Michele List wore identical gowns in pastel shades of lace and crepe with scoop necklines, three-quarter sleeves and empire-styled waists. They carried bouquets of tipped carnations to match their gowns. Best man was Mr. Patrick Phillips, and Messrs. Donald Gillis Jr., Ralph Gillis, Greig Campbell and Keith Hobbs Jr. ushered the guests.

A reception was held at White Eagle Hall, Dock St. The bride's table was decorated with a lace tablecloth and silver candlesticks, centred by a three-tiered cake made and decorated by Mrs. Ann Grexton, aunt of the bride. Mr. P. J. Medd, uncle and godfather of the bride, proposed the bridal toast.

Lindsay — Spicer

A lovely double-ring ceremony was performed on October 10, 1970 at 8 p.m. in the Victoria Truth Centre when Darlene Anne, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold G. Spicer of Victoria, became the bride of Mr. Tim Lindsay, younger son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Lindsay, also of Victoria. Dr. Emma M. Smiley officiated at the wedding.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in a floor-length entrain gown of peau d'elegance, featuring bell sleeves and scoop neckline, and wearing a cathedral veil with crocheted edges. She carried a colonial bouquet of pink rosebuds and stephanotis. Matron of honor, Mrs. Lynda Webb, and attendants, Miss Colleen Spicer, the bride's sister, and Mrs. Carole Zilkie wore matching full-length chiffon over taffeta orchid dresses and carried colonial bouquets of mauve and white carnations. Mr. Ed Life was best man, and the ushers were Mr. Trevor Davies and Mr. Arch Byatt. Soloist at the church was Mr. Ron Webb who sang "Walk Hand in Hand."

For travelling to the Hawaiian Islands on their honeymoon the bride wore a lime basket weave walking suit, with black and beige accessories, adding a corsage of yellow carnations. The happy couple is now residing at 1701 Cedar Hill Crossroad.

Alexander — Coles

A double-ring ceremony took place October 23, 1970, at 6:30 p.m. in Garden City United Church, when Reverend E. W. MacQuarrie united in marriage Shelley Lea, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Coles, Glanford Avenue, to Robert Edward, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Alexander, Lampson Place.

The bride was attended by Miss Janice Irwin as maid of honor, and her sister Teresa Coles as bridesmaid. Best man was Bob Crook, and Mr. John Hamilton ushered the guests.

A reception followed in the church hall.

Vaughan — Sirett

Parksville Pentecostal Church was the setting for a wedding August 29, when Nancy May, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Sirett of Parksville, became the bride of Gerrard Arthur, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward G. Vaughan of 2941 Queenston Street, Victoria. Reverend William Mercer officiated at the double-ring ceremony. Mrs. Wendel Strom of Nanaimo, friend of the bride's family, played the wedding music.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a nylon and lace empire-waisted gown with a full attached train. A four-tier bouffant veil was held in place by a delicate crystal and pearl headpiece. She held a cascade of pastel carnations. Runie Graaten of Coombs was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Heather Robinson of Campbell River, Gloria Cowper-Smith of Vancouver and Gail Vaughan of Victoria. These pretty attendants wore like mini-dresses in pastel green, lilac, yellow and turquoise. Each wore a wide-brimmed sun hat made of matching dotted swiss. Steve Connor of Vancouver was best man. Ushers were Jack Sirett of Parksville, Trevor Cardin and Bill Carlson of Victoria.

The mother of the bride chose a coordinate coat and dress ensemble in tones of avodaco with white accessories. The groom's mother chose a peach shantung coat and dress ensemble with bone accessories. During the signing of the register Mrs. Strom played an organ solo "O, Perfect Love."

An informal reception and smorgasbord dinner followed in the Canadian Legion Hall. Reverend Mercer asked the blessing. Bernie Delgatty, uncle of the bride, proposed the toast to the bride, to which the groom responded. During the dinner, telegrams from Flin Flon, Calgary, and Kenya, Africa, were read by Dennis Sirett, master of ceremonies. Tea and coffee were poured by the groom's grandmother, Mrs. John H. Vaughan, and Mrs. Charles Loader, great aunt of the bride, following which the bride and groom passed the wedding cake to their guests. Joan Vaughan, sister of the groom, was in charge of the guest book. The majority of the guests were from Vancouver Island. Guests from farther points were from Vancouver, Kelowna, Edmonton and Selkirk, Manitoba.

For travelling, the bride wore a purple crimplene coat and dress ensemble with white accessories. After their short wedding trip to Quadra Island and northern Vancouver Island, the young couple resumed their studies at the University of British Columbia, in Vancouver.

Griffin — Martin

Reverend W. E. Greenhalgh officiated at a double-ring ceremony in the St. Michael's and All Angel's Anglican Church on September 19, 1970, at 2 p.m. when Suzanne Sisco Martin exchanged wedding vows with William Howard Griffin, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Griffin. Guest organist was Mr. Reginald Stone.

The bride was given in marriage by Mr. A. J. Heighes, and was attended by Mrs. Annegret Schubert as matron of honor, Miss Joan Heighes as bridesmaid and Miss Sandra Falt as flower girl. Mr. David Bendall attended as best man and Mr. Dennis Griffin ushered the guests. A reception followed at the Deep Cove Chalet.

After a honeymoon trip to the B.C. interior and Alberta, Mr. and Mrs. Griffin are residing at 4126 Quadra St.

Humber — Pick

The wedding of Mary Dianne Pick and Richard Bruce Humber took place in Hawaii, October 27. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Jean Anderson Pick, 2024 Middowne Road, Victoria, and the late Mr. A. F. Pick, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Humber, 3270 Norfolk Road, Victoria.

The newlyweds are spending an extended honeymoon travelling in the South Seas and touring the world.

Callow — Butt

The marriage is announced of Mrs. Anne Butt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Proctor, 1642 Pembroke Street, to Captain Brian Callow, RCN, of Victoria.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

The gratitude in our hearts could never be fully expressed, but we want our friends, relatives and neighbours to know how much the kind words and expressions of sympathy have meant to us during our recent time of sorrow in the sad loss of our husband and father, Mr. Edward Thomas Ash.—Mrs. Eileen Ash, sons, Peter and Michael, Victoria.

9 IN MEMORIAM

GELAUDE—In loving memory of our beloved husband and father, Robert G. Gelaude, who passed away Nov. 7, 1969.

Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear.
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps him dear.

—Ever remembered and sadly missed by your loving wife, Audrey; daughter, Patricia, and sons, Brent and Derrick.

LOCKETT—In loving memory of my husband and father, Fredrick William Lockett, who passed away Nov. 8th, 1969.

One year has passed
since that sad day,
When one we loved
was called away;
God took him home—
it was His will,
Within our hearts
he liveth still.

—Ever remembered by loving wife and family.

LOCKETT—In loving memory of our Dad, W. Lockett, who passed away November 8, 1969.
—Sadly missed by us all.

SELLORS—In loving memory of my dear husband Frank, who passed away November 8, 1968.

Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear,
Fond memories linger every day,
Remembrance keeps him near.

HAVE YOU BEEN CONTEMPLATING THE PURCHASE OF A NEW OR LATER MODEL CAR . . . but you don't want to pay finance charges?

WE HAVE A SUGGESTION. Why not buy a 1970 car with a five year 50,000 mile warranty . . . the money you save on your cost of operation with this warranty will probably pay your finance charges.
It doesn't really matter whether you call it "finance charges" or "maintenance" does it?

Examine these values!

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY REAL ESTATE

We all know that residential prices have come down since the high in 1969.
BUT—
we are firmly convinced that the bottom has been reached. Many people have been waiting for Mortgage Interest rates to come down. This may now prove to be false economy. By waiting for a possible reduction of 1 or 2 per cent (which may not happen) you may have to pay 5 per cent, 10 per cent or even more, for a home next year. How can prices come down with labour costs rising sharply? DON'T DELAY — There are many modern homes available today at below replacement cost.

TREED SECLUSION in a TUDOR MANOR HOUSE on FIVE-MILE CIRCLE

Architect designed and built in 1960-'61 to the lines and decor of the famous English Manor Houses, this property offers the epitome of gracious living and is only available through the unexpected transfer of owner. The wide tiled steps lead to a main hall with bow-windowed 18½ sq. ft. living room with brick feature fireplace and bookcases. Opposite is a pleasant 10 ft. sq. den and 13½x14 formal dining room with servery from kitchen which has ample cupboards and breakfast area. A large utility-sewing room and 2-pce. powder room completes the main floor. Upstairs there is a 13½x14 Master B.R. and guest B.R. plus a large dormered children's room (or studio?) Downstairs is part finished with an authentic English Inn rec. room plus development space. Flooring, heating, wiring, etc., is all in line with the top quality materials used in construction. The treed lot with lawns and flowers is fully fenced and gated and a sweeping drive leads to 2-car garage. We are privileged to offer this excellent property below replacement cost at $42,500. On your early decision, possession can be given for Xmas, financing can be negotiated. We believe this to be a "one of a kind" property and if your taste is for period reproduction then an early appointment to view is recommended.

Dornhoefer Idle As Knee Acts Up

DETROIT (AP) — Right winger Gary Dornhoefer of Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League re-injured his knee before Thursday's game with the Red Wings and was sent back to Philadelphia for treatment.

LEASH FATAL FOR CYCLIST

The victim, whose identity is being withheld by police, was found hanging with his hands tied behind his back.

Police, who found numerous motorcycle tracks near the tree, said the motive for the slaying may have been a dispute between rival gangs.

HERB TRIED HARDER HE'S STILL SECOND

FELDKIRCH, Austria (UPI) — Herbert Stock may have his faults, but he does try to be on time.

Police said Stock, 20, stole a car so he could drive 32 miles to this Austrian town where he was scheduled to go on trial — for car theft.

En route to Feldkirch, Stock was stopped by police and arrested for car theft. Then the police brought him to the court, where he was fined for being late, despite his plea that he would have been on time if the police had not stopped him.

Stock's trials on the old and new car theft charges were postponed.

Sikh Priest Speaks Here

Sikh missionary Lachman Chellaram of New Delhi, India, Friday, completed a three-day service here at the Sikh Temple, Topaz Avenue.

Chellaram left India a year ago, and has since travelled 99,000 miles around the world to acquaint people of different faiths with the message of Nam, "proclaimed and preached by Guru Nanak Dey, the founder of Sikhism 500 years ago."

Here for his second time in three months, Chellaram will now visit Lake Cowichan, Nanaimo and Port Alberni.

Travellers On Increase Across Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Travel between Canada and other countries showed a marked increase in July from a year earlier, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Friday.

The number of overseas visitors entering Canada rose by 9.7 per cent to 105,000, while the number of Canadians returning to Canada from overseas was up 3.3 per cent to 86,900.

Nearly 6.6 million visitors came from the United States, an increase of 4.2 per cent, while the number of Canadians returning from U.S. points rose 3.4 per cent to more than five million.

The bureau also reported that in the first seven months of 1970, the number of Canadians returning from overseas rose 18 per cent, U.S. visitors rose 4.2 per cent, and Canadians returning from the U.S. rose 1.9 per cent.

Sound Waves Replace X-Rays

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A new technique using sound rather than radiation or X-rays to view inner parts of the body was introduced this week.

The acoustical holography machine could eventually replace X-ray machines which have potentially damaging effects from radiation, said an official of Holosonics Corp. which holds patent rights for the new equipment.

Two sound waves are directed toward the body area which is submerged in water, the official said. Ripples of the two waves are then read by a laser and reflected onto a viewing screen.

Solzhenitsyn, whose writings are banned in the Soviet Union, was recently named winner of the 1970 Nobel Prize for literature.

Ehrlich will speak at 12:30 p.m. Tuesday in the MacLaurin building auditorium. He is part of the university lectures series.

Ehrlich has written two books, Russian Formalism, and The Double Image Concepts of the Poet in Slavic Literature." He is currently editing an anthology of modern Russian criticism.

A SPOT OF TEA HELPS WHEN GOING'S HARD

LONDON (UPI) — Thieves who cut and burned their way into the vaults of Lloyds Bank, aided by the noise of Guy Fawkes Day fireworks, paused for tea before leaving with loot that could amount to tens of thousands of dollars, police said today.

The thieves opened 95 safe deposit boxes and departed with cash, jewelry, rare coins and stamp collections in a robbery Thursday that may have taken all night to complete, bank manager Guy Piddlocke said.

"They were in there for some time," a police source said. "When the detectives got inside the vault they discovered the thieves had used some of the staff's tea and milk to make some tea. We're now checking for fingerprints on the two dirty teacups."

Arsenal Closes In On Leeds

LONDON (CP) — John Sewell scored a goal two minutes from the end to give Crystal Palace a dramatic 1-1 draw today with Leeds United as two London teams closed in behind Leeds in the race for the English League soccer title.

Arsenal squeezed out a 1-0 victory at Blackpool and Tottenham Hotspur hammered last-place Burnley 4-0.

Board Backs Rejected Hoop Coach

DETROIT (AP) — The University of Detroit athletic board voted unanimously Thursday night to support University of Detroit basketball coach Jim Harding — whose entire 16-man varsity basketball team has refused to play under him.

The U of D squad, three white and 13 black players, announced earlier Thursday that they would not play basketball at the university until Harding is replaced as coach.

Charging Harding with "physical abuse of the ballplayers" and "insulting language," they sent a letter to Father Carron advising him of their action.

Harding immediately denied the charges and, according to the Detroit Free Press, called his players "a pack of liars." He placed them all under suspension.

Ranger Winger To Undergo Tests

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Rangers announced Friday that right-winger Bill Fairbairn has returned from California to undergo examination for possible mononucleosis.

He missed one National Hockey League game earlier with what was diagnosed as a case of the flu. But when his condition did not improve, the Rangers, who are in California this week, had him examined by the California Seals' physician who ordered him home.

CARDINAL ENTHUSIASTIC AT NATIVE CONFERENCE

'Self-Determination for Indians Becoming Reality'

By JIM NEAVES

EDMONTON (CP) — The fight by Indians to regain the right to self-determination and to make the decisions themselves which affect their everyday life is making excellent progress, Harold Cardinal, president of the Indian Association of Alberta, said Friday.

Mr. Cardinal said a three-day, association-sponsored conference on the economic, social and human development of the Indian was an "ambitious undertaking and I think it came off extremely well."

The conference was attended by Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien and Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson in addition to Premier Harry Strom of Alberta and senior officials from both levels of government, business and industry leaders. There were representatives from almost all the 42 Alberta reserves among the 200 persons at the conference which ended Friday.

"The fact that we were able to bring them all together and get an expressed willingness from both levels of government that they would work together for us instead of hiding behind issues is, in itself, a big step forward," Mr. Cardinal said.

One of the major issues the Indians voiced was the ease with which governments sidestepped issues by "passing the buck."

SUGGESTS COMMITTEE

Mr. Chretien suggested a committee be established made up of federal and Alberta government officials and Indians to resolve questions of jurisdiction. Municipal Affairs Minister Fred Colborne said the Alberta government would support such a committee.

"I think it's going to be a little more difficult for anyone to buck-pass in front of us because we want, and are determined, to move forward," Mr. Cardinal said.

One of the youngest Indian leaders in Canada, Mr. Cardinal, 25, said basically all levels of government share the Indian's determination,

"I think our presence will make it easier for them to work together."

He said the development means a move to a co-ordinated effort by the Indians and governments, "and possibly industry," to try and solve the economic problems facing the native people.

Mr. Cardinal, in an interview, said there now is much more consultation with Indian people.

"We are being listened to—the last 18 months of our struggle has finally paid off."

CAN ENTER DIALOGUE

He said this will allow the native population, through the association, to move into a "new phase where we can enter into a meaningful dialogue with both levels of government.

"The consultation that is being discussed right now is on the Indians' terms and this is a great improvement."

The association plans to focus its activities in three areas, social problems, education, and economic development.

"We believe the only way the social problems can be alleviated is by new directions in the education field and we have taken, and will continue to take, strong initiatives in this direction," he said.

"We feel that by combining an economic development approach and an educational approach that we may be able to help the process of solving the social problems that face our people."

Mr. Chretien assured Indians that the era of paternalism toward them was dead. He said it was time for a new ideology—a new system of relating their aspirations to government.

He said Indians have a part to play in proposing, planning and doing and, in this atmosphere, will gain new confidence that there are no secrets, no masked intentions—only problems which together can be solved.

But Mr. Strom said Indians want to take advantage of some of the benefits offered by society but at the same time decline to adopt the value system that goes with it.

"It is far from clear what kind of a mix between these two sets of values the Indian people want."

He said governments must be made aware of the goals that the Indians themselves are attempting to reach.

Mr. Strom added that modernization can be achieved without the destruction of the Indian culture because it is a minority's right to embrace the society of which it is a part without rejecting its own values and lifestyle.

Recipe for Hospital Cheer: Take a Pink Lady or Two . . .

By ANN DUNSMUIR

A Pink Lady, to most adults, means the cocktail hour and the knowledge that too many Pink Ladies are not a good thing.

Children on the wards of the Royal Jubilee Hospital can't imagine a situation where there could be too many Pink Ladies.

To them a Pink Lady is the eagerly awaited play lady who comes twice a day with toys and — most important of all — time to spend with each child.

The children chose the names for the volunteers in their pastel-pink uniforms. Pink was chosen because it is a "motherly" color that doesn't remind small patients of the pain they often associate with hospital white.

The volunteer group developed from the work of Jean Forrest, the present chairman, and Mrs. W. H. Barkley, the first play lady.

When Mrs. Forrest's son was in the children's ward 12 years ago she saw there was a need for volunteers who would have more time than the busy nursing staff to comfort and entertain the children.

Some small patients have never been away from home before explained Mrs. Forrest.

"The hospital is wonderful about allowing mothers in at any time and the nurses are kind and attentive, but in spite of this children can become upset and bored."

The long-term patient who must spend weeks or months in hospital is the special concern of the Pink Ladies.

The volunteers, all dedicated to the belief that play is important to a child and being sick doesn't change the need, arrive on the ward every morning and afternoon.

Patients who are well enough are wheeled in their beds to the sun room where the play ladies unlock the toy cupboard and distribute toys. The daily ritual has all the importance and suspense of Christmas to the waiting children.

One Pink Lady remains in the sun room (there are usually three to a shift) while the others take toys and games to other rooms.

The toys are chosen for safety and indestructibility.

"Thirty children a day may play with a toy" said Mrs. Forrest. Wooden toys are preferred because they have a satisfying feel to a young child and also seem to hold up better.

Mrs. Forrest once took a Pink Lady over to the eight-to-twelve-year old ward and introduced her to a patient, a male aged 12.

"Here is someone to play with you," she said.

"You've got to be kidding" was the reply and he went back to his comic book.

The Pink Ladies retreated to the ward where they are appreciated, but they still keep the self-sufficient older children supplied with games like monopoly and scrabble.

Independent types on the eight-to-twelve ward enjoy the company of the juniors, all teen-age volunteers from Victoria secondary schools. Mrs. Forrest feels that they won't accept any one they consider "a sort of baby sitter" but are happy to play games and talk with someone near their own age.

The juniors come from Royal Oak, Lansdowne, Mount Douglas and Reynolds schools.

Called Pink Girls by the patients, they arrive after school just as the Pink Ladies are hurrying home to prepare supper an dattend to school-age families.

"They have the really tought shift", said Mrs. Forrest. She explained that by the time the juniors arrive the toys have all been put away and the children are getting tired and hungry.

The Pink Girls also come in on the weekends when the Pink Ladies are busy with husbands and families. One group of girls from Reynolds Junior-Senior Secondary is working for a Duke of Edinburgh Award.

Mrs. Forrest interviews prospective members of the junior or senior group. Any one 16 years and over may join and there is only one qualification required — a love of children.

Mrs. Forrest stressed the fact that her volunteers perform no nursing duties. "We can all change diapers and feed babies but we don't do these things unless we are asked to by a nurse who has her hands full with some emergency."

She feels that the volunteer group could not function without the co-operation of the medical and nursing staffs and the hospital's junior auxiliary. The auxiliary, for example, provides the finances to buy toys and necessary equipment.

"You see results right away when you work with children," said Mrs. Forrest, "and you go home tired but satisfied."

Vatican to Let Women Pass the Plate

VATICAN CITY (AP)—The Vatican has issued a detailed reform of the mass allowing women a greater role in the liturgy. It also in effect sanctioned such musical modernization as rock and soul masses if the local bishop approves.

Women now can lead the congregation in hymns and scripture reading, except for the Gospel, and can serve as usherettes and collection-takers. They still are barred from serving as acolytes, even in convents or women's chapels.

In many Roman Catholic communities women already have been performing the permitted duties on an experimental basis.

The reform also permits:

- Celebration of mass outside the church, such as in the home, but only with permission of the local bishop in cases of "real needed."
- Selection by the local bishop of music for the mass, without excluding any instrument or style.
- Experiment in the mass within "clearly defined limits," to be conducted only for one year, then reported to the Vatican for permission to continue.

The document urged that "all means be used to promote singing by the people." Jazz, rock and folk masses were not mentioned specifically, but the document said the music "must serve the worship of God."

Queen Complimented On Trim Waistline

LONDON (Reuter) —The trim waistline of the Queen was held up today as a model for middle-aged women who have trouble controlling their appetitites.

The magazine Slimming noted that despite her 44 years and the birth of four children, the Queen is almost as slender now as she was 20 years ago.

"Very few people could go to the banquets the Queen does and not have an absolute binge and get fat," said the magazine's editor, Audrey Eyton.

"But she keeps slim."

The Queen manages this, the magazine said, with a high protein diet of about 750 calories a day. It reported that she embarked on the diet after being persuaded by her husband Prince Philip to see a specialist.

The magazine illustrated its case by publishing two pictures of the Queen—one taken in 1950 and one this year. She seemed to have acquired hardly any extra inches during the interval.

Doing The Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Guaranteed to foil the greedy moth . . .

It's worth a visit to Standard Furniture . . . if for no other reason than to get a whiff of the fresh, pungent cedar aroma which greets your nostrils when you open any one of their new cedar chests . . . which come in some 23 varieties! . . . We went around opening first one, then another . . . drinking in the forest-like smells which we adore . . . and which moths, blast their greedy little hearts, hate! . . . What wonderful Christmas gifts these handsome cedar chests would make, we thought . . . We've never seen so many different kinds . . . in so many sizes and designs . . . Beautiful pieces of furniture that can be used in any room . . . to add to the decor as well as provide guaranteed moth-proof storage for your woollens and other moth-edible possessions . . . Some of these chests have cushion tops to give you extra seating space . . . Some have casters for easy moving around . . . Some have drawers . . . some, shelves . . . There are high ones and low ones . . . in oak, walnut, antique white . . . A dainty little Spanish-style chest in dark wood is carved in front and has a cushion top . . . Several others have sculptured designs . . . and styles range from French provincial to strictly contemporary . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates Street, 382-5111.

Permanent press now has baked-in finish which can't be washed away. Look for a brand-name label.

It's topaz for November . . .

Being a poodle lover of long standing . . . we were drawn like a magnet by the darling little poodle brooch . . . new at de Goutiere's since our previous visit . . . 14K textured gold, with tiny rubies for eyes . . . wee diamonds in the collar . . . $77.50 for this . . . and a delightful gift for any woman sharing our canine enthusiasm . . . For a November birthday . . . a beautiful Imperial topaz ring . . . deep, pinky brown, from Brazil . . . set in white gold with three small diamonds on either side . . . $595 . . . Other topaz rings, also quite lovely but much less expensive since they're of the semi-precious variety of topaz quartz . . . Mr. de Goutiere showed us a couple of new engagement and wedding ring sets which we thought most unusual, and certainly very contemporary . . . One set . . . of textured gold, is crenelated so that both rings lock together to look like one wide band . . . centred with a ⅓ carat diamond . . . The other set, also textured gold, is narrower . . . The rings can be bought individually, since they don't interlock . . . but they do make a handsome combination . . . Noticed quite a number of other new rings . . . One a little cultured pearl surrounded by corals, in the shape of a flower . . . just $31 . . . A magnificent oval Linde star ruby set slantwise in textured gold, with 2 diamonds on either side . . . $125 . . . An interesting "satellite"-shaped ring with turquoise, garnets, emeralds and sapphires . . . de Goutiere, Jeweller, Ltd., 2524 Estevan Ave., 592-3224.

As hemlines go down, so do necklines. Leg-watching will give way to neck and body-watching!

The new Viyellas have arrived at Wilson's . . .

At the time of this writing, they'd just unpacked a new shipment of ladies' Viyella shirt blouses at Wilson's . . . Such pretty colors and interesting designs! . . . These blouses . . . meticulously tailored by Hathaway . . . the shirt people who have long been famous for their men's shirts . . . are cut a little longer in the body than heretofore so they're especially nice to wear with pants . . . Long sleeves and convertible necklines . . . and, of course, you can tuck them inside your skirt or slacks if you wish . . . $17.50 . . . (If you'd like a solid color Viyella shirt, Wilson's will order it for you in the color of your choice . . . $15 for these) . . . Also newly arrived . . . a shipment of printed Viyella dressing gowns in three different styles, and colors which will delight you . . . One of the styles is the classic wrap-around which so many women have been asking for . . . Easy to slip into when you tumble out of bed in the morning and start puttering with breakfast . . . Viyella, as you know, is a mixture of lambswool and long stapled cotton . . . Washes like a charm, and is guaranteed not to shrink . . . It's so soft and light-weight . . . with just the right amount of warmth to keep you comfortable . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

When packing your suitcase for travel, keep it as light as possible; sooner or later you'll have to lug your own luggage.

Smartly booted for fall and winter . . .

Just about any time seems to be boot time nowadays . . . but with colder weather coming up . . . boots are not merely a fashion accessory but a very practical way of keeping your nether extremities warm and dry . . . hence they're fine inhibitors of sniffles and like malaises . . . Munday's have just about as complete a selection of really good boots as you could hope to find anywhere . . . We were looking them over the other day with a thought to acquiring a pair ourself . . . and here are the highlights of the collection . . . English Brevitts . . . ranging in price from $38 to $48 . . . include a mid-calf boot in taupe suede with smooth leather front, crepe sole, and an interesting buckled strap trim . . . Warm sheepskin lining inside . . . Another low-heeled mid-calf boot comes in black or brown polished leather . . . There's a smart elasticized vamp boot in brown or taupe kid . . . front has a smocked effect . . . Another beautifully fitting knee-high boot has a stretchy back . . . black or brown . . . The Italian Bandolinos are very smart, too . . . One with leather bottom and vinyl top . . . black or brown . . . has a stretchy part in the front . . . and costs only $19.95 . . . A knee-high boot in fine calf with punchwork trim, also comes in black or brown, at $35.95 . . . And there's a cocktail-length Murray boot of napped corfam with ornamental stitching . . . a dressy little number, priced at around $30 . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Sandals may be worn this winter with pants and long evening dresses and skirts in midi or maxi version.

CHOCOLATE 'N MANDARIN QUICKIE CAKE

Add a Touch of Orange

Just as the cuckoo is the traditional harbinger of spring, the mandarin orange is the harbinger of the winter holiday season.

The difference is that mandarin oranges are found in Victoria too.

CHOCOLATE 'N MANDARIN QUICKIE CAKE

1 package (2 layer) chocolate cake mix
1-3 cup freshly squeezed mandarin juice
1 tbsp. freshly grated mandarin peel
1 cup heavy cream or 1 envelope dessert topping mix, whipped
½ tsp. almond extract
1 mandarin orange, peeled, separated into segments, seeded.

Prepare cake mix according to package directions, substituting 1-3 cup mandarin juice for 1-3 cup of water; stir in mandarin peel. Pour into 2 greased and floured 8 or 9-inch cake pans. Bake and cool according to package directions, then invert onto wire racks. Whip cream and stir in almond extract. Spread between cooled cake layers and over top of cake. Garnish top with a spiral design of mandarin segments. Keep refrigerated until ready to serve.

MANDARIN RAISIN SAUCE FOR HAM

¾ cup seedless golden raisins
1⅓ cups water
½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1½ tbsp. cornstarch
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. ground cloves
1 tbsp. butter or margaraine
1 tbsp. freshly grated mandarin peel
½ cup freshly squeezed mandarin juice
2 mandarin oranges, separated into segments, seeded

Simmer raisins and water together in covered saucepan for 10 minutes. Thoroughly combine dry ingredients; stir into saucepan. Bring to a boil, stirring constantly; boil 1 minute. Mix in remaining ingredients; heat 1 minute longer. Serve with baked ham, corned beef or tongue. (Makes 2½ cups).

CALIFORNIA MANDARIN SALAD

2 tsp. freshly grated mandarin peel
1-3 cup freshly squeezed mandarin juice
1 tbsp. freshly squeezed lemon juice
1 tbsp. sugar or honey
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. chili powder
⅛ tsp. thyme, crushed
3 tbsp. salad oil
2 mandarin oranges separated into segments, seeded
½ cup sliced ripe olives
2 tbsp. chopped green or red onions.
Assorted crisp salad greens

In tightly covered jar, combine mandarin peel and juice, lemon juice, sugar, seasonings and salad oil. Shake to mix well; chill at least 15 minutes. Cut mandarin segments in half; combine with remaining ingredients in salad bowl. Pour over chilled dressing; toss lightly to mix well. (Makes six to eight servings.)

DEAR ABBY . . .

Forget Pride

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am in complete sympathy with CHEATED, who said when his wife decided to get twin beds, something happened to their marriage.

My husband asked for twin beds because he thought he would be able to sleep better, but our marriage has deteriorated miserably since we stopped sleeping together. From the twin beds he moved into the spare room and things have gone from bad to worse. We argue constantly and go for days without speaking. It's hard to stay angry at a person when you can reach out at night and feel his warm body next to yours.

I doubt that he is sleeping better because I can hear him moving about at all hours. I am also up tossing and turning.

I am sorry we ever gave up our big double bed, but my pride prevents me from suggesting we try it again since it was his idea to give it up.—Also Cheated.

DEAR ALSO: There is more suffering going on in the name of "pride" than for any other single reason. Tell your husband how you feel and quit wasting precious time. And if you both toss and turn half the night, at least you'll have company.

DEAR ABBY: Last Saturday night my husband and I went for a ride in the car and decided to drop in on another couple. My husband went to the door to see if they were home. The lady of the house answered the door and said they were just watching TV, and to come in, so we did.

The room was dimly lit and the man of the house was sitting in a big chair with nothing on but a pair of undershorts. We sat there visiting for a good two hours or more and he never did get up to go put on a pair of pants. I was terribly embarrassed. What would you have done in a situation like this?—Embarrassed.

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Probably exactly as you did. Just sat there expecting "Nature Boy" to excuse himself at any moment to put on a pair of pants. But since he didn't, I would have learned a lesson: When one drops in on friends without telephoning first, he can expect anything.

DEAR ABBY: About a year ago we moved to California. We moved into a very nice house in a nice neighborhood. We would have appreciated it if only one neighbor had rung our bell and said, "Hello." We've been here a year now and we still don't know any of our neighbors. Since nobody rang our bell, should we, as newcomers, have rung their bell and said, "Hello?"—Puzzled.

DEAR PUZZLED: No. It's up to the neighbors to make a newcomer welcome. Since they ignored you, a friendly greeting when you see them is about as far as you should go. If you were to ring a neighbor's bell and say, "Hello," you might be taken for a ding-a-ling.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "HUGGED IN HOLLAND:" Speak for yourself. Maybe you'd rather have your boss put his arms around you to show his appreciation for your services. But you're outnumbered 50 to one. The others prefer a "raise."

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Moisturized Make-Up Can't Streak . . . Ever

Streaked, blotchy make-up is now unnecessary. That's why 2nd Debut Liquid Make-Up is so extra-beneficial. Its exclusive built-in CEF-600 moisturizer-base combines with a perfect blend of skin-tone tints to give your face a soft candle-light complexion that's more natural looking than any make-up you have used before. Equally important, this moisturized make-up goes on so smoothly and easily you get a soft matte effect every time. It never streaks, runs, or cakes. And you feel fresh, look natural, all day long. That's because the CEF-600 keeps moisturizing all day long. Minimizes wrinkles, lines, and minor skin imperfections. So try this 2nd Debut Liquid Make-Up that can't streak, cake or run. It's moisturized with CEF-600. Ask for it at your favourite cosmetic counter. 6 natural skin-tone shades just for you.

Once People Wore Hats and Only Had Their Hair Washed and Ironed . . .

By SALLY QUINN

WASHINGTON (W P) — Kenneth is probably one of the most famous hairdressers in North America. He did Jackie Kennedy's hair when she was first lady.

But Kenneth doesn't fit the image most people have of hairdressers.

"I always wanted to be an analyst," he says.

"People, especially men, don't know what to expect of a hairdresser. They think we all have orange hair and platform shoes."

Last week he was in Washington to sell "My soul and my wigs." He arrived for an interview in a midi-length raincoat and black turtleneck sweater.

"I bought this raincoat in a department store basement when I was coming off the subway," he says. "I wore it to Minneapolis a few weeks ago and nobody understood what I was supposed to be."

Kenneth's last name is Battelle, although it is rarely used by his clients, ("They can't pronounce it") and he's 43-years-old.

He grew up in Syracuse, N.Y., and after serving in the navy, he had to quit college to help support his family. "I read an ad somewhere which said that the hairdresser's streets were paved with gold, so I wnt to a haridressing school. I caugh on quickly and soon moved to New York where I went to Rubinstein's, first."

The reputation that many hairdressers have for being homosexual doesn't bother Kenneth. "However, when I told my fraternity brothers I was going to be a hairdresser, all I can tell you is that I never got invited to any alumni meetings." He says with a laugh.

"What people do in bed is a private thing. I've had male employees arrive at work in full make-up, but I don't fire them. They're talented people. I just make them wash off the make-up. Your own life has got to be pretty boring if you don't have anything to worry about but other people's business. I know that's a platitude, but it's what I believe."

Kenneth used to be seen in the society columns with famous clients, but all that has changed. He doesn' socialize with them any more.

"I had a brief fling at it," he says.

"I was once invited to a dinner party by a client. After dinner her husband stayed home, and she and I went on to another party. The next day it was all over the papers. I hated it and that was the end of that. I have a life outside my work, which doesn't involve my clients and that's the way it should be. Imagine if you were a terrible bore at a party one night and had to do the hostess' hair the next day. I don't believe in mixing business with pleasure, finally."

As for other hairdressers giving little dinners for clients in their salons, which has become "en vogue" lately, "I would think there would be the danger of getting hair in your soup."

Kenneth feels that there is an explanation for his and other hairdressers' new elevated position on today's social scene. (He doesn't socialize with them either "but that's just the way it turns out.")

"It's not just me, it's the history of hair," he says. "Until the 50's hair was not very pretty. People wore hats and only had their hair washed and ironed. But then something called the Italian cut happened and then rollers. With the advent of hair came the advent of the hairdresser."

Kenneth only cuts hair and he charges 25 dollars to do it. If you want him personally, all you have to do is "just call up." His salon does not have a very definite stamp the way Vidal Sassoon's does. "We don't do thhat. I don't believe in it," he says. "There is no style today. All that is dead. Anything goes now. Dictating styles to women does not exist. It's the same with clothes. This year women can elect any style they want. And they don't like it. In my travels I've found that they want to be told how they should look. But the only important thing now is how the hair is cut."

One would think that a hairdresser would know more hot gossip than anyone in town, but Kenneth says he doesn't.

"I discourage gossip," he says. "I'm not particularly interested in people's lives. I have enough to worry about my own. But there are just not many places where these people have a captive audience for two hours. I try and turn it off."

Kenneth has many rich and famous clients, and he counts loyalty as the best present any of them could give him. Jackie Onassis still goes to him, so do Happy Rockefeller, Mrs. Gardner Cowles, Mrs. Paul Mellon ("The most fascinating woman I've ever known") and Amanda Burden. Two former clients with whom he traveled were Marilyn Monroe and Judy Garland. "That was pretty interesting," he says.

Kenneth feels that he's changed a great deal in the last 10 years. He's not publicly political "but I will say that I'm not a fascist." He doesn't care much about clothes any more. "I used to, but now I buy things which amuse me. I don't pay much for them and I expect them to fall apart.

He doesn't entertain "in a way that would interest anyone" But he does say that "parties are for two people."

He reads a lot of Zen, drinks a lot of good red wine, cooks "very well" doesn't take pills of any kind and combs his own hair.

NO ONE WAS LAUGHING

The Mousetrap

A play which holds a world's record for running in London continuously for 18 years, will be performed by a Victoria group next week.

Agatha Christie's The Mousetrap, a thriller by one of the all-time master writers of thrillers, is St. Luke's Players fall production.

Directed by Dennis Kershaw, it will run Thursday, Friday and Saturday at St. Luke's Hall, Cedar Hill Cross Road, at 8:15 p.m.

The cast includes several new members of the group and a number of those well known to St. Luke's patrons.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

The Arguments Against Secularism

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

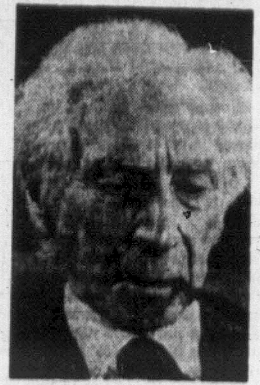
The word "secularism" was invented in 1846 by the English radical thinker, G. J. Holyoake, when he felt that he needed a special word to express his contention that Christianity is essentially superstitious and has no useful role to play in man's life and should be actively encouraged to dwindle away.

The word came into common usage, and it is now a convenient, if rather imprecise, word to indicate an approach in life which explicitly denies that God exists and which refuses to take seriously the traditions and claims of the historic religions.

* * *

Today's secularism is not an organization or a movement or even a general philosophy. It has many forms and expressions. It exists in many noods and trends of thought which are united only in their indifference to traditional religious interpretations of life and reality.

Secularism assumes that man's life is effectively fenced-in by what can be seen and measured and manipulated in the here-and-now, and it holds that there can be nothing of significance beyond that fence.



RUSSELL
. . secular oracle

Some secularism is aggressively hostile toward religion. Some is simply apathetic, adopting a couldn't- care-less stance. And much of it seems to fit in somewhere in between.

Today's self-conscious secularists profess to champion intellectual freedom and flexibility, which they like to contrast with the ingrown dogmatism of those who embrace a religious faith.

* * *

And it cannot be denied that religious faith often does lead to intellectual narrowness and ingrowingness. But do religious people have a monopoly in that? Do not some secularist thinkers become curiously dogmatic when they consider religion?

For example, Bertrand Russell's famous lecture, "Why I Am Not a Christian," which is virtually one of the sacred scriptures of the anti-Christian form of secularism, is far more dogmatic in tone than most of the theological writing of our time.

I hesitate to wax unpleasant about what others may hold sacred, but I must say that in that lecture Russell showed himself to be almost incredibly misinformed on Christian teaching and Christian history.

He cannot escape the charge of distorting, through biased selection and slanting of evidence, the nature of Christianity. This astonishing excercise is a display of negative dogmatism worthy to stand alongside the effusions of the most bigoted religious dogmatist.

* * *

(As an admirer of Russell for many years — most of his books are on my shelves — I do not like having to say this. But the recent resurgence of interest in his notorious lecture almost demands such comment. If I understood Christianity as Russell professed to understand it, I wouldn't care to be a Christian either.)

I find it strange that many of today's brightest people consider it intellectually respectable to be abysmally ignorant of the Christian religion and, on the basis of a little second-hand Sunday-school information, to dismiss it out-of-hand as not deserving serious intellectual consideration. And these are often the people who would blush for shame to have their ignorance exposed with respect to the arts or the latest fashions in literary criticism or philosophy and sociology and the such.

I am not so naive as to suggest that more intellectual openness by the secularists toward religion would guide them to conversion and commitment and the lot. But they might come to see that not all expressions of biblical faith are obscurantist and trivial, and that there are resources in religion which can and do serve the great basic human values which they themselves would promote and defend.

HOISTING ITALY'S COLORS over city hall Friday was Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock and members of the Italian Assistance Association. The mayor proclaimed Friday Italo-Canadian Day in Victoria to honor opening of the Leonardo Da Vinci Centre. The community centre at 195 Bay was officially opened at 5:15 p.m. Friday by Lt.-Gov. John Nicholson. More than 2,000 members of the region's Italian community volunteered labor to build the centre. Standing from the mayor's left are association president Luigi Gazzola, secretary Matthew Di Iorio and Director Giuseppe Rosso.

FLQ Charges Culmination Of Seven Years

MONTREAL (CP)—The arraignment of 28 persons Thursday was a record in terms of number of persons appearing in court on a single day in connection with Quebec terrorism, which began seven years ago.

Hitherto, the biggest day was June 14, 1963, just 13 weeks after the first Molotov cocktail was thrown by terrorists bent on separating Quebec from Canada by force.

Sixteen persons, nearly all in their late teens and early 20s, were charged that day on more than 150 counts of murder, conspiracy, public mischief and causing or intending to cause explosions.

Four men received sentences ranging from six to 12 years Oct. 7, 1963, on manslaughter charges—reduced from non-capital murder—in the death of Wilfred Vincent O'Neill, a night watchman killed when a bomb exploded the previous April 20.

They were among 11 persons who had pleaded guilty to various charges, including one woman who received a suspended sentence for placing explosives.

HUSBAND GOT 10 YEARS

Her husband, Georges Schoeters, 33-year-old Belgian-born student and eldest of the accused, received a total of 10 years for placing explosives and causing explosions.

Two younger men later received sentences of three and four years respectively in connection with mailbox blasts in suburban Westmount, one of which maimed Sgt.-Maj. Walter Leja, an army explosives expert.

The Front de Liberation du Quebec recently named Gabriel Hudon, 28, who received 12 years for the O'Neill slaying, as one of 23 "patriot political prisoners" held in Quebec. The FLQ demanded their release in exchange for the life of British envoy James Cross, kidnapped Oct. 5 and still missing.

The FLQ list included three other men sentenced to life for the slaying of two store officials during robbery of a downtown firearms shop in August, 1964. Another "political prisoner" was Pierre-Paul Geoffroy, 26, sentenced to life terms on 124 counts of placing bombs April 1 last year.

Sands Exclusive service for those who travel . . .

A collect call to Sands, at a time of emergency, brings one of our service vehicles (or charter aircraft) out to you anywhere in the Pacific Northwest.

You are spared the distress of having an unfamiliar funeral director in another city arrange for removal to Victoria, and, at a cost which far exceeds our special service. Sands relieve you of all anxiety at a time when it is comforting to have friends attending to your needs rather than strangers.

Sands gives forethought to funeral costs . . .

A service of dignity and beauty can be arranged regardless of financial circumstances. The selection of casket to suit every financial need is made possible through Sands' economical practice of purchasing . . . savings which are shared with those we serve.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: Schnoozer is never as happy as when he is chewing up some of our house plants. We have yelled at him enough times when we have caught him at it that he knows he is not supposed to be doing it. Yet he seems irresistibly drawn and we simply can't break him of the habit. You cautioned that the plants can be poisonous in your column and even if they weren't, we would like to enjoy them ourselves rather than allowing him to eat them all. As mentioned, scolding him doesn't stop him. We have tried spraying the plants with cat repellents and that didn't work either. Once you mentioned protecting them with chicken wire and that is what we are doing now but it certainly does detract from their appearance. We hope you have a better suggestion.

—M.N.

DEAR M.N.: Schnoozer's salads are definitely not good for him and could, even, prove fatal. Unfortunately, I know of no good answer to the problem. One cat owner solved the problem by growing cactus exclusively. Another reduced the problem to some extent by deliberately growing some grass alongside the other plants. She reported her cat usually, but not always, ate the grass in preference to the rest of the house plants.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: Lately my canary's feet have been much warmer than usual. I can't account for this either because the room temperature has been about the same. Why would Cynthia have warmer feet? Is this serious?

—R.G.

DEAR R.G.: Could be, if there is swelling along with the toasty toes. Swelling could indicate arthritis or gout both of which are, unfortunately, somewhat common in canaries. Both are difficult to treat. If there is swelling, let Cynthia's doctor decide what to do.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: I've recently gone on a campaign to get my husband to eat a lot of salads and foods of this kind instead of just the meat, potatoes and pie that he has always preferred. The reason I am trying to push the salads on him is that I've heard they help keep a person young. Actually, my husband is middleaged and it is very obvious, particularly when we retire for the evening. My husband snorts and says salads are rabbit food and he is not going to go along with my experiment. Can you offer me any help?

—T.E.

DEAR T.E.: Well, I can at least verify the fact that rabbits remain romantic well past middle age. Greenery is, obviously, a "go-go" food for rabbits. Whether salads will soup up your husband can be determined for sure only by trying them.

* * *

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have a very small parrot that is called a Quaker. I've just got him and he doesn't talk at all and I wonder if I should keep him. Do they make good pets? Can I teach him to talk?

—N.S.

DEAR N.S.: The Quakers are one of the conures. Perhaps the best known of this type of small parrot is the Half-moon. While these birds are a mite meager in mouthings intelligible to humans, they are, nevertheless, great pets. They are highly intelligent, alert and affectionate birds.

Sniper Wounds Soviet Soldier

BERLIN (AP) — A Russian guarding a Soviet monument in West Berlin was wounded early today by shots fired at him and a comrade, a British spokesman said.

The spokesman said two or three shots were fired about 1:15 a.m.

The soldier, wounded in the arm and left side, was taken by a British military ambulance to East Berlin, the spokesman said.

The incident occurred a few hours before Red Army units were to parade before the memorial in honor of the 53rd anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

The official East German news agency, in a brief dispatch that called the incident "an unheard-of provocation," said officials did not know who fired the shots.

SLOGANS PAINTED

"Prelude against Bolshevism" and "Destroy the Red corruption" were smeared in red and white paint in a park rest area several hundred yards from the monument. A painted arrow pointed in the direction of the memorial through the park woods. The paint appeared to be fresh.

Police said leaflets found in the park called for "resistance against selling out Germany." The leaflets were signed by the "European Liberation Front," police said.

Officials in the Soviet embassy in East Berlin lodged a "decisive protest with the British military administration in West Berlin and demanded the necessary measures for the immediate discovery and serious punishment of the criminals," the agency said.

The memorial to Russian soldiers in The Second World War is in the British sector just inside West Berlin, near the Brandenburg gate.

AMERICANS BOYCOTT SOVIET ANNIVERSARY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Protesting Russian detention of two United States generals in Soviet Armenia, Washington officials are boycotting this year's Soviet national anniversary celebrations, and the order is reported to have come from President Nixon.

The diplomatic snub means American ambassadors are staying away from the caviar-and-vodka parties given by the Soviets in many capitals to mark the 53rd anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, though they may send lower-ranking U.S. diplomats if they choose.

Coupled with U.S. tit-for-tat expulsion of a Soviet news correspondent Friday, the snub marks a further deterioration of relations between the two powers.

Hospital Strikers To Let Nurses In

The International Union of Operating Engineers has instructed members striking two Victoria and nine Lower Mainland hospitals Monday not to interfere with anything directly affecting patients.

All service vehicles except fuel trucks will be permitted through the picket lines and hospital employees and nurses have been told the striking engineers will not impede their access to and from hospitals.

"They are to go in and do their jobs," Bob Berger, business manager of the International Union of Operating Engineers, said Friday. "All we've requested is that hospital employees perform their own work and don't do ours."

OPTIMISTIC

Berger expressed optimism that a settlement will be reached between the union and the British Columbia Hospitals Association in time to avert imposition of compulsory arbitration under Bill 33, as Labor Minister Peterson has threatened.

He said the hospitals have enough fuel on hand to run their powerhouses for about five days. The powerhouses provide steam for heat, laundry purposes, kitchens and sterilization.

Asked what the union would do if the strike continued long enough to exhaust fuel supplies, he replied:

"I'm anticipating that we will not be out that long, but a lot depends on other people in other places."

MONDAY MORNING

He said the powerhouses at the 11 hospitals will be turned over Monday morning to the chief engineers. They are management personnel.

APPEAL AT 62.3%

The United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal campaign finished November's first week $264,465 short of its goal of $701,314.

At noon Friday, the campaign had reached 62.3 per cent of its goal with total donations of $436,849.

Appeal officials are confident that returns from industrial, business, professional and other divisions will show large gains in the next two weeks.

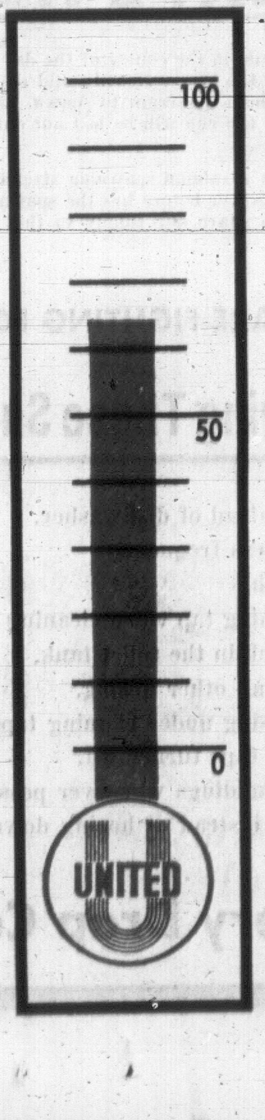
Several division chairmen told an Appeal staff meeting this week that many canvassers are still to report.

Community Chest information officer Mrs. Judy Nyquist said Friday that Appeal staff thanks everyone who has donated to the campaign so far.

She said individuals who were missed during the successful residential canvass Oct. 19 who wish to donate should call the Community Chest.

A division chairman, she said, would give special treatment to these callers by personally picking up their donations.

She said the extension of the campaign into November is customary and does not yet indicate the drive is in danger of failing to reach its goal.



ALS WIN CFL PLAYOFF

Montreal Alouettes advanced to the Eastern Conference final in the Canadian Football League this afternoon by defeating Toronto Argonauts 16-7 at CNE Stadium in Toronto.

The Alouettes now play Hamilton Tiger-Cats, first-place finishers in the Eastern CFL, in a two-game, total-point series to determine the East's representative in the Grey Cup.

'We Grabbed Laporte'

MONTREAL (CP) — Bernard Lortie, 19-year-old student arrested Friday, testified today at an inquest into the kidnap death of Pierre Laporte that he and three other men took part in the abduction of the Quebec labor minister Oct. 10.

Lortie said the other three were Francis Simard and brothers Paul Rose and Jacques Rose, all of whom have been named in warrants by police.

Lortie said the four had been thinking and talking about kidnapping someone and decided on Laporte.

The inquest adjourned briefly until the afternoon without Lortie having testified regarding the slaying except to say he was not at the scene on the fatal night.

He said the 49-year-old Quebec labor minister made a desperate attempt to escape the day before he was slain.

★ ★ ★

The witness said they picked up the labor minister from in front of his suburban home, using a 1967 model Chevrolet in which Laporte's body was eventually found Oct. 18.

He said Jacques Rose drove the car and the abductors were armed with M-1 automatic rifles. Three such rifles were introduced in evidence at the inquest.

On their way to the Laporte house in suburban St. Lambert they stopped at a restaurant and telephoned the Laporte residence. Jacques Rose phoned and Lortie said Jacques was told that Laporte had just stepped out.

"Paul got out with the M-1 and pushed Laporte into the car," Lortie said.

★ ★ ★

They then drove along Tiffin Road and Taschereau Boulevard to St. Hubert to a house on Armstrong Street. They drove into the garage.

They had previously opened a hole in the wall between the garage and the house.

"We watched Laporte in three shifts around the clock."

Lortie said he does not recall everything that happened. He said Laporte cut himself while trying to escape.

He broke the lower half of a window and had the upper part of his body through it when the abductors pounced on him and dragged him back.

Lortie said he made bandages by ripping a towel into strips.

Lortie mentioned that among other things Laporte lost about "half a quart" of blood from the cuts.

Earlier, evidence was given that Laporte was cut on the left wrist, at the base of the right thumb and the upper right chest.

★ ★ ★

Photographs of Laporte's body showing these wounds were shown to newspaper men at the inquest. Clearly visible on Laporte's neck were the marks caused by the medallion chain used to strangle him.

The wounds on Laporte's wrist, thumb and chest were irregular gashes such as one might suffer in breaking a window.

Lortie, of medium height with wavy brown hair and dark brown eyes, seemed a person of intense disposition as he gave his evidence.

He identified clothing worn by Laporte at the time of the kidnapping.

He said that a Laporte letter was written by the late minister himself.

Before being sworn in he replied in the negative when asked by Prosecutor Jacques Ducros whether he wanted the services of a lawyer.

FAMILY OF JAMES CROSS LEAVES FOR EUROPE

MONTREAL (CP) — The wife and daughter of kidnapped British diplomat James Jasper Cross have left Montreal to visit family friends in Europe, the British government office here announced today.

"Mrs. Cross has decided to make a short visit to close friends of the family in Europe, and left Montreal yesterday (Friday) for this purpose accompanied by her daughter Susan, a brief statement said.

"She continues to await anxiously the results of all the efforts being made to find her husband, and will be kept in the closest touch with all developments.

"Mrs. Cross wishes it at the same time to be known how very grateful she is for all the letters and telegrams she has received, and which are greatly helping to sustain her during this period of waiting."

The photograph shows Cross, kidnapped five weeks ago by members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec, sitting in front of a small table, apparently playing a game of solitaire.

The letter makes no reference to Cross.

There is a crudely printed note on the back of the photograph, which immediately after receipt was wrapped in plastic to preserve any fingerprints.

The photograph is similar to one received Wednesday by the Montreal weekly tabloid Quebec-Presse.

He said he was making the statement "freely and voluntarily." He was picked up by police Friday night, questioned and made a statement to them.

A warrant was issued Oct. 23 for Lortie, Jacques Rose, 23, and Simard, 23. They were sought for conspiracy in the kidnapping of Laporte.

On Oct. 18, a few hours after the body of the cabinet minister was discovered in a car trunk near the St. Hubert airport, warrants were issued for Paul Rose, 27, and Marc Carbonneau, 37.

The two were wanted for the kidnapping of Laporte and James Jasper Cross, 49-year-old British trade commissioner forced at gunpoint from his Montreal home Oct. 5. Authorities believe Cross may still be alive.

A preliminary coroner's report earlier said the cuts were inflicted at least two hours before Laporte was strangled.

Lortie, when the inquest was adjourned, had not referred specifically to the death of Laporte.

He did say he left the St. Hubert hideout on Armstrong street about 6:30 p.m. Friday night Oct. 16, on the eve of the slaying, took a bus to a subway station and rode on the subway to the place where he stayed until he was picked up Friday.

He said he did not know Carbonneau, the fifth man named by police on kidnap warrants, but had heard of him.

Laporte had in his pockets some credit cards, his identity card as a member of the Quebec National Assembly and about $60 in cash.

At the time of the kidnapping, Jacques Rose was wearing a grey wig, Francis Simard a false moustache and Paul Rose a blonde wig.

Lortie said he was wearing a military cap, with a piece of cloth — two eyeholes cut in it — tucked under the cap as a mask.

Lortie said Laporte removed the shirt he was wearing, white with green stripes, because it became bloodstained but he did not specify when. The kidnappers gave him a grey sweater and that became part of his death clothing.

Lortie said Paul Rose left the Armstrong street hideout Wednesday, Oct. 14, and "knew that he had been followed by police."

Lortie eventually went to meet him. He said Paul Rose was clean-shaven and neatly groomed when he met him the night of Oct. 16.

The witness said he departed the St. Hubert hideout that evening and went by bus and subway to meet Paul Rose at a place near radio station CJMS in east-end Montreal.

He said he told Rose what had happened at the hideout — the escape attempt, apparently — and Rose gave him an address where he could stay. Lortie declined to reveal the address at the inquest, but said he stayed there 10 days.

After that, he went to a place on Queen Mary Road, in west end Montreal, where he said he stayed with three persons — Colette Therrien, Richard Therrien and Francine Delisle. They were not otherwise identified. That is where Lortie was arrested.

Answering questions, Lortie said he was a member of the Chenier cell of the Front de Liberation du Quebec. Aim of the cell was to support the Liberation cell which had kidnapped Cross, and to help obtain the release of 23 "political prisoners" — one of the ransom demands rejected by authorities.

Asked whether his companions were FLQ members, Lortie replied:

"To my knowledge, yes."

Lortie testified that two automatic rifles used in the kidnapping had been bought shortly before at an army surplus store which he said was located at 900 Notre Dame Street West in Montreal.

Mrs. Jean-Paul Rose, mother of Paul, 27, and Jacques, 23, told at the afternoon hearing of a trip to Texas with Paul and Jacques, Simard and Lortie.

They left Sept. 23 in her car and heard in Texas the news of the Oct. 5 Montreal kidnapping of British envoy James Jasper Cross. The men wanted to return right away, said Mrs. Rose.

They did drive back—arriving here Thursday, Oct. 8—and on the way the men said the Cross abduction was "probably the work of Jacques, Pierre and Alain," not otherwise identified in testimony.

Mrs. Rose said the boys then left her home. She identified what appeared to be a car seat blanket and a torn sheet, the latter being one she had owned for some time.

She also identified a charcoal long-sleeved sweater as resembling one belonging to either Paul or Jacques. Under questioning she recalled that police had first shown her the sweater Oct. 21 and "I couldn't remember whether it was Jacques' or Paul's."

The sweater had been earlier identified as one of the garments on the strangled corpse of Laporte when it was found Oct. 18 in the trunk of a car parked near the St. Hubert airport within sight of the hideout bungalow.

Capt. Raymond Bellemare of the Quebec Provincial Police testified he found the blanket over the body. QPP Constable Jean-Claude Simard said he found the torn sheet in the garage at the kidnap hideout, about six miles from the Laporte home in suburban St. Lambert where the minister was abducted.

Constable Simard also testified he found a pair of sealskin boots, identified by Mrs. Rose as belonging to one of her boys, in a back room of the St. Hubert bungalow.

There was no indication whether Lortie testified under the Canada Evidence Act and no indication whether he had asked for protection against his evidence being used against him.

hospitals also have voted to strike but they are not being taken off the job at this time because they are in more sensitive positions, Berger said. If they were called out it might force compulsory arbitration.

The dispute revolves around two issues—pay parity and the length of the work week. Berger said the union is prepared to submit the pay issue to arbitration, as recommended by a government mediator, but the hospitals are not.

The union has rejected a proposal to submit the work-week issue to arbitration, claiming that its 137 members shouldn't have to arbitrate a benefit already given to 13,000 other hospital workers. The engineers are on a 40-hour week, but other employees and nurses, now working 38¾ hours a week, go to a 37½-hour week Jan. 1.

ROBBER PUTS BITE ON MANAGER

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Bruce Bennet, an auto shop manager, told police a dog acting on command bit him, when he refused to give $50 to the dog's owner.

Once he handed over the money, the owner ordered the dog to let go and both fled.

Bennett was treated at Central Emergency Hospital.

War Act Replacement Vote Held Off

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons has held off until next week the final vote on the government's bill to replace regulations under the War Measures Act, with promises from New Democrat and Conservative MPs to propose changes designed to protect civil liberties.

In debate Friday, members of all opposition parties took issue with specific clauses in the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, which was approved at second reading 152 to 1 the day before.

Earlier in the Commons, Prime Minister Trudeau said the government was doing "a great deal of things" to fight unemployment and would do more "if they are needed and if we have the money."

In reply to Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, Mr. Trudeau cited past policies against unemployment, including funds for housing, payments to provinces and expansion of the money supply.

The Commons was also told the government has started approving perpetual leases in national parks "as an interim measure."

Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien, in reply to Pat Mahoney (L—Calgary South), said the government has not decided what to do with about 750 perpetual leases not renewed under the new policy.

COURT MAKE RULING

It has been parks policy since 1958 to convert perpetual leases to 42-year agreements. But the Supreme Court of Canada ruled recently that the government must honor the original perpetual leases.

Most of Friday was used for debate on the public order bill, now in committee stage, which precedes third and final reading.

Andrew Brewin (NDP—Toronto Greenwood) and Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) said the bill required safeguards against abuse of civil liberties by police and prosecutors.

But Gilbert Rondeau (Creditiste—Shefford) urged beefing up the penalties under the legislation, calling the government "too soft, too complacent" in its treatment of Quebec terrorists.

Those convicted of using or promoting force or crime to pursue the aims of the Front de Liberation du Quebec should receive life in prison, rather than the maximum five years provided in the bil, Mr. Rondeau said.

The bil would continue but limit the government's powers assumed in the regulations under the War Measures Act proclaimed Oct. 16 to combat the FLQ.

Under the bill, charges would have to be placed within seven days rather than the 21 permitted under the regulations.

CITES RIGHTS

The explicit right to legal counsel and a stricter definition of membership or support of the FLQ would be other innovations.

Mr. Woolliams said the bill contained a retroactive clause that was "contrary to any kind of jurisprudence."

A person would be vulnerable to imprisonment for acts committed before the bill becomes law, he said.

Section eight of the bill says that evidence that a person who, "before or after the coming into force of this act," attended a number of meetings of the FLQ, publicly spoke in support of the FLQ or communicated statements on its behalf "is, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, proof that he is a member of the unlawful association."

To prevent abuses of this and other clauses, Mr. Woolliams said the Conservatives would propose an amendment having the cabinet appoint an administrator to oversee application of the law.

The administrator, who could be a judge of the Quebec Superior Court, would report to Parliament.

He would have the power to change or nullify orders—permitted under the bill—from the Quebec attorney-general keeping persons in jail until trial without bail, and in jail without charge up to seven days.

He would also have the authority to fix a trial date.

Mr. Brewin said his party would propose establishment of a three-member commission to interview detainees, and ensure their access to counsel and the legality of their detention.

He said the party would also propose an amendment removing retroactive evidence from the bill.

The change would restrict the prosecution to evidence of acts committed after Oct 16, when the War Measures Act was invoked and many alleged FLQ members were jailed.

It did not create an offence antedating the bill itself, he said.

Rather, it permitted police to present previous behavior as circumstantial evidence that a person was actually—and was still—an FLQ supporter.

DENIES CHARGES

He also denied opposition charges that the bill would force a defendant to prove his innocence.

"The burden of proof remains upon the Crown," he said.

Ed Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby) suggested that the government could achieve its goals be merely extending its powers of search.

"The first step should be to extend the search without warrant," Mr. Broadbent said.

It would then be up to the government to prove it needed more powers.

NDP support of the bill would "depend on the flexibility of the government" in accepting opposition suggestions, he said.

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) said the opposition was "trying to satisfy the feelings of Canadians" by proposing the changes.

On the government side of the House, Pierre De Bane (L—Matane) urged changes safeguarding goods seized in raids. And he said wives should not be punished for protecting their husbands.

Theogene Ricard (PC—St. Hyacinthe) said MPs had voted for the War Measures regulations on faith, and now the government should heed opposition amendments.

SAVE THE FISH In Goldstream!

Let Us Show What Our City Can Do in This Crisis

There is acute concern over the shortage of water in the reservoir, and much debating whether or not some of it should be used to help bring the salmon back to their spawning ground in Goldstream. It is pointed out that at the rate water is generally used in this area, a critical shortage could result if this is done.

Through this advertisement the Victoria Fish and Game Club, Federation of B.C. Naturalists, University of Victoria Outdoors Club, Oak Bay High School SFER and other interested people appeal to residents of Greater Victoria to increase their efforts to SAVE WATER IN EVERY WAY POSSIBLE.

Householders and All Concerned Are Urged to
FOR THE NEXT 2 WEEKS!

The water saved by every man, woman and child in the course of the day (DURING THE NEXT TWO WEEKS), plus the amount of water that the Water Board could release, would build up the 5,000,000 gallons per day needed to get the salmon upstream to spawn. If this is done, the cycle of fish spawning will continue. If it is not done, the run will be lost not only for this year, but for three and four years hence. It is THAT serious.

Victoria is perhaps the only city in Canada with a salmon spawning stream at its own front door. We can lose this if we do not act immediately. Never before has the spawning season been threatened by such a water shortage. It is up to us to share our supply so that nature's cycle will not be broken!

THE FISH AT GOLDSTREAM ARE FIGHTING FOR SURVIVAL!

You can Help by Following These Suggestions:

- Wash dishes in the sink instead of dishwasher.
- Run larger laundry loads less frequently.
- Run less water for the bath.
- Use a glass instead of running tap when cleaning teeth.
- Place a quart bottle or brick in the toilet tank.
- Hold off car washing and all other hosing.
- Avoid all washing and rinsing under running taps.
- Check for leaky taps, keep taps turned off.
- Cut off urinals in public buildings whenever possible.
- Sweep service station lots instead of hosing down.

REMEMBER—Every Drop Counts!

Police Court

Albert Wade, 47, of 1322 Clover Ave., was a three-time loser Thursday when he tried to persuade Victoria city policeman he shouldn't be arrested and charged with impaired driving.

First Wade told the arresting constable he was a friend of the police chief and would have his job, Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre was told in provincial court Friday.

That didn't work.

Then he said he was a restaurant owner and if any police officers came into his establishment he would poison the hamburgers.

That didn't work.

And finally Wade told the officers he was a serviceman, snapped to attention and rapped off a salute.

That didn't work either.

"It's good to see a man with respect for the laws of Canada," St. Jorre said.

Prosecutor Cory Stolte told St. Jorre Wade's breathalyzer reading was .22 per cent, well above the .08 level which determines impairment under the criminal code.

Wade had pleaded guilty to the impaired driving charge, but he said he had an explanation.

He said he was taking medication which could have affected him.

He said he had been some eight blocks from home when his nose suddenly started to bleed for no reason, and pointed to obvious bloodstains on his blue shirt. While simultaneously bleeding and trying to park his car he ran into a parked vehicle, he explained.

He said he was fatigued. "I shouldn't have been driving."

The judge fined Wade $350 and prohibited him from driving except for business purposes.

Wade said he wished to apologize to the court and the policeman who arrested him. He said they were "very decent" about the incident.

Two 18-year-old Americans who pleaded guilty to shoplifting three candy bars, a can of crabmeat, a loaf of bread and some dried apricots were each fined $300.

Gail Gossage, of Hutchison, Kansas, and Walton Marshall, of Thornwood, New York, had only 12 cents in their possession at the time of the offence Thursday, Judge Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre was told.

The two had been living on $271 in tuition fees returned to Marshall when he dropped out of the University of Kansas, court was told.

Marshall said he hoped to receive $300 by mail in a few weeks.

The two were only visitors to Canada but hoped to obtain work permits and seek status as landed immigrants, the judge was told.

"What we did was pretty much a juvenile prank," Marshall said, " . . . a very large lesson has been learned."

"I believe in treating Americans and Canadians alike," said St. Jorre, ordering the $300 fine payable forthwith with 30 days in default.

* * *

Henry Henderson, 24, serving a sentence at Wilkinson Road for impaired driving offences, was sentenced to one year when he pleaded guilty to a charge of public mischief outstanding since March 19, 1967.

At that time, court was told, he led two Toronto Metropolitan policemen to a house he said was a bootlegger's, went in with marked money and reappeared with a 12-ounce bottle of liquor.

Later, however, he turned up in court as a defence witness for the "bootlegger" and admitted he had used the marked money to pay a debt and had stolen the bottle of liquor.

St. Jorre said the man's story was like a detective novel.

* * *

Christopher Cook, 18, of 12 Boyd Street, was sentenced to nine months definite and 12 months indeterminate on two counts of breaking, entering and theft and breaking and entering with intent.

The sentences were concurrent.

* * *

Court was told he had not left the store but was in the vicinity of a doorway.

When stopped he refused to go to The Bay security office and had to be dragged there by force, and while there he grabbed a report form from the security officer, crumpled it up and thrust a lighted cigarette into the paper, court was told.

Lunn argued that he was closer to the counter where he tried on the vest than he was to the door and that he had no intention of stealing the article.

He challenged the security officer's evidence that he was arrested some eight feet from the doorway.

"Me, I'm slow," he told St. Jorre. "At school people used to call me dozy." He said he often slipped into daydreams and wandered around dazed.

"There I was standing next to the counter when this guy grabbed me."

Lunn said he refused to accompany the security officer to the office.

"I said, 'Why should I? I mean, why should I? I'm a citizen. I've got my rights'."

The Bay official then "got a bunch of guys" and forced him to to go to the office, he said. Lunn said one of them hurt him by twisting his arm.

In cross-examination, prosecutor Cory Stolte asked Lunn if he had a record for theft.

"Once when I was 16 I got picked up in Yorkville for stealing a piece of cheese worth 38 cents. I was barefoot and hungry," he said.

He also said he stole some merchandise while in Ottawa.

"That was two records. I was hung up on music at the time. I'm not hung up on music now."

St. Jorre remanded Lunn for preparation of a pre-sentence report after Stolte told court he had a letter from a doctor which said little would be accomplished by a jail sentence.

"He was logical in many ways," St. Jorre observed, but said Lunn presented himself in a "very peculiar, bizarre, odd way."

Priests Sue Prison

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Daniel and Phillip Berrigan, the brother priests imprisoned for destroying United States draft records, have filed suit against the federal prison in Danbury, Conn., for allegedly denying them the right to practise their religion.

A spokesman for the Roman Catholic priests said the suit grew out of rejection by prison officials of requests that the priests be allowed to deliver sermons in person or on tape to various congregations outside the prison

Both were convicted with others of the burning of draft records in Catonsville, Md., in May, 1968. Father Phillip Berrigan also was convicted of helping destroy draft files in Baltimore.

Would God condemn man to eternal hell?

Perhaps you've asked the question. Is God vengeful? Does He commit man to everlasting hell? If so, how can He then be loving?

In fact, the Bible clearly indicates that there is no eternally burning hell. True, sinners will perish, but there will be no endless punishing.

The Bible tells us that when Christ returns to earth, He will raise the righteous dead to life. Those living, who have claimed Him as their Lord, will be caught up with them to dwell with Him in heaven.

After 1,000 years, Christ and the saved will return to earth with the Holy City. At this time the wicked dead will be raised to life. Led by Satan, they will encircle the Holy City in an attempt to take it. But fire will fall from heaven and destroy them. THIS IS HELL-FIRE!

Once it has consumed the wicked, the fire dies. Hell is over and the earth will be cleansed from sin. (Check the Bible, Malachi 4:1-3; Jude 6 & 7; Revelation 20:7-9; 21:8.)

Fantastic? Yes, but real. This is the Bible account of what will occur. Perhaps you've wondered what the Bible has to say on this and other related topics. A special brochure with more detailed information is yours for the asking. Just complete the coupon below. No one will call on you.

For the Press, a Time to Be Disciplined, Humble

By RICHARD HARWOOD

WASHINGTON — Walter Lippmann told a story many years ago about an island in the ocean where, in 1914, a few Englishmen, Frenchmen and Germans lived as friends. There were no telephones or radios to the mainland, only a mail boat that arrived every 60 days.

In September of that year, the islanders gathered at the dock to welcome the boat, to get the latest news. It was just then they learned that for six weeks, the French and British had been at war with the Germans and that for six weeks they should have been enemies rather than friends.

The "news" does that to us all the time. It changes the pictures of the world, the pictures of the other people, the pictures of ourselves, that we carry around in our heads.

Before the age of instant mass communication, these pictures came primarily from the environment itself; from the family, the tribe, the village, the land. Now, in large degree, they are acquired second-hand from what Lippmann called the "pseudo-environment" of the media.

Pseudo-reality of News

We are conditioned to choose enemies or friends, to decide whether the world is round or flat, by newspapers that arrive at dusk or breakfast time. We experience wars and riots vicariously through an electronic box in the living room. And often the pseudo-reality of this "news" becomes in our minds reality itself, affecting the way we live and think and act.

That is why Lippmann concluded that "the power (of the media) to determine each day what shall seem important and what shall be neglected is a power unlike any that has been exercised since the Pope lost his hold on the secular mind."

The question of how and by whom this power is to be exercised is an inflamed issue in the United States today and not only in the minds of Vice-President Agnew and other critics of the "eastern liberal press."

The disenchantment with the media is a mass phenomenon, as George Gallup noted some months ago. "Never in my time," he said, "has journalism of all types — book publishing, television, radio, newspapers, magazines, movies —been held in such low esteem."

One of the central reasons for this disaffection is the realization in the country that the power of which Lippmann spoke — the power to shape the "psuedo environment" and the mass mind — has fallen into the hands of a very small number of men and women.

Fewer than 1,500 companies own all the daily newspapers in the United States; three companies own the great television and radio networks. Fewer than 150,000 people — barely one-tenth of one per cent of the labor force — report and edit the "news" and even that small number exaggerates the distribution of power among the media.

The Washington Post is a case in point. Its 308 reporters, editors, artists and photographers decide for a half-million readers that shall seem important and what shall be neglected each day and beyond that, through a news service, they sell to more than 300 other newspapers the product of those decisions.

Thus, the influence of these 308 people extends, in theory at least, into millions of American homes. The news services run by the New York Times, the Associated Press, United Press International and Reuter have the same disproportionate impact. So do the radio and television networks.

The result of all this is oligopoly — the concentration in the hands of a few people of both the ownership of the media and control of what is judged to be news. They are the new popes in their influence on the secular mind in America and one of the issues confronting them now, as in the past, is what doctrine, if any, they should propagate.

Pro-capital, Anti-labor

The media have gone through three of these doctrinal controversies since World War II. The first centered on the "one-party press" issue. The charge was that media owners, with rare exceptions, were Republican in their politics, pro-capital and anti-labor in their economies, and that they shaped and twisted the news accordingly.

This charge was debated all through the 1940s and 1950s and produced a resolution of sorts — an unwritten ethic that the news should be "objective," that parties to a controversy were entitled to "equal time."

A second doctrinal dispute arose in the 1950s and continues to the present time. It involved the issue of "news management" by government and government officials. It was precipitated by the shameful performance of the media in dealing with the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy's crusade against "Communists in government" and the subsequent hysteria he created.

The media were forced by this experience to re-examine the "objectivity" ethic. Did it require them to report, uncritically, all "official" claims and charges? Or were the media obliged to become truth-seekers rather than mere recording machines? This soul-searching produced another unwritten ethic — that the news should reflect "reality" rather than official versions of reality.

Reporting "in depth" or "investigative reporting" became the journalistic ideal. Thus, if the Pentagon told you there was "light at the end of the tunnel" in Vietnam you were obliged to crawl down the tunnel to find out for yourself.

The newest doctrinal issue is just beginning to emerge. It involves "advocacy journalism" and news manipulation by the anti-establishment elements of the new culture in America. Spiro Agnew has harped on this issue for months but he did not invent it.

It arose in the streets of Chicago in 1968 during the Democratic national convention when millions of television viewers reached the judgment that the networks had abandoned "objectivity," had abandoned "in-depth reporting," and taken sides with the demonstrators against the police.

The central question is whether the 100,000 or 150,000 people in America who produce the "news" every day are functioning in 1970 as disinterested "professionals" or whether they are shaping the news to conform to their own "ideologies," passions and private visions of reality.

Hard to Accept Homilies

Put down in print that way, the question seems silly and the answer seems self-evident. The possession of a press card does not immunize people from prejudice and emotion, it does not turn them into bloodless computers, it does not guarantee that the pictures of the world they carry around in their heads are necessarily the "correct" pictures or that the "pseudo-environment" they create each day is a genuine mirror of reality.

Those are simple and unexceptional homilies. But it is hard for the media in these times to accept them or to accept the discipline and humility they imply.

There are two reasons for that. The first is that the producers of news in America — including the 308 people who produce it for the Post — have been going through the same political and cultural traumas that have shaken our society in the past 10 years.

The second reason for the decline of discipline and humility in the media has been success. Out of the workings of capitalism or social Darwinism or whatever, only the strongest elements in the news industry have survived the economic shakeouts of the past 25 years. What is left is a rich, solidly based news oligopoly with billions in revenues and no new competitors in sight.

In this situation, it was almost inevitable that the networks, the great national newspapers and the new media conglomerates should be vulnerable to the sins Sen. William Fulbright attributed to the government of the United States in the 1960s — the arrogance of power, the illusion of omniscience.

The same thing is happening in the universities, in the government, in the industrial corporations, in large institutions of every kind. Old dogmas and rules and rituals are being challenged. There are more questions than answers, more doubts than certitudes.

Our of all this and out of public dissatisfaction with institutional performance, a new period of introspection, self-analysis and perhaps even candor seems to have begun in the news industry.

At the Post and in media shops all over the country the questions that ultimately got asked in the 1940s, the 1950s and the 1960s are being asked again: "What are we doing here? Why are we doing it?"

They are the simplest questions and the hardest to answer. They can also be the beginning of the self-discipline and humility that society can properly demand of privileged institutions in the 20th century.

The Real Campus Revolutionary Is the Academic Dropout Taking Art

The Nation

"I'm taking a course in sculpture," Bill volunteers when we meet on College Walk. By the end of sophomore year, he's become an adept student and a varsity football wheelhorse. You'd think he'd consolidate those gains for a while. But now he has a new look — a bit insurgent, if not subversive. On his head he sports a tam-o'-shanter, at his throat a loud silk scarf.

Why sculpture? "Because it helps me cope. It gets me away from all those abstractions." Bill gestures impatiently toward a classroom building.

In an academic climate polluted with too many words, he now works with things; from lecture halls quarantined against deep feeling he escapes into a studio pervaded with it.

•

The number of such revolutionaries is growing, and they are a greater threat to the academic establishment than are those who seize buildings and rough up administrators. Quietly turning from the traditional subjects to take courses in sculpture, painting, dance, film, drama, music and writing they are changing our colleges and universities at their core — the curriculum.

"Man must learn to live esthetically or cease to be man — cease to be, that is, an animal who responds meaningfully to challenge. Everyone must some day become an artist — or a saint."

This pronouncement came last year from Eric Larrabee, provost of the State University of Buffalo. Art, he predicted, will soon replace science at the centre of higher education.

•

Past experience supports him: grand academic reforms occur after crises like today's, when events are heady, students wrought up, and faculty extra monkish.

The curriculum has undergone three revolutions since the universities were created 1,000 years ago.

The first was from the simple grammatical studies of the Dark Ages to the theology and argument of Mediaeval Scholasticism ("Can angels converse with men?"); the second, in the Renaissance, to that revival of ancient authors and worship of words called classicism ("How did Cicero say it?"); and the reign of analysis ("Do the data fit the hypothesis?").

At each overthrow, a radical new academic subject transformed the others. In the Middle Ages, it was logic; in the Rennaissance, ancient literature; in the 19th century, science.

By now not only has that latest intruder overrun the colleges but the social studies and humanities have even copied it. Their scholars try to be objective and cool; they try to explain things by counting them, if possible, or at least by analysing them.

But too much emphasis on counting and analysis kills. Already it has paralysed the system of higher education.

To revive it, another revolution is now brewing. Faculty and students will turn from the analysis of culture to the making of it. Scientism will give way to creativity. The new radicalizing subject will be art.

Though young people are eager to learn how to relate the liberal arts one to another, faculties today offer knowledge in chunks — philosophy, anthropology, astronomy, economics. They require students to take each chunk in almost complete isolation from any other chunk.

Furthermore, science has reached into all other fields and tempted scholars to over-indulge in analysis.

For example, during the last two or three decades, English faculties have lionized Henry James. The complicated life and work of this fastidious expatriate can be elegantly analysed — on how many levels do James' symbols operate? Does psychology or melodrama predominate in his novels? Was his rejection of his country really a rejection of his father? Can the stylistic complexity of his later work be attributed to his dictating it? By such unromantic inquiry humanists would emulate chemists.

"Why withdraw from English 3306?" I asked a student.

"I see Bernard Shaw's plays on the reading list," he replied, "and I want to enjoy them."

"But why withdraw?"

"Oh, come on," he reproached me, "with mid-terms, finals and a term paper? And a mark?"

Like him, too many students turn off. They will turn on again when another subject liberates higher education. The only one now ready to do so is art.

Working with things, not words

HE WON'T TELL

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM

The sad fact of the Trudeau government, charged with saving Quebec from itself, is that it is not telling us the truth.

Anything less than the whole truth is not the truth.

We hear, day upon day, hedging hints from minister upon minister that "if we only knew the truth" we would understand.

As each day passes, the suspicion grows — and is supported by talkative cabinet ministers — that the War Measures Act was invoked for political reasons rather than fears of an insurrection.

We are told to trust the government. But the government, supported by an overwhelming majority of Canadians who have backed Ottawa's action on faith, does not trust us enough to spell out the unpleasant truth.

The government has already achieved the unlikely feat of making a minor hero out of Tommy Douglas, who recently had faded into obscurity but has now managed a final fleeting snatch of glory by standing up for those who are rightly suspicious of any "unanimous" showing of strength.

Now the Ottawa obstinance to trust those of us who have trusted it has thrust into the spotlight another unlikely hero who sums up the uneasy feelings of many of us.

He is Dalton Camp. Listen: "While the country has been driven to a condition of crisis more grave than any in our history, while opinion has been deliberately and perhaps eternally polarized, we are not being told the truth — we are not being told the truth about the government's motives, nor the truth about the dangers we are alleged to confront and are being confronted by.

"The media — particularly television — has been used to inflame opinion, but not to enlighten it — to harden prejudice and not to temper judgment — to the end that those within our parliamentary system who are obliged to doubt are condemned for their lack of patriotism and those whose intuitive judgment is to resist being stampeded by emotion and propaganda have been labelled as "bleeding hearts."

Story of Deprivation

By ART STOTT

When we were depriving our young children of the good things of life in a heartless campaign to warp the innocent, trusting natures with which they were born, we encountered the speedboat issue.

Life styles, as they call them now, had altered at Shawnigan. The small rowboat I had built with much labor and little skill was almost as obsolete as the ancient Briton's coracle. Everybody who was anybody whipped over the lake in a Peterborough with a highly-powered outboard — or even one of the new fibreglas jobs, slicker and faster.

The twins, who even as little tads had developed faith in the value of a one-two-punch argument with parents, approached me with a carefully prepared case.

"Daddy," they asked, "can we have a speedboat?" Then they got ready to make their pitch.

* * *

"Certainly," I said.

"Good," they shouted in unison, their faces lighting up. "When?"

"Whenever you can buy one," I replied.

"Swell," they said. "Can we pick it out?"

"Of course," I told them. Then came the blow. "It'll be your money. I can't afford a speedboat."

That didn't end the discussion, but it established the position which hasn't varied since. My children never learned to operate a speedboat, never became proficient water skiers. They remained in the submerged tenth and the obsolete old rowboat is still performing its obsolete old service.

The small children of that day have grown up and have small children of their own. Strange as it seems, neither has found it essential to buy a speedboat of his or her own. Crushed, I guess, by the unfeeling treatment of their father during their impressionable years of childhood.

I recall the incident as a sort of warning to authorities who seem to be getting tougher with the young generation. They should realize what irreparable psychic harm they can do to those juveniles whom Mayor Tom Campbell of Vancouver has called "the retired young who won't pay their own way." One of the twins has been so arrested in his natural development that he now has to settle for a job teaching in a university. The other has been forced to the indignity of working as a registered nurse. That's the price of deprivation.

Oh sure. They send me greetings or put through long-distance telephone calls on festive occasions, make gifts to me, carry on the charade of family affection. Of course they hate me. Who wouldn't, having been denied, at about age 12, the normal enjoyment inherent in full use of their own speedboat?

In the quiet watches of the night, as I lay sleepless for all of 10 seconds after my head has touched the pillow, I worry about the corroding effects my miserliness has had upon my children. In the broader field, I worry about the results that will show up in later life among other youngsters whose free ride is being threatened by proposals from the Union of B.C. Municipalities to tighten up on welfare for the non-paying tourists of tender years.

* * *

Why shouldn't we make this province and this community a haven for these youngsters who assert their independence from their own homes — breaking a few parental hearts in the process — and are willing to stay with us as guests?

Obviously their life style is better than ours. We've been simple-minded enough to work for what we wanted, to earn our keep and, hopefully, to lay aside a buck or two for retirement above the subsistence level.

By what right do we withhold some of our earnings from these young people who, with infinitely superior knowledge, understand that working for a living isn't everything in life? Why shouldn't we sacrifice some of our personal funds — above those we give to the organizations we support — to make it possible for the young to rise above the concerns of money-grubbing just to live? Why should we feel put-upon if they've found a higher form of existence and merely want us to pay for it?

* * *

Why shouldn't we indulge their whim to get away from home? After all, it helps to free their own parents of responsibility for keeping them when the youngsters aren't earning.

It's only a deformity of sprit that suggests to me a number of answers to those questions. They're entitled to their life style, and nothing but the blindness of advancing years lets me think that they shouldn't practice it at my expense.

PIPES SELECTED AS TOP LINEMAN

REGINA (CP) — Defensive tackle Greg Pipes of Edmonton Eskimos today was named top lineman in the Western Football Conference for 1970 and offensive end John Senst of Winnipeg Blue Bombers was named Canadian rookie of the year in the WFC.

Pipes, first-time winner of the Becket-DeMarco Trophy, topped second-place Jack Abendschan, the place-kicking offensive guard for Saskatchewan Roughriders. Third place went to linebacker Wayne Harris of Calgary Stampeders.

Pipes, 22, is in his third year with Eskimos. Harris won the trophy, awarded by special judges in the five WFC cities, in 1966. The honors in 1969 and 1968 went to defensive tackle Ed McQuarters of Saskatchewan.

* * *

Senst, a product of Simon Fraser University, drew the most votes from sports writers for the rookie award. Eskimos' Jim Henshall, a defensive half, and punter Fred Dunn finished second and third, respectively, in polling for the Dr. Beattie Martin Trophy.

The Becket-DeMarco Trophy is named after Mel Becket and Mario DeMarco, two Saskatchewan Roughriders who were killed in a 1956 air crash, while the Dr. Beattie Martin Trophy is named after a former president of Roughriders.

Jauch Hopes Esks Can Avoid Errors And Extend Skein

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos have never lost a Western Football Conference semi-final game at home and coach Ray Jauch says they can keep the string going Sunday by avoiding mistakes.

"It's who's going to make the mistakes and who will do the things that will hurt" that will decide the outcome of the sudden-death clash with Calgary Stampeders in Clarke Stadium.

With temperatures expected to be in the 20s, the field would be frozen to some degree.

The first WFC playoff game in Edmonton since 1961, the last time the Eskimos finished the regular season in second place, will start at 4 p.m. EST and will be televised on the CTV national network.

TRULL CAN'T LOSE

Quarterback Don Trull, Edmonton's master of the short pass, is bound to do better than he did in his last playoff game—for Houston Oilers of the American Football League in 1969.

The Oilers were clobbered by Oakland Raiders. Trull called one play in the game and lost his job.

"I think Wally Lemm (the coach) would have probably kept me, but what could he do when Adams (Houston owner Bud Adams) told him to get rid of all the quarterbacks."

Trull isn't worried about the cold Sunday.

"I don't really mind it. Twenty or 30 degrees up here doesn't seem as cold because it's drier. Cold doesn't seem to bother my throwing. It's a wet ball that isn't good."

The big thing against Calgary, he said, "is not so much how many points we can score but not to give any away."

STAMPEDERS FAVORED

The bookmakers have made Calgary three-point favorites to become the first third-place team to capture the WFC semi-final since 1963, when Saskatchewan Roughriders turned the trick. The playoff was a two-game, total-points affair then, but was switched to a sudden-death game in 1965.

The Eskimos have played six semi-final games at home, three against Calgary, and won most of them easily. But only one was a sudden-death encounter, a 4-1 verdict over Winnipeg Blue Bombers in 1951.

Busy Man at Sandown Once 'Killed' in Spill

By BILL WALKER

There's a "dead man" holding down two jobs at Sandown Park.

G. S. "Scotty" Hughes was killed in a race track spill 43 years ago in Chicago.

The same Scotty Hughes today is a patrol judge and paddock steward at the B.C. Jockey Club thoroughbred race meeting at Sandown which will conclude on Wednesday.

If there appears to be some sort of discrepancy, it is understandable. For in the 1927 season, Scotty Hughes was a jockey, good enough to be under contract to J. W. Marchbank, who later was to build the Tanforan Race Track, and was riding at Washington Park in Chicago.

Actually his career had begun a few years earlier, in Vancouver, when he had joined the McLennan stable.

Then he went to work for a U.S. owner Fred Nancoulas and broke his maiden at the old Tijuana Track in the 1926-27 winter season on a horse called Runheight.

Scotty had enjoyed a good year and, still sporting his "bug" had been leading rider at Omaha and Salt Lake City.

It was then that his contract was sold to Marchbank.

Six horses went down, three were killed and Scotty's horse was almost sliced in half as it hit the railing.

After the doctors had arrived, Scotty was pronounced dead, and he was put in the ambulance, with the others.

On the way to the hospital, something happened, and Scotty was suddenly alive again.

Banner Headline Reported 'Death'

He didn't know it himself for two or three days, because he was unconscious. But in Vancouer, his home town, they had mourned his passing.

The Vancouer Morning Star came out with a banner headline on the spill. "There was a big story saying what a good guy I was," says Scotty today of the epitaph.

"I was in hospital for a few weeks and then released," he recalls. "But one of the boys never rode again. A fellow named Walters was riding his first race. He broke his back.

LEADING RIDER

Scotty then came back to Canada, and went to work for C. C. "Charlie" Emmert. In the 1928 season he was leading rider in the province and won the Brighouse and Lansdowne derbies on a horse called Forbeck.

He continued to ride mostly on B.C. tracks, Colwood, Willows, Lansdowne and Brighouse, and was always near the top of the standings until 1936.

During that time, he also worked and rode horses for former Lieutenant Governor Eric Hamber, and Austin Taylor. One of the horses he galloped for trainer Wally Dunn was Mafosta, one of B.C.'s finest.

Of course, it was different in those days, Scotty will admit, if pressed.

"They didn't have patrol judges, and your were liable to have your saddlecloth grabbed, or get caught in a leglock. But now now."

Later he went to work as a valet, in a partnership with Commission steward Billie Bell. "We usually had about 10 riders, and often topped the meetings", he said.

Scotty was appointed a patrol judge in 1950 and paddock judge in 1961. As such he is required to check every horse for equipment and identification before each and every race. "No, we haven't had any ringers," he said.

ULRICH NABS ANOTHER

Meanwhile, on the track Friday an upset was in the making, and thievin' Charlie Ulrich had stolen another.

It was in the featured seventh race at one mile, and Ulrich was up on Gold Crazy, a three-year-old bay gelding which had broken his maiden here on Oct. 19.

Well, Ulrich took his mount to the front, as it figured, and he kept him there, which didn't, because Gold Crazy had never gone that far before.

Beau Bunnie got his nose in front about 100 yards from home, as a favorite should, but Ulrich and Gold Crazy were equal to the test, and won in a photo. Gold Crazy paid $31.90.

Arnold won four, Mr. Hornet ($7.30), in the first, Hokay's Wonder ($8.30) in the third; Pixaway ($5.80) in the fifth, and Tawasentha ($9.30) in the sixth.

The crowd was 1,492 and the play $77,898. Racing resumes Monday. Handicap is on page 2.

FORT SMITH FANS . . . . . . WILL JOIN BAND

Jake Couldn't Say No

TORONTO (CP) — A determined group of Northwest Territories football fans has found a way to get in to see the Grey Cup game Nov. 28 without tickets.

Jake Gaudaur, Canadian Football League commissioner, said Friday he failed to find tickets for the game at the Canadian National Exhibition Stadium so he gave the group permission to sit on the field with the band.

"Okay, come on—but can you give me any idea of how boiled your guys are likely to be by game time?"

Gaudaur said he asked about the fans' probable state of sobriety because of the field-level position they would occupy.

"It shoots our field security full of holes, maybe. That's why I had to ask about behavior. But I just couldn't listen to a man talk about the CFL and the Grey Cup and Canada the way he did, and say no."

Karin phoned Gaudaur Oct. 19 and asked to buy 50 tickets but found all had been sold. He then wrote Gaudaur a letter pointing out that the Fort Smith fans couldn't possibly hold season tickets that would give them first chance at Grey Cup passes. But they were Canadian football fans regardless and wanted a chance to see the Grey Cup.

Karin enclosed a certified cheque for $750, said he had booked a plane to bring the group to Toronto and told Gaudaur they couldn't take no for an answer.

After the commissioner failed to find anyone who would part with their tickets, he agreed to the field seating.

AUSSIES WIN STORMY FINAL OVER BRITAIN

LEEDS, England (AP) — Australia defeated Britain 12-7 in a stormy final Saturday to win the Rugby League World Cup. The Australians led 5-4 at half-time.

Two players, Billy Smith of Australia and Sid Hymes of Britain, were sent off the field in the last minute for fighting at the final whistle. Players of both sides swung fists and had to be separated by police and officials.

Australia and Britain reached the final by finishing in the top places of a four-team pool. France and New Zealand also competed.

Harry Franklin Takes Hoop Post

VANCOUVER (CP) — Harry J. Franklin, 48, of Vancouver was appointed Friday to the newly-created paid position of executive director of the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association.

Franklin, a former University of British Columbia basketball star and currently executive secretary of the CABA, will move to Ottawa to assume his full-time CABA duties Jan. 1.

Streaking Cents Take Over First

Pennock Back As Cats Face Leaders Tonight

The high-riding Coast Division clubs will reach a cross road tonight when they meet in Memorial Arena, starting at 8:30 p.m.

For the moment, the Ron Matthews coached Centennials have the upper hand. They earned it, and the Coast lead, by defeating Chilliwack Bruins 8-4 Friday. That moved Vancouver into first, one point ahead of the Cats.

DYCK RETURNS

Bolstered by the return of centre Alex Dyck, the Centennials spotted Chilliwack a 3-0 lead in the first eight minutes of play, then bounced back strongly.

It was Dyck, rejoining the Vancouver team this week after a contract dispute, who touched off Centennials' comeback. He scored Vancouver's first goal and set up Grant Casper for the second as teams packed all of the game's goals in the first two, loosely-played periods.

Despite the loss, Chilliwack turned in one of its better efforts of the season, outshooting Vancouver 46-43.

BRONCOS ON MOVE

In the only other game played Friday, Penticton Broncos took over the Okanagan Division lead by piling up an 11-1 victory over Kelowna Backaroos.

Harry Turk, a converted defenceman who had held the league scoring lead until being shut out in an earlier 11-1 win over Chilliwack, came back to pace Penticton with three goals.

Brain Matlock scored the lone Kelowna goal mid-way through the third period against back-up Bronco goalie Ian Faraday, who had replace Dave McClelland in the second. McClelland, before being relieved, had rolled up 131 minutes of consecutive shutout goalkeeping.

Cougars, who launched their win streak by defeating Vancouver 4-2 last month, will be bolstered by the return of defenceman Dale Pennock. The lanky Cougar "policeman" has missed Victoria's last two games because of a broken bone in his right hand.

Distance Runners Slowing Down In Record Chase

By GEOFFREY MILLER

LONDON (AP) — Are long distance runners getting near their limit?

A new edition of progressive world record lists, published in London by the International Amateur Athletic Federation (IAAF), shows that the momentum of record-breaking events of 800 metres and over is slowing down.

The book lists all world records set in track and field this century.

While pole vaulters soar higher and higher, distance records are staying unchanged for longer periods than they used to. Here are some examples:

The 800-metre mark has been lowered only twice in the last 15 years. In the 1930s it was lowered six times.

Thirteen records for 1,500 metres were set between 1952 and 1960. But since Australia's Herb Elliott ran 3:35:6 in the Rome Olympics of 1960 only one man—Jim Ryun of the United States—has beaten it with 3:33.1.

The record for 2,000 metres has stuck for four years now at Michel Jazy's 4:56.2. When the Frenchman set that time in 1966 it was the fifth record in five years.

The 3,000-metre mark was cracked three times in 1965 but has not been lowered since. Kip Keino of Kenya still holds it with 7:39.6.

By contrast the book shows the pole-vault records. Two more world marks were set as the book was being printed—17-11 by Wolfgang Nordwig of East Germany last month and 18¼ by Chris Papanicolaou of Greece two weeks ago.

BROAD JUMPERS BETTER

Broad jumpers are leaping ahead too. Bob Beamon's fantastic 29-2½ at the Mexico Olympics of 1968, was the ninth new mark since 1960. That meant more new broad jump records in nine years than in the previous 60 years.

Ron Clarke of Australia, who retired from big time track and field this autumn, dominates the long distance records of recent years.

But Clarke bowed out without setting an over-all world record for world records.

He set 17 world marks in his career. Emil Zatopek of Czechoslovakia set 18 in the years after the Second World War and the legendary Paavo Nurmi of Finland set 19 back in the 1920's.

Surging Seals Clobber Leafs

By The Canadian Press

Ten days ago, California Golden Seals looked as if they were taking up permanent residence in the West Division cellar of the National Hockey League.

They were still there Friday night after crushing Toronto Maple Leafs 8-4 in the only scheduled game, but they gave the impression they have their eye on the division penthouse—or at least a walkup flat.

In their first nine games of the season, the Seals registered only two points, both coming on ties, while losing the rest.

The latest win gave California eight points, one less than Pittsburgh Penguins, two back of Minnesota North Stars and four behind fourth-place Los Angeles Kings.

LEAFS LEAD BUFFALO

Toronto's loss leaves the team with six points in the East Division, one ahead of last-place Buffalo. The Leafs have three wins and eight defeats in 11 games.

At Oakland, both teams scored twice in the first period, Garry Monahan and Guy Trottier for the Leafs, Carol Vadnais and Billy Hicke for the Seals.

Featherstone registered his second goal of the night early in the third period before Toronto attempted a rally on goals by Trottier, his second of the game, and Ron Ellis.

LEAFS IN VANCOUVER

In tonight's action, Toronto travels to Vancouver to meet the Canucks, Montreal Canadiens play host to the Sabres, New York is at Los Angeles, Boston Bruins visit Pittsburgh, Chicago Black Hawks are at Philadelphia against the Flyers and St. Louis Blues encounter the North Stars at Minnesota.

Punch Imlach, manager-coach of the Sabres, says he is counting on Larry Keenan and Jean-Guy Talbot, whom he obtained in a trade with St. Louis Blues, to play tonight in Montreal.

"I hope the two new guys are ready to play," Imlach said. "We need them."

The expansionist Sabres have lost their last six games and have won only two in 12 starts.

FLQ Kidnapper Caught

Sniper Wounds Soviet Soldier

BERLIN (AP) — A Russian guarding a Soviet monument in West Berlin was wounded early today by shots fired at him and a comrade, a British spokesman said.

The spokesman said two or three shots were fired about 1:15 a.m.

The soldier, wounded in the arm and left side, was taken by a British military ambulance to East Berlin, the spokesman said.

The incident occurred a few hours before Red Army units were to parade before the memorial in honor of the 53rd anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

The official East German news agency, in a brief dispatch that called the incident "an unheard-of provocation," said officials did not know who fired the shots.

SLOGANS PAINTED

"Prelude against Bolshevism" and "Destroy the Red corruption" were smeared in red and white paint in a park rest area several hundred yards from the monument. A painted arrow pointed in the direction of the memorial through the park woods. The paint appeared to be fresh.

Police said leaflets found in the park called for "resistance against selling out Germany." The leaflets were signed by the "European Liberation Front," police said.

Officials in the Soviet embassy in East Berlin lodged a "decisive protest with the British military administration in West Berlin and demanded the necessary measures for the immediate discovery and serious punishment of the criminals," the agency said.

The memorial to Russian soldiers in The Second World War is in the British sector just inside West Berlin, near the Brandenburg gate.

AMERICANS BOYCOTT SOVIET ANNIVERSARY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Protesting Russian detention of two United States generals in Soviet Armenia, Washington officials are boycotting this year's Soviet national anniversary celebrations, and the order is reported to have come from President Nixon.

The diplomatic snub means American ambassadors are staying away from the caviar-and-vodka parties given by the Soviets in many capitals to mark the 53rd anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution, though they may send lower-ranking U.S. diplomats if they choose.

Coupled with U.S. tit-for-tat expulsion of a Soviet news correspondent Friday, the snub marks a further deterioration of relations between the two powers.

Hospital Strikers To Let Nurses In

The International Union of Operating Engineers has instructed members striking two Victoria and nine Lower Mainland hospitals Monday not to interfere with anything directly affecting patients.

All service vehicles except fuel trucks will be permitted through the picket lines and hospital employees and nurses have been told the striking engineers will not impede their access to and from hospitals.

"They are to go in and do their jobs," Bob Berger, business manager of the International Union of Operating Engineers, said Friday. "All we've requested is that hospital employees perform their own work and don't do ours."

OPTIMISTIC

Berger expressed optimism that a settlement will be reached between the union and the British Columbia Hospitals Association in time to avert imposition of compulsory arbitration under Bill 33, as Labor Minister Peterson has threatened.

He said the hospitals have enough fuel on hand to run their powerhouses for about five days. The powerhouses provide steam for heat, laundry purposes, kitchens and sterilization.

Asked what the union would do if the strike continued long enough to exhaust fuel supplies, he replied:

"I'm anticipating that we will not be out that long, but a lot depends on other people in other places."

MONDAY MORNING

He said the powerhouses at the 11 hospitals will be turned over Monday morning to the chief engineers. They are management personnel.

APPEAL AT 62.3%

The United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal campaign finished November's first week $264,465 short of its goal of $701,314.

At noon Friday, the campaign had reached 62.3 per cent of its goal with total donations of $436,849.

Appeal officials are confident that returns from industrial, business, professional and other divisions will show large gains in the next two weeks.

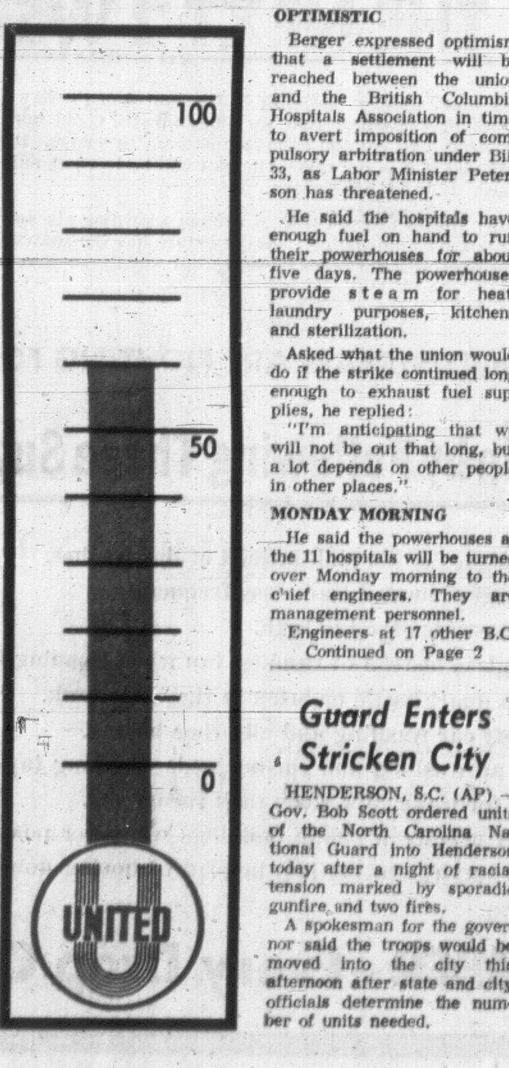
Several division chairmen told an Appeal staff meeting this week that many canvassers are still to report.

Community Chest information officer Mrs. Judy Nyquist said Friday that Appeal staff thank everyone who has donated to the campaign so far.

She said individuals who were missed during the successful residential canvass Oct. 19 who wish to donate should call the Community Chest.

A division chairman, she said, would give special treatment to these callers by personally picking up their donations.

She said the extension of the campaign into November is customary and does not yet indicate the drive is in danger of failing to reach its goal.



Guard Enters Stricken City

HENDERSON, S.C. (AP) — Gov. Bob Scott ordered units of the North Carolina National Guard into Henderson today after a night of racial tension marked by sporadic gunfire and two fires.

A spokesman for the governor said the troops would be moved into the city this afternoon after state and city officials determine the number of units needed.

'We Grabbed Laporte'

MONTREAL (CP) — Bernard Lortie, 19-year-old student arrested Friday, testified today at an inquest into the kidnap death of Pierre Laporte that he and three other men took part in the abduction of the Quebec labor minister Oct. 10.

Lortie said the other three were Francis Simard and brothers Paul Rose and Jacques Rose, all of whom have been named in warrants by police.

Lortie said the four had been thinking and talking about kidnapping someone and decided on Laporte.

The inquest adjourned briefly until the afternoon without Lortie having testified regarding the slaying except to say he was not at the scene on the fatal day.

He said the 49-year-old Quebec labor minister made a desperate attempt to escape the day before he was slain.

★ ★ ★

The witness said they picked up the labor minister from in front of his suburban home, using a 1967 model Chevrolet in which Laporte's body was eventually found Oct. 18.

He said Jacques Rose drove the car and the abductors were armed with M-1 automatic rifles. Three such rifles were introduced in evidence at the inquest.

On their way to the Laporte house in suburban St. Lambert they stopped at a restaurant and telephoned the Laporte residence. Jacques Rose phoned and Lortie said Jacques was told that Laporte had just stepped out.

"Paul got out with the M-1 and pushed Laporte into the car," Lortie said.

★ ★ ★

They then drove along Tiffin Road and Taschereau Boulevard to St. Hubert to a house on Armstrong Street. They drove into the garage.

They had previously opened a hole in the wall between the garage and the house.

"We watched Laporte in three shifts around the clock."

Lortie said he does not recall everything that happened. He said Laporte cut himself while trying to escape.

He broke the lower half of a window and had the upper part of his body through it when the abductors pounced on him and dragged him back.

Lortie said he made bandages by ripping a towel into strips.

Lortie mentioned that among other things Laporte lost about "half a quart" of blood from the cuts.

★ ★ ★

Photographs of Laporte's body showing these wounds were shown to newspaper men at the inquest. Clearly visible on Laporte's neck were the marks caused by the medallion chain used to strangle him.

The wounds on Laporte's wrist, thumb and chest were irregular gashes such as one might suffer in breaking a window.

Lortie, of medium height with wavy brown hair and dark brown eyes, seemed a person of intense disposition as he gave his evidence.

He identified clothing worn by Laporte at the time of the kidnapping.

He said that a Laporte letter was written by the late minister himself.

Before being sworn in he replied in the negative when asked by Prosecutor Jacques Durcros whether he wanted the services of a lawyer.

FAMILY OF JAMES CROSS LEAVES FOR EUROPE

MONTREAL (CP) — The wife and daughter of kidnapped British diplomat James Jasper Cross have left Montreal to visit family friends in Europe, the British government office here announced today.

"Mrs. Cross has decided to make a short visit to close friends of the family in Europe, and left Montreal yesterday (Friday) for this purpose accompanied by her daughter Susan, a brief statement said.

"She continues to await anxiously the results of all the efforts being made to find her husband, and will be kept in the closest touch with all developments.

"Mrs. Cross wishes it at the same time to be known how very grateful she is for all the letters and telegrams she has received, and which are greatly helping to sustain her during this period of waiting."

The photograph shows Cross, kidnapped five weeks ago by members of the Front de Liberation du Quebec, sitting in front of a small table, apparently playing a game of solitaire.

The letter makes no reference to Cross.

There is a crudely printed note on the back of the photograph, which immediately after receipt was wrapped in plastic to preserve any fingerprints.

The photograph is similar to one received Wednesday by the Montreal weekly tabloid Quebec-Presse.

They Came From Sooke and Found Ignorance

Yes, Said Victorians, It Was a Good Idea to Sell Queen Charlottes to U.S.

By PETER McNELLY

Dykes bet that most people on the street could not correctly answer simple questions on Canadian affairs.

Many of his students were skeptical—after all, this is an age of "instant communications." The class decided to prepare 11 questions and spend a day in Victoria interviewing people on the street.

●

They broke into eight groups. Armed with questionnaires, pencils and pluck, they walked up to passers-by, introduced themselves and fired away.

They interviewed nearly 340 people, asking:

Do you feel Canada is controlled too much by the United States?

Do you think Canada should keep control of the Arctic islands?

Do you think the federal government should move the capital from Ottawa to a central location?

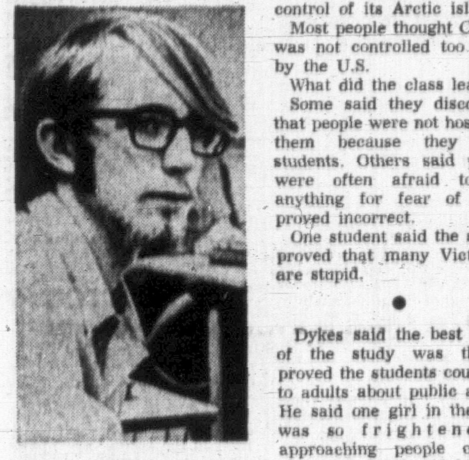
Could you tell the prime minister's name and party; the leader of the opposition; how many provinces exist; which province is Ottawa in?

Do you think Quebec's separation is the answer to Canada's present problem?

Who is your local member of Parliament?

Do you think the reduction and unification in the armed forces is a good thing?

They asked one false question—just to see how many people would sniff it out: Has the economy benefited from the sale of the Queen Charlottes to the U.S.?



WITH A PASSION to understand change, Pat Hull, Edward Milne Secondary student, listens intently before jumping into another lively class discussion.

On every question but two, 25 per cent said they had no opinion. Almost 40 people said they did not know the prime minister's name, and 74 people could not correctly say how many provinces the country has.

On the fake question about the Queen Charlottes, 210 people not only believed that Canada sold the islands to the U.S., but they also thought the sale had helped the economy.

●

The students found overwhelming rejection of separatism.

On armed forces reduction and unification, 135 people in favor, 111 against, 103 without an opinion.

Only 21 people thought Canada should not retain control of its Arctic islands.

Most people thought Canada was not controlled too much by the U.S.

What did the class learn?

Some said they discovered that people were not hostile to them because they were students. Others said people were often afraid to say anything for fear of being proved incorrect.

One student said the survey proved that many Victorians are stupid.

●

Dykes said the best aspect of the study was that it proved the students could talk to adults about public affairs. He said one girl in the class was so frightened of approaching people on the street, she had told him she didn't know if she could go through with it.

But, it turned out, she interviewed more than 50 people.

One group went to the Legislative Buildings. When they explained themselves to one cabinet minister's secretary, she immediately tried to find someone else to speak to them.

The students gave up asking questions of provincial employees, preferring to stop visitors who were more willing to talk.

The questionnaire has become part of a year-long program that Dykes' calls urban studies.

"He'd work 50 hours a day if he could," says principal D. R. Kerley.

Dykes does not lecture. He just gets a discussion going on issues. The kids seem to participate not to gun for approval but to speak their minds.

These Students Don't Merely Look at TV They Make Up Programs . . . And Good Ones

"The kids . . . the kids are just fantastic," says Dykes. "I don't have to tell them what to do very much any more. They're already at the point where they stop and say, 'that's not good, that has to go.' They're getting very critical, analyzing what they're doing."

Last year, the school spent $2,000 for a videotape television unit. Dykes' class is making several television shows this year. The projects are ambitious, but he is convinced the students can do them.

One project well under way is a documentary introduction to jazz. The students have been filming jam sessions at the Barbary Banjo.

The musicians, members of the New Vaudeville Band, are performing various styles of jazz before the camera. When the shooting is finished, part of the tapes will be edited on a mixing machine to produce a split screen effect.

Another project is a mixed media effort involving videotape, super 8 and 16 millimetre film, 35 millimetre stills and music. The class is drafting a program of interviews with civic and elected officials in the region. And it will look at recreational, housing, political, ecological and industrial problems.

●

The most ambitious project is production of a one-hour videotape film tentatively called the Urban Crisis. Shooting has been under way since September.

The class is inviting to the school an urban planner, a psychiatrist, a theatre professor, an ecologist, a lawyer, and a sociologist.

These people are being videotaped in discussion with students. The rest of the scheme involves taped man-in-the-street interviews and shots of local urban scenery.

Dykes estimates that 11 hours of footage will be videotaped. CHEK-TV was so impressed with the preliminary footage already shot, Dykes said, that they offered to let the students use their editing equipment.

The Urban Crisis project involves Edward Milne students from grades 8 through 12, though most are in grade 11.

●

Videotape equipment is simple to operate. Shooting can take place in ordinary light. Grade 11 student Pat Hull said that prior to this year's projects, the equipment had been used to record TV specials and school sporting events.

"That's good but no good enough. Not for 2,000 bucks," Hull said.

Dykes says social studies is meaningless unless the students can get involved in the community, and the community involved with the students. He says a teacher is like a guide with his finger on learning resources.

The questionnaire is a good example.

"No amount of statistical information could have had the same effect as going out and talking to those people," Dykes said.

Dykes' teaching methods are not traditional, but one of his students said they are not chaotic either.

"Last year in our science class, the teacher told us we were completely on our own, no exams, nothing. It was exciting at first, but I wound up wasting the whole year. Everybody else did too," said Marge Lee, contrasting the two courses.

●

Gregory was saying that one of the problems with schools is that they teach people to make decisions about static situations, while the world is changing faster than ever before.

Hull kept playing around with the tape, spinning it forward to another segment of the discussion.

Tenant Head 'Devastated' By Mayor's Reluctance

Brian Jewitt, president of the Capital Region Tenant's Association, said today he was "devastated" by Mayor Courtney Haddock's apparent unwillingness to set up a grievance board or to meet with Jewitt.

Haddock said Thursday he thought an acceptable means of settling landlord-tenant disputes could be set up under the aegis of the Better Business Bureau.

Jewitt said municipalities are, not obliged to create advisory boards, but would be shirking their responsibilities to tenants if they did not do so.

'MOST TIMID'

"For some reason, tenants are the most timid people in the world," he said.

"People elected to city hall have a responsibility to protect the tenants, but by refusing to set up a tribunal, they're really protecting the land speculators."

Jewitt said some aldermen, who must own land to run for office, are protecting their own interests to the detriment of tenants.

He estimated 67 per cent of the population of the city consists ot tenants.

'CRASS IMPUNITY'

"These landlords never read the Sermon on the Mount. The thing that irks me is that they operate with such crass impunity.

"They can, just by the stroke of a pen, say 'Your rent has been rsied by $25 or $35,' and there is nothing you can do about it."

If no advisory board exists, tenants and landlords must take their grievances to small debts court, Jewitt said, which means a wait of at least three months.

Municipalities were given power to create advisory boards under the Landlord and Tenant Act which was amended by the Legislature earlier this year. Under the amended act landlords must give three months' notice in writing before increasing rents.

The role of the advisory board, as outlined in the act is as follows:

"Advise landlords and tenants in tenancy matters.

"Receive complaints and seek to mediate disputes between landlords and tenants.

"Disseminate information for the purpose of educating and advising landlords and tenants concerning rental practices, rights and remedies.

"Receive and investigate complaints of conduct in contravention of legislation governing tenancies."

Victoria Labor Council supports the advisory board idea, and has urged Haddock to appoint a representative of tenants to sit on the board.

Jewitt said he set up the tenants' association last year after his rent was increased from $100 to $135 a month.

Q. What is the Portuguese population of Victoria?—E.E.R.

A. The 1961 national census indicates that there are very few Portuguese in Victoria at the time and the number was insufficient to justify a separate listing. The exact figure, however, could be obtained by writing the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, Census Division, Ottawa, Ont.

Q. Was Jimmy Braddock—heavyweight boxing champion of the world in the mid-1930s—a Canadian or an American?—W.G.L.

A. Braddock described as an Irishman from New Jersey was 29 years old when he won the title from Max Baer June 13, 1935. Braddock defeated Baer, the 10-to-1 favorite, before 30,000 spectators at Madison Square Gardens.

Penticton? It's Really Very Cornish

A non-status Indian wants to set the record straight as to origin of the name of Penticton in the Okanagan Valley.

H. A. (Butch) Smitherm, president of the British Columbia Non-Status Indians Association, says it isn't an Indian name as claimed by historians and the Penticton Chamber of Commerce.

The word pen is a distinctive Cornish name and ton stands for town, he says. The tict could either mean insects or running into debt.

"So the namer must have either been eaten alive by insects or taken for a ride money-wise when he first settled there," said Smitherm, whose grandfather was Cornish.

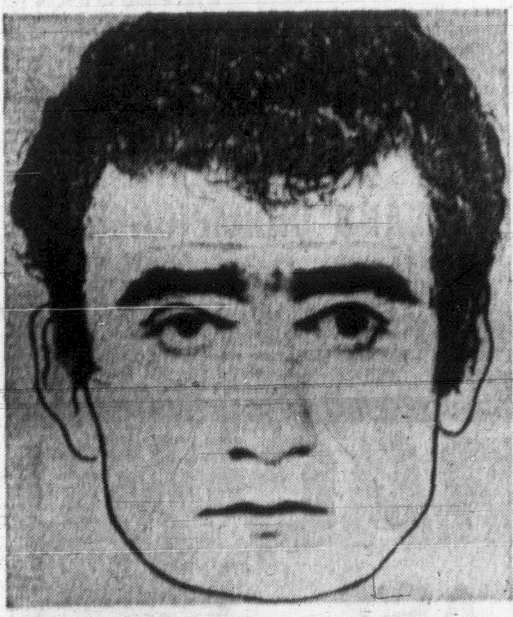
"We estimate there are about 50,000 non-status Indians in B.C. who get little or no help from senior governments," he said. "We need to organize ourselves so that we can enjoy the same rights and privileges of registered Indians."



Police Drawing of Gunman Suspect

POLICE SEEK AID TO FIND BANDIT

Saanich police are looking for anyone who can help them with information about a suspect in a credit union holdup Thursday.

Insp. John Post said today the man, paunchy, dark-haired, about 35, was spotted in the vicinity of the credit union office at 4512 West Saanich Road an hour before the robbery at 1 p.m.

"We believe he was looking over the office for about an hour," Post said. "If anyone saw anything even remotely suspicious in that period we'd like to hear from them."

The bandit fled with $5,000 in cash in a 1967 fastback Barracuda after demanding, at gunpoint, all the money in the office. Police are checking a number of leads in the case but admit little progress.

Cool-Aid Invites Opponents

Cool-Aid organizers announced today they are holding a special "open house" Sunday. They hope people who have been signing petitions opposing their expansion plans will come along.

"Ninety per cent of the people who have signed those petitions are on our side — if they only knew it" said Hugh Wade, one of the adults supporting the youth group.

"And they'll never know it if they don't come and look."

The open house will be at 953 Balmoral Street all day and coffee, tea and cookies will be served visitors. Cool-Aid operates its limited accommodation, meals and counselling program for youth out of this house.

The Cool-Aid program, which is financed by provincial government and municipal grants, has grown so rapidly the group has been eyeing a church for sale at Gladstone and Fernwood, to be developed as a youth resources centre.

Petitioners argue that use would depreciate property values and cause congestion.

Arthur Mayse . . .

ONE OF THESE DAYS, I am going to buck the tiger and put on my new birthday tie. It is a thing of beauty, young-leaf green and four times as wide as the tired old string that nooses my deck. But when I do take the plunge, one of the immutable laws that govern our lives will assert itself.

This law has so far escaped formal definition. The gist of it, though, is that someone down there hates perfection.

Careful though I intend to be, something will happen to that tie. If an unseen hand doesn't dabble its end in my coffee cup, a cigarette spark will be directed against it, or our loving dog will decide to nestle his drooly chops on it.

With that first marring accomplished, nothing more will happen to it. Law X will have fulfilled itself.

I could dreary you for hours with examples of this sort of thing. But a few will suffice.

You are, let us suppose, in the market for a new car. A day comes when you turn in your old brute, which for the past year has survived all the hazards of street and highway without adding so much as a paint-scratch to its scars.

You set out in the new car, with firm resolve to keep its condition immaculate. On the way home, you remember an errand that needs doing. So you put into a parking lot, choosing your berth with finicky care.

The cars on either side are well-positioned. There's no over-length vehicle opposite that might clip your rear while backing out. At least, there wasn't when you walked away.

And when you come back? A nick in the rear bumper, and a dimple in one plump and previously flawless door. The law that denies us perfection has been at work again.

There was a time when I used to blame poor planning, carelessness or downright stupidity for much that ganged agley. Like the year we decided to do a really good job of painting our front-porch concrete.

We wire-brushed and sanded. We washed down. We chose our paint, bought new brushes, and didn't hurry the job. As a final touch, I rigged a two-ladder barricade in front of the fresh-gleaming expanse, and mounted a large, boldly-lettered "Wet Paint" sign. Then we went off to clean our brushes and ourselves.

That done, we strolled around front to admire the perfect job. Only it was no longer perfect. The barricade had been scaled. A set of firmly planted footprints led to the front door, and away from it.

The anti-perfection law had employed a human agent to get its licks in.

It never fails, as witness what happened to a speaker-in-public who, up to a point, delivered the perfect speech.

He had a good voice. His jokes were brief, fresh, and to the point. His message was meaningful, his topic timely. He had everything going for him until, well along in his discourse, the reporters to whom he had supplied copies realized that something had gone amiss. The speaker had hopscotched from page seven to page 11.

His voice trailed off. He fumbled with his pages on the rostrum. They fell to the floor. The chairman darted to retrieve them. He and the speaker bumped heads.

What he should have done is overlooked the fact of pages misplaced and steamed on to his conclusion. Instead, he merely compounded the effects of Law X, which had struck again.

Moments meant to be dramatic set up a climate that courts an application of this law.

The curtain jams as the plaque is about to be unveiled. The shears that were to sunder the blue ribbon and open the bridge come unhinged.

And once, a ceremony planned to be perfect ended in a scene of low comedy before these delighted eyes.

In aid of some worthy cause, a keg was to be tossed into the Fraser River for a timed float to New Westminster. A minister of the Crown stood with other dignitaries on a little scaffold that projected over the turgid grey flow.

Upstream, the guys were ready with the keg. The minister was well along in his pre-launching spiel. Right then, for reasons that only the law I've cited can explain, the over-eager functionary behind him on the scaffold raised a revolver and blasted the launching signal.

In went the keg. So, almost did the minister, who snorted, leaped, and staggered against the scaffold rail. Hands grabbed his coat-tails and hauled him back, while behind on the shore, a band cut loose with 'Colonel Bogey'.

Perhaps there's a reason for Law X, which intrudes itself between man's hopes and their ideal fulfilment. The Venus de Milo with arms might be a touch too much, and perfection unblemished the least bit boring.
